Russian Civil Airplanes Primitive in Equipment For Passengers' Comfort

By Gerard Filion

"Here, in Siberia, said the airport manager in Irkutsk, we only fly in daylight for reasons of security."

Yes, from Irkutsk to Moscow, on our trip we flew strictly at night. This gives you, in a nutshell, a fair idea of the fantastic lack of punctuality in schedules of Soviet civil airlines. You're travelling in the dark. You never know in advance at what time you will board the airplane, what or when will be the next stop or at what time you will reach your ultimate destination.

In the West, we have become accustomed to the punctual schedules of civil airlines. Barring extremes of weather, the takeoff is at a given hour and you can expect to land and deplane at your destination within minutes of the appointed time. In Soviet Russia the opposite is true, if my experience in flying aboard red-starred airliners from Prague to Peking and back typifies civil air service.

All France posts a time of 38 hours flying from Paris to Tokyo. The regular Air France (Indochine) plane covers the distance from Paris to Indochine in less than 48 hours. Consider that it took us four days to fly from Moscow to Peking and six days from Peking back to Paris.

I am not suggesting that I am an aviation expert, although I have frequently travelled by air. I know, for having flown in them, the airplanes of Trans-Canada, Air France, Sabena and Pan American Airways. In comparison the Soviet planes are as outmoded as the horse-and-buggy beside a 1953 limousine.

On my trip I touched at Prague, Warsaw, Minsk, Moscow, Orenburg, Sverdlovsk, Omsk, Novosibirsk, Irkoutzk, Ulan, Bator, Sain-Shanda and Peking. During all these travels we were flown in nothing but two-motor planes, with a capacity of 13 or 14 passengers. Only once, at Irkoutsk, did I see a four-motor plane.

Airplane Austerity

The airplanes are strictly functional, being equipped only with the barest essentials. Nostalgic, two motors and seats. No concessions are made either to the comfort or the security of passengers. Not safety belt is provided for landings and takeoffs, no blankets are provided against the cold and the air conditioning is often defective. It's either too hot or too cold; nobody cares. No hot meals are served.

At mealtimes, if there happens to be a stewardess on board, passengers are served a cold lunch consisting of two sandwiches, one made with sausage, the other with cheese, dry biscuits and a bar of delicious chocolate and a few candies. The beverage is hot tea with cream in a glass. Half the time there is no stewardess on board. If there is, chances are she snoozes on the back seat with never a thought for the passengers. Between Moscow and Prague, each passenger had to carry his lunch tray back and forth, while the stewardess flirted with a member of the crew.

The Soviet pilots are likeable usually strapping individuals but unbelievable sloppy in their attire, unshaven, hair unkept and uncut. They wear leather jackets and unpressed trousers, with shirt collar open at the neck and cap on crooked. To anyone accustomed to the nattiness of our pilots, the contrast is rather distasteful.

Churchill Celebrates 78th Birthday With Quiet Party

LONDON (AP)—Winston Churchill was 78 years old Sunday and he celebrated at a quiet family party with cakes and ale.

The prime minister spent most of the day in the slippers and lounging robe at 10 Downing Street.

For the vigorous he'd afflictionately called—it was a day of complete relaxation and a far cry from other birthdays, even those of turbulent career.

Almost fleetingly have remembered to himself of some of those other birthdays—the 21st, 21st in the trenches of rebellion, his 25th as a war prisoner of the Boers, his 41st in the battlefields of France, his 47th at an Admiralty desk directing the sea war against the Germans in the Second World War, his 69th at Tehran being toasted by Marshal Stalin as "my fighting friend."

A crowd that grew to more than 100 waited for hours in bitter cold outside 10 Downing Street. They got a chance to serenade Churchill when he left with his wife for a private luncheon with friends. He responded graciously with his V-for-victory symbol.

The Churchills returned to Downing Street for tea and a dinner party and traditional surprise cake. This year the cake was shaped like the prime minister's favorite brown square hat. It was plain fruit cake with cherries.

WANTED "REAL MEAT"

MILDENHALL, (AP)—A British hotel operator who said he needs "real meat" has asked that without a government permit so his U.S. Air Force customers can get a "good steak" first. He fined £5 Friday. Kenneth Warren said he could get his illegal purchase because he served a lot of Americans and "because I'm a bit of a bloke." He pleaded for some real meat and saying they were tired of fish and poultry."

Moving Furniture in 54 Rooms Is Enviable Prospect for Mamie

By RUTH COWAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs Dwight D. Eisenhower, like any woman intending to move into a new place today, is looking to look over the place where she and her husband will live after Jan. 20.

The President-elect and Mrs. Eisenhower will have a private lease on the 54-room mansion at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue known as the White House. They will be given them last Nov. 4 by American voters.

It is subject to one four-year term renewal.

The White House is a multi-million dollar residence. Twenty-five years ago the District of Columbia's tax assessor appraised the house and grounds at $22,000,000. Just last March repairs and redecoration cost $3,100,000.

The house now is occupied by a couple from Independence, Mo., the President and Mrs. Harry Truman. Their daughter, Margaret, who is a professional singer and has her own apartment in New York, frequently comes down for the week-end. Mrs. Truman's 90-year-old mother, Mrs. David W. Wallace, lives with them.

Mrs. Dwight David Eisenhower was a guest at several official functions at the White House when the general was Army Chief of Staff under former President Truman's decision to dismiss all but a few personal representatives of the Commission for Higher Tariffs.

American farm prices, he noted, are down about three per cent this year, and are still still farther with high farm production and a slackening in the world demand expected in 1953.

This may have some impact on Canadian farm prices.

Eight Convicts Subdue Guards At Knifepoint

Slide Down Wall On Rope of Sheets

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Eight convicts, armed as "normal and dangerous," used razor-sharp knives to overpower four guards and a deputy warden at Western State penitentiary and escaped by sliding down a 70-foot wall on a long rope made of sheets and towels.

A ninth convict also got "outside" on Sunday's break but his freedom was only 30 minutes long. He surrendered meekly in front of the prison gates. A 10th was caught on the roof before he could flee.

Police of all nearby states were put on the alert in the manhunt for the eight convicts who apparently executed a carefully-planned break.

In the brief fracas before they could escape, the wall two prison guard were wounded slightly.

It was the second major jailbreak from a Pennsylvania prison in two months involving men described as "dangerous."

Three young bankrobbers broke out of the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg Sept. 10. They left a trail of car thefts, bank robberies, kidnappings and gun battles before police trapped them nearly two weeks later in Salt Lake City. Two of the convicts were killed in a gun battle. A detective also died.

Of the eight Western State penitentiary prisoners made their getaway on an undetermined route from a steel company employee standing guard near a coal pile.

The guard was just ran away.

As the men marched back to a cellblock after breakfast, they seized the four guards and the deputy warden, locking them in the cells.

Piling boxes on a table, the convicts got an ambulance through a corrugated iron ceiling, using an electric plaster saw from the prison machine shop. Then they pulled themselves into the loft, pushed slates from the roof and climbed out.

Train Blind 'Hello Girls'

BUSSUM, The Netherlands (Reuters)—Girl telephone operators are being trained at Bussum for training blind operators has been placed in the Institute for the Blind here. The exchange sounds normal. The voices of the second hello girls, but the blind operators can recognize which connection is requested.

Grieving Widow Dies in Grave Beside Husband

BARKINGSIDE, England (AP)—Mrs. Anne Hastings, 66, often went to the cemetery to sit beside the grave of her husband, who died two years ago. She was missing four days. Then her body was found in the dead — in the open grave near her husband. She apparently had pushed a plank aside, climbed in and pulled the plank back over her as she waited for the end.

Russian Bombers Could Get To American Targets Through Broad Gaps in Northern Arc

By ELTON C. FAY.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Broad gaps appear in the outer arc of the defence system along the North American continent, over which enemy bombers from Russia could fly toward their targets.

After the joint and intensive efforts of Canada and the U. S. have been completed, a continuous system into operation which may detect an approaching enemy bomber at sea leading from which interceptors could challenge raiders at some points along the west perimeter.

On the basis of recent official disclosures and visits by reporters, the far north defence picture looks like this:

At the northwest end: A system of radar and secondary airfields, together with facilities for ground troops to defend them, running down in Alaska, where the U. S. is a next-door neighbor of Russia. Nelson-Anchorage communications of planes nor of ground forces are there, but present plans call for augmenting it swiftly by flying men and planes from the United States.

At the northeast corner: Virtual completion of a huge bomber and fighter base at Thule brings to three the number of American operational air fields in Greenland. Together with those Greenland units of the Northeast Air Command are other bases in Labrador and Newfoundland.

Next along a 1,500-mile stretch of wasteland and frozen sea between Greenland and a point in Canada's Arctic Alaska there exist few if any fields capable of sending up a substantial number of interceptors. The radar crew might see an enemy along the line, but it would remain for flight bases farther south in Canada and in the U. S. to provide the interception.

A somewhat similar situation exists in Greenland. The three operating United States air force bases are at Narsarssuak, at the southwestern corner; Thule, Southwestern most point north of the arctic circle, and Thule, near Cape York, on the northwestern corner, about 900 miles from the North Pole.

The distances between bases, Thule to Goose, are used as an alternate field for another in event of bad weather or damage to a base. Thule is a great—800 mile in some instances.

Another Prosperous Year In Store for Canada in '53 Agricultural Conference Told

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will likely have another prosperous year in 1953, C. Y. Parker said today in an economic forecast at the annual Dominion-Provincial Agricultural Conference.

The Bureau of Statistics agricultural economist said farmers have slightly higher incomes and strong world demand for most of Canada's exports.

Defence production next year will probably stimulate the economy, he said, but more spectacular will be a heavier concentration on development of the country's strategic natural resources.

These prices generally have slipped a little from last year's high levels, the total capital investment in Canada's economy next year is expected at least to reach the 1952 peak of $3,200,000,000.

And the value of Canada's total national output, he said, should match the 1953 peak of $22,500,000,000.

While all this indicated a strong market for Canada's foodstuffs there loomed over the agricultural problems, are attending from all provinces.

Turning to the world front, Mr. Parker forecast strong demand basic metals and other of Canada's processed materials.

This high demand would be sustained mainly by a strong market in the United States. But some overseas countries will increase purchases because of exchange difficulties.

Market prospects for lumber are less certain and a "notable" reduction in the demand for newsprint is expected for the coming season, Mr Parker said.

Dr. J. F. Booth, the Agriculture Department's chief economist, said one of the buoyant factors in the Western world's economy is the forces-short activity in western rearmament.

"There can be little doubt," he said, "that rearmament production will continue to have an important influence on economic conditions and that world income and consumption will remain buoyant for some time to come."

Dr. Booth noted some "hearten-ing" changes on the international scene. One was the recovery from the foot-and-mouth disease epidemic that developed among Western countries in 1952.

Another was the improvement in Britain's dollar reserves. A third was the decision by the U. S. to ease off Commission of a number of specialized controls, including the higher tariff protection and President Truman's decision to dismiss all but a few personal representatives of the Commission for Higher Tariffs.

American farm prices, he noted, are down about three per cent this year, and are still still farther with high farm production and a slackening in the world demand expected in 1953.

This may have some impact on Canadian farm prices.

Tornado Flattens African Suburb, 35 Die, 400 Hurt

ALBERTYNESVILLE, South African (AP) — An estimated 40 Negroes were killed and more than 400 injured Sunday night by a tornado that flattened this flimsy mud and tin shanty settlement on the edge of Johannesburg.

Witnesses said the howling wind hit the mile-square suburb of 5,000 persons like an atomic blast. Houses collapsed and buried people before they could escape. Residents of the area's worst hit section, Block 2, were buried over and struck by flying debris.

Mayor Hymie Miller of Johannesburg, one of the first at the scene, dispatched half the city's police to carry rescue tools, police barracks and started arranging accommodations for nearly 4,000 homeless. Private cars were used as ambulances.

Radio For Help

A radio appeal brought 100 doctors and nurses volunteer nurses to the suburb. Trucks of blankets and food arrived from elsewhere.

Doctors toiled through the night in the suburb's emergency hospital said the injured included 210 women and children.

Police were assisting with a great roar, could be heard 15 miles away. Most of the dead, Albertynesville, the squatter shacks were levelled in a matter of minutes over the area of several blocks over the heart of Johannesburg but caused damage/no no casualties.

One rescue worker said last night: "We are not worrying about the dead; we are trying to save the living."

The tornado flattened two square miles of the area, about 20 miles southeast Johannesburg, shortly before dark. Rescue workers, nurses and doctors worked all night with floodlights of car headlights and searchlights.

Fire Wrecking

The native quarter, once a crowded jumble of flimsy shanties, lay in total wreckage today of the worst tornado ever recorded. Debris was heaped high. Scarcely a wall remained standing in the wake of the sudden gale.

Fifteen Shops Burn In Business Section

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP)—A large part of West Corner Brook's business section lay in ruins today after a fire which struck while most of the town's water system was off firemen without sufficient pressure to control the flames.

Apparently starting from a furnace in the basement of a radio and electrical store in this west-coast paper-making town of 20,000, the fire spread through Monday and least 15 shops.

Store owners said they cannot estimate damage until they make a complete survey. Thousands of dollars worth of stock, much of it just arriving for the Christmas rush, was lost.

Some unofficial estimates said the loss would be about $1,000,000.

It was the worst day of the year for fire to strike. Normally, when the strikes, the huge Bowater's Pulp and Paper Mills here applies its pumps to the town's water mains to boost the pressure.

But the company was carrying out a conversion job Sunday and its pumps could not be put into immediate action.

The modern, domestic pressure was not sufficient for fire fighting purposes. Firemen worked valiantly through the job and four mains were supplied by the fire fire scene when it was brought under control shortly after 8 p.m. NST (6.30 p.m. EST).

Besides the businesses, ranging from a hardware store to a pool shop, several small homes to the rear of the narrow street, and apartments above the stores were lost.

All electrical service and many telephones in West Corner Brook and part of the town were cut by the fire.

Visited Daughter In Tweed, Killed On Way Home

NEW LISKEARD (CP) — Flo Williams, 56, was killed and two other persons severely injured in a head - on collision between an automobile and a truck near here last night.

Williams, a master mechanic at the Bonetal gold mine in the Timmins area, was driving alone in the car. He was returning from Tweed, Ont., north of Belleville, where he had visited one of his three married daughters.

Also killed were Mrs. Myrtle Williams and Clifford Smith. Mrs. Williams, 52-year-old widow, escaped injury but later was reported suffering from shock.

The accident occurred on Highway 11 about 100 miles north of North Bay.

HONOR FREDERIC MARCH

PARIS (AP)—Hollywood's Fredric March was hailed by French film critics and stars here last night in a Champs-Elysees theatre as he received the first prize as "the Line of St. Mark" — of the 1953 Venice film festival. The Italian judges had awarded March the trophy as the best actor of the year for his performance in "Death of a Salesman."

Penitentiary Population Down For First Time in Nine Years

OTTAWA (CP) — The upward trend of Canada's penitentiary population has been reversed for the first time in nine years and more ex - convicts are re-establishing themselves without relapsing into crime.

Maj.-Gen. R. B. Gibson, penitentiaries Commissioner, reported this today in a 225-page annual report tabled in the Commons by Justice Minister Garson. The commissioner said the report reflects Canada's new penal policy stressing rehabilitation and said 1951-52 has been an "outstanding year in the history of Canadian penitentiaries."

Penitentiary staffs are better paid than ever before. A pension-ary staff college has been opened at St. Vincent de Paul, Que., for segregation and training of re-formative type personnel.

A graded scale of prisoner remuneration — 10, 15 and 20 cents a day — has been introduced to provide incentive for improved workmanship in prison shops.

Prisoners in seven penitentiaries now can subscribe to newspapers and magazines and can receive Christmas parcels from outside. Self-shaving by prisoners has been approved and canteens and commissaries have been opened to supply candy, toilet supplies and tobacco.

In all institutions, Gen. Gibson said, there has been a drive to improve education and to provide recreational and hobby programs. In prisoners' publications, he said, there is more freedom of expression.

Results of these changes, said Gen. Gibson, are shown by improved conduct, in a better relationship between staff and inmates, and in reduction of the number of penitentiary repeaters.

Search For Alberta Plane Centred In Wasaga District

Farmer Reports Seeing 'Ball of Fire' Drop to Earth

WASAGA BEACH (CP)—Eighty soldiers with walkie-talkie radio sets today joined police and district residents searching for a single-engined Alberta plane that disappeared Friday on a flight to Toronto for the Grey Cup football game.

Four Alberta men were aboard the plane when it took off from Edmonton Friday morning. It was last sighted shortly after noon Friday on the last lap of its flight.

The search is being pressed in Ontario's Georgian Bay area and in Michigan.

Four Men Aboard

The Ontario searchers spread out in this bush area 80 miles north of Toronto in a hunt for Garth K. Edgar, 25, Edmonton lawyer; Don Eggenberger, 23, of Calgary; Don Sutherland, about 28, of Calgary, and pilot Frank Jake, 30, of Edmonton.

The search yesterday concentrated in the log and bush area around Jack's Lake southwest of here, after a farmer reported seeing a "ball of fire" descend from the sky and hearing a loud explosion.

Other reports from residents of this area tod of hearing the sound of a sputtering airplane engine in the sky and then being cut through trees. A number of the reports said an explosion had been heard several miles out in Georgian Bay.

Private Other Reports

Meanwhile police were investigating reports of planes in trouble from other sections of the province. At Gros Cap, 20 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie, a lighthouse keeper reported seeing black smoke about 3 p.m. Friday. The United States coast guard began a search of the area yesterday.

Still another search was being conducted in bush country near Caledon, 35 miles northwest of Toronto. Two persons there reported hearing a single-engine plane flying low and then seeing about five p.m. Friday, at the height of the storm.

Brother of two of the missing men, RCAF Warrant Officer K. R. Buck Eggenberger of Trenton, resumed searching today after a day-long hunt he started in the Wasaga Beach area yesterday. Garth Edgar, Edmonton lawyer, was a friend of the two pilots. He is brother, as is Don Eggenberger.

A Simple Way To Alienate A Congregation

PULLOXHILL, England (AP)—Rev. Frederick Arthur Johnson held a 45-minute Sunday service and today said wished all church members—especially a "faithful few" who came to hear him preach—happy days. There had been a larger attendance the Sunday before, when the vicar described his 350 villagers as "crafty and hateful people" and told them to stop at St. Albans to remove him. Yesterday three showed up in the morning service, 19 in the evening.

TENDERS CALLED FOR RE-GRADING PART OF HIGHWAY

Tenders have been called for re-grading and culvert construction on 1.3 miles of highway No. 14 between Mountain View and the Belleville Bridge. The section of highway to be re-graded runs past the Mountain View Cheese factory, where several serious accidents have occurred.

Norris Whitney, M.L.A. for Prince Edward-Lennox, said that regrading of the highway at this point has been under consideration for some time, but that recent accidents were not the cause of tenders being called. Mr. Whitney said the hill at the cheese factory would be cut away and the low spot in the roadway brought to level.

FIREMEN CALLED OUT ON TWO RUNS

City firemen were called on two runs this morning, both for oil burners which were giving trouble. No damage was done.

One call was to the Gilbert residence on Herchimer ave., and the other to Madill's Garage at Rossmore. The two calls came within minutes of each other.

Bantam Hockey League Scores

Red Wings, Canadiens and Rangers each were winners in the Saturday morning bantam league games at Memorial Arena.

The Wings shut out the Leafs by a 3-0 score while the Hawks were blanked 2-0 by Canadiens. Rangers defeated Bruins 4-2.

Murphy, Spafford and Cannon hit the bemp for the Canadiens.

Huddleston scored twice in the Ranger win with Wannamaker and Dickey getting the other two. Fraser scored both goals for the losing Bruins.

Closing of Switch May Have Scared Burglars Away

The closing of a light switch which controls the main lights in a lot with light is believed to have averted a break-in at the local A. and P. store on Front street, Belleville Street early Sunday morning.

Police officers on the local police cruiser had checked the store and found everything in order when 15 minutes later, when P.C. Kent, on foot patrol on Station Street, suddenly realized that the lights in the A. and P. parking lot had come on. He ran back to the store and found that an attempt had been made to open the heavy door at the rear of the store.

Police said there were marks on the door where a crowbar had apparently been used in an attempt to force entry. It is believed that the break-in attempt may have caused the switch of the yard lights to close and that the would-be robbers were scared away by the sudden lighting up of the parking lot.

Any citizens who feel that the weather during this month has been bad have been bad have short memories. Less than a year short, at any rate.

For the average mean temperature for November this month is 1853 was 40 degrees as compared to a mean of 37 in November, 1951. Last year, for instance, the temperatures ranged from a high of 52 degrees to a low of 28. This November, the high was 60 and the low 32.

The rainfall in 1951 was 2.35 inches and the snowfall 11.4 ins. This year, we have had 2.69 inches of rain and one-tenth of an inch of snow.

The average precipitation last year was 2.69 inches for 30 days, as compared to this November's figure of 2.64 inches on 21 days.

The average mean temperature over the past 30 years for November stands at 25 degrees. The rainfall has been 2.45 inches and the snowfall four inches.

Track Inspector, Henry Pedder, Retires on Pension

Recently at the close of the day's work, the assembled members of thirteen gangs of locomotives and the trainmen of Lines Dundas, a large group of C.N.R. trackmen gathered at the maintenance quarters in the C.N. Railway yards at Belleville to pay tribute to Mr. Henry Pedder, affectionately known as "Little Harry", on the occasion of his retirement from active work with the railway.

An address, attesting to the high esteem and affection in which Harry was held by his fellow employees, was read by Mr. Ed. Schliever, after which Mr. Harold Pullman, president of Local 85 of the B. of M.W.E. presented Harry with a gift of money. Mr. Pedder made fitting reply and invited all his friends to visit him at 238A Moira Street West.

Harry was born in Lancaster, England, 67 years ago. He first married Annie Gardiner, also of Lancaster, in 1918. They have one son, Thomas, and three daughters, Daisy, Ruth and Elizabeth.

In 1916 he entered into connection with the railway and returned to England to offer his services to his King and Country in World War I. He was accigned to the Royal Engineers, the British Imperial Army for four years.

Harry returned again to Canada in 1920 and in 1921 re-entered the employ of the railway as a track man. Several years ago he was promoted to the position of section foreman in the Malpeque district, P.E.I., where he continuous service in the Maritime provinces for 30 years.

Skating Club Names Directors

Directors of the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club were elected at a recent meeting held in the Canteen at Quinte Air Force Station.

Those named were Twomey Black, Harry Brown, Gord Davies, Jack Davies, Jack Dickens, Les. Digby, Cecil Heard, Bob Lucy, Bob Miles, Mrs. O'Connor, Wilbur Rollins, Mrs. Ralph Silliker, Wilkes, and Messrs. Morgan and Woodcock.

President Jack Dickens was in charge of the session which was the first meeting of the new season supplied by the Ladies' Auxiliary. The Auxiliary was lauded for its work during the year, which was an mortgage on the club greatly reduced.

It was decided to introduce a new club at the beginning of the organization. Parents of junior members may now join as associate members and will be able to hold office on the directorate of the club.

News of Trenton

Correspondent Joins in Search For Four 'Esky' Fans Down In Plane Near Georgian Bay

By ELMER BONTER

TRENTON (Special) — Of the millions who watched and listened to the East-West game this day seven of us had different business on our minds.

We had seats all right; they were cushioned ones with arm rests on them. But they weren't in the stadium at Toronto. They were the best seats inside the big fuslage of a Dakota aircraft (designation number 281) flying to Centralia to join the R. C. A. F. search for a Beechcraft Bonanza single-engined plane believed to be down in country somewhere in the Georgian Bay district with four western Canada football fans aboard.

Stretches of the game came in on the plane's radio and the last quarter through high over London had Argos winning 15 to 8 at half time. That was the last we heard of the football game. We assume the Toronto team won. Nobody cheered. We officially heard the score by 7 a. m. this morning.

Short Briefing

The briefing at Centralia by Searchmaster Squadron Leader Jack Hurst, of Ottawa, and the pilot, Winter light was tailing fast when the three man plane reached the suspect area 90 miles away there would be only hours of daylight searching left. As we hustled, back across the airfield to the waiting Harvard search pilot Orval Piper passed out last minute instructions. Then we were off, Piper in car distance of the enthused crew.

Captain Piper ordered the spotters to keep their eyes glued to the ground once the plane reached the suspect area. He said first search would be over the tree tops. We were to dash to the front of the plane when land was sighted. (A plane travelling at 160 miles an hour would travel three or four miles before he could get it turned around for another look.)

Ahead of Schedule

We reached our area ahead of schedule. The country from the air looked like endless forest, but of Canadian country from the air. There were hundreds, perhaps numerous lakes and much farm and rough land. A light coating of snow covered the ground while some of the lakes were frozen over and in some places there were signs of civilization unlike the country which swallowed up the Trenton high school player Barilko about a year back.

We looked and looked and then looked some more without noticing anything that resembled the wreckage of a red and green painted aircraft. Our eyes grew tired as we stared down at the countryside. We roared low over Wasaga Beach and the big water tower at Midland as we circled that city; a search party was unloading at the Collingwood civilian airport. The search plane went by on our port after a provincial police cruiser was patrolling the highway below us at one point.

Time went quickly and darkness closed in sooner than we had hoped. As the last rays of sunset faded our eyes grew dim down at the outline of a great swamp and forest. We looked hard but there wasn't enough light left.

It was after six o'clock when the pilot set course for the search base. A crimson glow was shining on the astral blister on top of the plane. We ran into a snow storm 20 miles out of Centralia and the dismal outlook changed from that of seeing or disappointment among the searchers as minds the situation even more dismal.

No Clues Found

Planes from search headquarters here at Centralia are covering nearly 7,000 square miles in the Wasaga Beach—Georgian Bay area in the last two days without finding a clue to the disappearance of a red and green single-engined Bonanza sin-

Light Vote Anticipated Due To Absence of Elections For Mayor and P. U. Commissioner

If early returns at the city's twenty-nine electoral polls can be judged a criterion, it doesn't look as though there will be a hot time in the old town today.

One of the lowest veteran polls of the day was recorded at the march of the electorate to the polls up to that time this morning.

A survey of eight polls selected at random revealed only thirty-four votes had marked their ballots.

The advance poll, it was stated, accommodated some forty-one voters or approximately fifty per cent of the number recorded last year.

The weather was crisp and cold with a brilliant December sun shining from a cloudless sky.

Veteran observers feel the vote will be extremely light and due in most part to the absence of mayoralty, Public Utilities and Board of Education elections.

Mayor A. McLean Haig was given an acclamation as was Ald. Harry Rollins to the commissionership of the Public Utilities. The Board of Education was acclaimed en bloc.

Cancelled Out Early

However the eleven aspirants to aldermanic honors were out in full force early. This afternoon's when voting was stepped up, all of them were on the job with handshakes.

It is doubtful if the total figures even approach those of last year when 6,132 votes were balloted. The city's record was set the year previous when 6,289 or sixty-one per cent of the city voters marked their ballots.

Mayor Dr. R. T. Potter holds the record for the largest number of votes given an alderman when he polled 4,213 in the 1949 election. Mayor McLean Haig polled 3,838 last year when he defeated Jack Allin in the mayoralty race.

The Ontario Intelligencer in keeping with its civic election policy will relay returns to the general public via telephone today. A battery of phones will be in action with an augmented editorial staff on duty.

With the closing at seven o'clock there will be no returns available until eight o'clock at shortly afterwards.

Call 4600 for prompt election returns.

Northern Electric Hockey Results

Area C and General Assembly were week-end winners in the Northern Electric Intedepartmental Hockey League. Area C edged Machine Shop 8-7 with the G. A.'s defeating Sheet Metals 5-1.

Area G led 2-0 in the first period of their game with Machine Shop with the second period ending 5-4. The teams split six goals in the third period of a closely-fought game.

J. Wardaugh rang the bell four times for the Shoppers with H. Wardbaugh, Woods and Day getting the others.

The "Jones boys", Peter and Davey, scored seven of the Area ladies with Davey getting four. Creegan got the other.

York scored the only Sheet Metal Metal goal in the first period with the General Assembly coming back to score a brace in the second beat, Reid, added three more in the final period. DeGray and Sheppard split with Soules, Locke and Wallbridge adding singles.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The American dollar was at a discount of 2¾ per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Friday's noon rate was 97 9/32. The pound sterling was $2.73 1-16, against $2.72⅝ on Friday.

TORONTO STOCKS

Volume for the first three hours totalled 916,000 shares.

Two issues showed heavy losses. Central Explorers, a western oil, dropped more than $3 in a turnover of 61,000 shares while Dominion Asbestos, a base metal, lost almost $1 in a 73,000-share turnover.

Senior golds advanced in a broad theme although Hollinger fell and junior producers made a large majority of gains, led by Campbell Red Lake. Prospects balanced gains and losses while holding companies gained.

Utilities recovered from a weak opening to lead industrials upward as most issues gained in spite of losses in leaders. Papers, steels and retail stores showed strength as most other groups mixed.

Western oils losses outnumbering gains above two to one as Canadian Atlantic and Western Leaseholds slipped. Dorich added pennies to its early trading.

Higher-priced base metals gained but most issues slipped although East Rim and Eureka added pennies in active trading.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP)—Cattle trade was active today at the Ontario stockyards and prices were 50 cents to $1 higher on choice cows and bulls and $1-2 higher on all other grades. Lambs were also 50 cents higher. Receipts: Cattle 3,340; calves 1,000; hogs 540; sheep and lambs 400. The holdover from last week was 300 cattle.

Choice weighty steers sold at $25.50-26.50 with good at $24-$25 and mediums at $23-$24. Common to medium light steers and heifers sold at $17-$22 and good heifers at $23. Medium to good fed yearlings brought $22-26 and medium to good stockers $23-24. Good cows made $14-15 with a few at $16.50 and canners and cutters at $10-$13. Good heavy bulls brought $15-$16.50. Choice veal calves were steady at $26-27 with common to medium at $14-18 and grasers at $12-13.25.

Good lambs were 50 cents higher at $24.50 with bucks and heavies at $22.50 and medium to good sheep at $8-10.

Swiss Climbers On Way Home Says Dispatch

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP)—A message from Bhojpur, the radio station nearest to Mt. Everest, said Swiss climbers who set out nearly two months ago to scale the world's highest peak have reached Namche Bazaar "on the way home." The message gave no hint whether the expedition had succeeded or failed.

Namche Bazaar is six days' march from Bhojpur, a military station 110 miles southeast of here. Swiss sources here were unable to confirm the Sunday night radio report, merely saying they have been without word for 22 days and are growing increasingly concerned.

The Bhojpur message was the first purporting to give the whereabouts of the Swiss climbers since Nov. 17, when sources in contact with them said the final assault team had reached a point 50 yards from the summit, which is more than 29,000 feet high.

10,000,000TH. TON

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The port of embarkation said it hoisted aboard ship Friday the 10,000,000th ton of cargo to be moved out into the Pacific since fighting started in Korea 19 months ago.

Prime Ministers Want Higher Gold Price

By FRASER WIGHTON

LONDON (Reuters) — Commonwealth prime ministers, in conference here in search ways of meeting sterling back to health, this week will consider jointly asking the United States to raise the gold price.

The talking gold price now is pegged at $35 a fine ounce, the 1934 level.

A higher gold price would immediately benefit South Africa, the world's largest gold producer. The benefit would also accrue to the other sterling area countries because the sterling area keeps its accounts with the dollar area jointly.

South Africa has long asked for a higher gold price. It was learned that Britain, Canada and Australia support the view.

Supporters of asking for a higher gold price here would make the sterling area if and when it is decided to make sterling freely convertible into dollars. This now is a long term aim only.

The arguments presented is that:

1. A higher gold price will mean that the world's gold reserves will have risen in value when expressed in terms of dollars.

2. A higher gold price will mean that dollars have become worth less in terms of gold. Operators would therefore be less inclined to sell their sterling holdings for dollars once sterling is made convertible.

Men's Commercial Bowling League

The top slot Boslaks increased their lead in the Men's Commercial Bowling League on Friday night with a 7-0 win over Almelite. Other seven-point winners were Gourleys and Quinte Distributors over Balzy Brothers and O'Neil Sales.

Star Welding and Pat's Barber Shop tied for 5-2 victories over Welding Gases and Stephens-Adamson.

The standings: Boslaks 75, Welding Gases 64, Pat's Barber Shop 56, Quinte Distributors 57, Star Welding 53, Stephens-Adamson 40, Gourleys 39 Balzy Brothers 31, Almelite 19, O'Neil Sales 19.

With temperatures during Sunday night dropping to zero degrees, the lowest of the season, an ice mantle appeared this morning on the mouth of the Moira River and on parts of the Bay of Quinte.

The cove between Zwick's Island and the mainland was frozen over while east of the bay bridge the bay was also frozen over, the ice extending to the mouth of the river and upstream as far as the footbridge.

For the first time this year the gulls had a look of disappointment as they sought open water at the mouth of the river. After a few turns over the ice the gulls disappeared towards the bay.

The ice on the bay was not expected to last, however, and it was expected the first wind would break it up. The bay temperature is still above freezing. Saturday the bay temperature was 37 degrees, but by this morning it had dropped to 35 degrees

U. S. OFFICIAL QUITS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert T. Crossley resigned Friday as assistant secretary of labor, effective December 1. He will take a new job of administering the welfare fund set up under contract between the Seafarers' International Union, AFL, Atlantic and Gulf districts, and employers. Crossley came to the labor department as assistant secretary in September, 1950.

College Hill United Church Dedicated to Service of God

An overflow congregation Sunday morning attended dedication services at College Hill United Church to witness an impressive ceremony. The church was unofficially opened about one year ago, Rev. Dr. M. C. MacDonald, B. A., D. D., of Toronto, and associate secretary of Home Missions, was guest minister.

"This is a very significant hour in your life," Dr. MacDonald told the congregation. "You are now a member of the new United Churches and congregations across Canada which have sprung up in the past year."

"A churchless world is a Godless world," Dr. MacDonald said, and pointed as an example to a greater part of Europe with its Communist influence.

"There is only one power in the world today that can stop that Red movement," he declared, "and that is the church. Communism knows that it cannot walk side by side with the church."

"It is not an accident," the speaker said, "that material and physical health receive its greatest height in a Christian nation. Such nations have a dignity found nowhere else."

Part of Movement

Stressing the need for the congregation to train localized thinkers, Dr. MacDonald continued: "If College Hill Church does not go beyond its own immediate boundaries, it will die.

As its members, you are but a part of a great movement.

"The church has had its failures," the speaker said. "But it remains the finest and truest champion of mankind. Our greatest seats of learning, our universities—are the child of the church. Take religion out of our homes and you have only houses. But put religion in and you have the finest and most basic institution."

Those are the most stirring days of the Christian church, Dr. MacDonald went on. Its rapid growth proves that it is laying foundation in this young country. He urged the congregation to maintain regular attendance.

"We realize," he said, "that there is a hunger greater than the hunger for food in our natures. That is the hunger for a living God. Do not forsake the assembling of yourselves in worship."

Touching again on the number of new church, Dr. MacDonald concluded: "Everytime you see a church, I say there is a God."

Dr. MacDonald was introduced by Rev. A. E. McKenzie, principal of Albert College. The latter also presented the keys of the church to Rev. Bailey, student minister of College Hill.

Fitting to be Church

"On many occasions," Mr. Morrison said, "this property which was the property of Al-bert College came up for discussion. It was agreed that it was only fitting that it should continue as a church."

Mr. Besley, in his words of thanks, called attention to the new communion plates and table which had been donated by individual members of the congregation. He paid tribute to deceased workers of the church who had done much to make the dedication services possible.

Dr. MacDonald again spoke at the evening worship. Music was supplied by the R. C. A. F. Choir of Trenton.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER OFF THE RECORD By Ed Reed

A SURPRISING STATEMENT

The surprising statement was made in Ottawa last week by Senator Cyrille Vaillancourt of Quebec that if every Canadian paid his share, income taxes could be reduced by 40 per cent.

Speaking in the Senate in moving the adoption of the speech from the throne, he charged that some citizens by all possible ways to avoid paying income tax. This did not apply to workers who pay their share in deductions at the source, the Senator said.

Unfortunately his statement was made without any supporting evidence that there could be tax evasion to the extent that it adds unfairly, upon those who are paying in full, almost half as much again as they should be required to pay.

There is no doubt that there are ways and means open to those in quite a few lines of business, and in some professions, to evade the full share of income taxes. In some countries, France and Italy being notable examples, income tax evasion has become something akin to a national pastime. And this weakness is reflected in the instability of the democratic system in those countries.

Senator Vaillancourt is himself a wealthy man and he speaks on behalf of the wage earners when he makes this protest. The great majority of citizens cannot evade taxes because their full incomes are on record. Obviously if some succeed in evasion there must be a heavier levy on others to raise the money the government requires.

But is the Liberal senator charging that the Department of National Revenue is responsible for these evasions? He does not say. In view of his claim that evasions reach some enormous sums—many millions of dollars, if they would amount to a 40 per cent reduction in the income tax scale — it would seem that the senator has said too much or entirely too little, on this matter.

UNSCRAMBLING THE OMELET

Every housewife knows that it is impossible to unscramble an omelet. In recent years this cookbook logic has been drawn upon in metaphor to point up the irreparable consequences of state socialism. Supporters of free enterprise stressed the parallel of the scrambled egg and the nationalization of business and industry under socialism. The socialists, on the other hand, did not argue the point at all; content that once the scrambling had been done their goal would be permanently achieved.

In the last few weeks the Churchill Government has set about in a determined fashion to prove that this cookbook logic has been misapplied. In November the Conservative Government took its first step to implement its promise that it would, and could, unscramble the socialist omelet. The first step was to restore to private ownership, 43,000 trucks which the Labor government had taken over in 1947. The bill was approved by a majority of 26, the largest majority in an important vote in the House up to that time.

The second big battle in denationalization reached its decisive stage when the Government asked for second reading of its bill to return Britain's vast iron and steel industry, third largest in the world, to private owners. This time the vote represented a more impressive victory because the majority for the Government had increased to 36 votes.

The trucking industry had been government business for five years but this change of management presented fewer difficulties because the business unlike steel was considerably small. The same reversal in steel was regarded as a much more formidable project. It was not until February 12, 1951, however, that the Labor Government officially took over the private steel companies. It was the biggest single project in Labor's program of industrial socialization but it was less firmly enveloped in the tenacles of socialist bureaucracy than earlier phases of the Labor government's program.

The Churchill Government is taking the precaution, however, to see that the transition will not be left entirely to private management. The state will maintain control through a 12-man iron and steel board. It will govern all branches of policy from labor relations to technological research. It will also be able to set prices. This would be a necessary form of control in any event so long as the West is confronted with its current defence commitments.

The important thing is that the Churchill Government has taken the lead in demonstrating that the road back from socialism is not an impassable one. And it has embarked on an experiment which is bound to be of historic significance. In it the British people will observe at first hand the comparative merits of private ownership and socialism when both have been put to the test. It is a challenge to the free enterprise system to prove itself and in doing so preserve itself from the future attacks of Socialist politicians.

That the experiment will be watched with equal interest abroad is certain.

HOLD THOSE HORSES

With 1953 model automobiles expected to be more powerful than 1952 types, car manufacturers are beginning to worry about the implications of the present horsepower race. The speed battle has reached the point where some members of Congress are considering restrictions, according to the N. Y. Journal of Commerce. There seems to be no practical solution to the power competition, however, as the horsepower of some current models is well above 200 and, if the race continues, some builders could go as high as 400.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

November 1st., 1932

Lieut.-Col. E. O. Keeler, M.C., is retiring as Commanding Officer of the 15th Regiment, after five years' service in that capacity and he will be succeeded by Major E. A. Geen, himself an advance to the rank of Lieut.-Col. He has been associated with the regiment since its inauguration in 1919; before that he served in the 40 and 15th Battalion, A. L.I.

All trustees of the Board of Education have been returned by acclamation. They are Charles C. Stewart, Foster Ward; Reginald Moncrief, Samson Ward; Victor E. Hubbs, Centre Ward; H. J. Allin, Baldwin Ward; Geo. H. Lent, Bleecker Ward; William J. Harrison, Coleman Ward; E. A. Ross, Murray Ward.

The following have qualified and seek election as aldermen at the coming election: Harold Armstrong, George A. Bennett, G. Clinton Brickman, William Donahue, Frank B. Foley, John B. Harker, Harry Hill, Joseph W. Lailah, William Lancaster, Thomas H. Marshall, Harry A. Morgan, W. R. McCleary, Benjamin Safe, Clifford C. Walker and William A. Woodley.

A lad named Percy Follwell left a can containing a gallon of coal oil on the sidewalk on St. Charles Street last evening while he was delivering a parcel at a house near by and during his absence the can of oil was stolen. The police are investigating the matter.

Mr. Clarence Sherry of this city has acquired a business in Frankford and will take possession tomorrow.

Mr. George Bird of Hamilton was in town today.

Mr. H G. Gilmore of Picton was in town today.

50 YEARS AGO

December 1st., 1902

Interior decorators arrived here today to decorate the interior of Mr. H. Corby's office in his new building on the southeast corner of Front and Market Streets.

The high school hockey club was organized last evening with the following officers: Hon. president, F. E. O'Flynn; president, J. T. Luton; captain, C. Dolan; manager, H. O. McGuire; secretary-treasurer, N. Alford; committee of management, H. J. Clarke, H. Holton, R. Hamilton, J. Weiler and the elected officers.

An endeavor will be made to organize a school league.

The merry tinkle of the sleigh bells makes music to the ears of merchants today. If this weather and sleighing will last until Christmas it will be a great thing for the merchants on Front Street.

Uffington Horse Gallops Again Across the Downs of Berkshire

(National Geographic Bulletin)

The White Horse of Uffington, wartime landmark on Berkshire's downs bound to England's industrial heart, gallops once more on the hillside. It is to be hand done for at least 600 years.

More than 350 feet long from foremost ear to tip of tail, the great beast was carved into the landscape by digging and cutting the chalk turf from the underlying white chalk.

The Uffington horse is one of the more famous of about 50 huge figures carved into the English landscape, some in modern times.

When it was learned that Nazi airmen were using the drawings as navigational aids, the air ministry had them turfed over or otherwise concealed. Scientific custodians of their antiquities and treasures, the Royal Air Force threw scarf after the war even though they could ill spare the effort from reconstruction of their country.

Although England is the true horse of this colossal art form, it is found by air travelers all the world. American Indians, possibly in the 18th century, scratched large, crude likenesses of people and horses in the gravelly deserts of California and Arizona.

A National Geographic Society-Smithsonian Institution expedition recently restored, measured and photographed the Indian pictures. Results have been hailed by land and air as a mess without higher vantage points from which it could be viewed in its entirety. Thus, some remained undiscovered. Even the airplane came into common use.

Carved by unknown artists, a network which is to be found atop a mountain in North Africa's Atlas country. A huge hammer-is cut into a hill near Tours, France to commemorate Charles Martel's victory over the Saracens in 732. At Nairobi, Africa, an outsize lion, gouged from the country side is a World War I memorial.

Of the 17 hillside horses in England, only the ones at Uffington and Westbury can claim real antiquity. Others were fashioned in the 18th and 19th centuries by landowners seeking the unusual in estate decorations. Famous British regiments of World War I and II have left their likenesses near their camps.

The Long Man of Wilmington and the somewhat shocking Cerne Giant are true sculptures, executed on hillsides where, by why, Gigantic crosses are to be found on the downs and British hillsides. Two at Chilliers are unidentified as yet.

Unlike the American Indian carvings, all the major ones in England were done from the air, from vantage points on the ground. Like Indian counterparts, the older English pictures probably had religious significance. They exist only as national monuments, maintained with public funds for sightseers by hand grown on a mess with-

When Paupers Are Rich

(Hamilton Spectator)

Is a man who dies penniless and whose body would be buried in a potter's field a pauper? Not necessarily ruled a Baltimore magistrate this week. He can be rich, indeed.

A former seafaring man, John Hanlon, hadn't found the sailing smooth in the years since he retired from the merchant marine. Social Security payments and such odd jobs as nightwatchman and bartender barely managed to keep him alive in a little bare room behind a delicatessen story store.

When he died last week in a Baltimore hospital at the age of 80, it was a justified error on the part of the city authorities to judge him a pauper and make arrangements for his burial in a potter's field. How were they to know that Mr. Hanlon possessed, though intangible, assets?

Mrs. Helen Dulaney, from neighboring Glen Burnie, came to claim the body and arrange for burial. "John Johnson never turned any one down; he'd be crying out of his mouth to give to his neighbors," she said.

Mrs. Dulaney told Police Detution, protested, however—a simple burial was not enough for such a man. Sympathy, she insisted on a funeral—and she her husband would pay for it. She raised $310 from a loan company to finance it.

"When all he had was $47 a month from Social Security he'd game out a dollar when it needed a dollar. When I had my first baby and we needed furniture, he gave us a bed, mattress, a chair and a table," she told the magistrate who was attempting to arrange a compromise between the sisters.

Ruling in favor of Mrs. Dulaney, the magistrate commended her "with friends who fight to honor him, he was no pauper. He died rich."

A rich man, then, did John Johnson. Not in the sense that he amassed would not make it hard for him to enter the Kingdom of Heaven.

The Devil Took a Hand

(Galt Reporter)

Here's the latest news on the whereabouts of the devil, according to the Scotsman, of Edinburgh, Scotland. The Scotsman reported he is playing cards in a certain manor house, deep under Scotland's Cullen Links.

The story, coming from the village of Findhorn, is as follows:

The strange disappearance, under overwhelming masses of sand, of the Cullen Links golf course a few years ago, left the devil in a quandary. He had no place to go. Hell was already overcrowded, and heaven was as a judgment on the land in consequence of the evil life of the island of Cullen. Some chief cleft lay in his disrespect of the Sabbath day.

According to the legend, the laird of Cullen was a inveterate gambler, and it is said that one stormy Saturday night he was seated at cards when the devil himself appeared. He swore that the Lord's day would not bother to him, and declared that he would play all day, even if Auld Scraper himself were to appear.

He had scarcely uttered these words when the door opened and there did above the howling of the wind, and the laird saw a pasenger at the window into the centre of the room.

Out of the glowing mass stepped the devil and took a seat at the table. He seated himself at the card table and played for the laird's soul, and with such skill that the laird sat spellbound. Hour after hour passed in gambling, while outside the storm increased in severity, and the waters rose higher and higher higher over the house.

According to the local people, the laird never was seen again, but to this day he lies in the manor house, playing an unending game with his satanic partner.

Personal Health Talks

IMPORTANT NOTICE

We regret to announce that effective at once, due to exchange problems, mail difficulties, etc., Dr. Brady can no longer answer personal letters from readers and/or furnish pamphlets or booklets. However, Dr. Brady's health column will continue to give up-to-the-minute information on health matters as heretofore.

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

YOUNGSTERS NEED CALCIUM TO GROW

Everything I say about calcium (lime) here or in booklets or pamphlets on health has to do with nutrition and I suggest calcium as medicine only in the pamphlet Yankee Stomach, in which I recommend anti-acid discs composed of calcium carbonate and magnesium trisilicate, the most effective and least objectionable relief available for heartburn, acid eructations, waterbrash, hunger pain, bloating, gas, hyperacidity and nausea. the pamphlet is stamped, self-addressed envelope.

In an earlier column I gave the scientific reasons why I believe people who take extra calcium (perhaps as much as one gets in a quart of whole milk) every day to supplement their ordinary diet need not worry about getting too much calcium. Or maybe calcification or deposit of calcium in the arteries, kidneys, lungs or other soft tissues. So far as our scientific knowledge goes, calcification of tissues is only as a consequence of fatty or other degenerative changes or replacement of lost functional cells by inert fatty material. In other words, atherosclerosis of the aorta has been resent in the arteries a long while before calcification ensues.

Medical and nutrition authorities do not dispute Sherman's dictum that the ordinary diet is probably more often deficient in calcium than in any other chemical element. This applies to all ages, but particularly to children and youths.

Milk and milk products, especially cheese, are the best food sources of calcium. The minimum requirement of milk for a growing youngster is 1¼ pints—three glasfule—a day. There may be some exceptions but as a general ryle the youngster who consumes plenty of milk and/or milk products—such as skim milk buttparator milk, buttermilk, cream, whey and every kind of cheese, grows taller, has better health and vitality than the youngster who indulges in tea, coffee, cocoa, chocolate, fountain beverages and sweetened pop instead of milk.

In order to grow straight, strong and tall a youngster must not only get his or her minimum daily ration of milk but also enough vitamin D to insure normal utilization of the calcium in the milk.

The youngster who enjoys sufficient exposure to direct or diffuse (shady) sunshine every day (or for at least three hours in the year) may generate enough vitamin D (sunshine vitamin) in his or her own skin, but it is usually advisable to supply extra vitamin D in the vitamized fat diet, especially through the winter months.

THE LITTLE TUGS

Have you sat before your television screen and watched the ballet, the United States out come into dock?

It takes a lot of little tugs to get the big ones to get her out again.

The ship is certainly one of the most beautiful creations of man, except by naval architects. But I was also impressed by the little tugs.

The big liner would be useless. It would be helpless and unable to take on or discharge cargo and passengers, unless little tugs brought her into dock and took her out again into the broad waters.

These little tugs remind me of the parts you and I play in life. There is nothing particularly strategic or outstanding in our endeavors. We work for a living and go along doing the work for which we seem best suited. Our work has about it not the loveliness of the big liner but the utility of the little tugs.

But the world gets along day by day because of the endeavors of little people like ourselves. Perhaps we work for corporations or distinguished bosses or great institutions —but we are only little tugs.

Where would the liner be without the little tugs and where would the world be without its myriads of insignificant persons?

I wonder if it thrills you as it does me—that even the big liner needs the little tugs?

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON "TAKING" THINGS

It's the way we take things—life as it unfolds before us each day—that has more to do with our health and happiness than anything else. Many of us complain about the "normal" annoyances while others with ten times what we have to contend with face them with cheer, patience, and with their chins up!

There are small serious decisions arise. Sorrows, disappointments, and many a heartache often face us before we are made. How often we have heard the comment about a person when faced with such an experience. One may have said: "Well, he couldn't take it." But another may have said: "Wasn't it magnificent the way he took it?"

For as long as we live we shall be beset with problems. Life is our job. Let us not fail down in performance, and let us resolve that the thing nearest to hand is the important task to do. It's the way people take it that determines what shows their true character. Some people take their sorrows seriously, as though great things depended upon them, as people don't. Others have to worry about. They are among the victims always.

We know the calibre of the one who faces his responsibility and handles it superbly. The big man doesn't snap back at false and childish criticism. He takes it as something expected when chosen to handle things responsibly. The little dog snaps at the big dog; but the big dog trots along unruffled.

It is amazing how some people can take the responsibility day by day without losing their faith and courage—but it is no mystery to them. It's their plan of life and they wouldn't have it different. Their example contributes courage to each one of us. What a wonderful thing it is to have friends who handle their lives triumphantly, making every occurrence and smiling back at them all!

Experiment In Crime

(Windsor Star)

In St. Louis a well-to-do business man is dead, having been shot by guards as he attempted to hold up a money truck. Now police are wondering why a man in his position would stoop to a career of that nature.

Their assumption, and it's plausible, is that he was attempting to commit a "perfect crime," to confirm a personal conviction that it could be done. There is some evidence he had a "super-man" complex.

An actual crime, however, can be as revolting as one inspired by experiment. And the penalty can be just as severe, if the amateur criminal is caught—or killed.

Many men of keen mind revel in detective stories for relaxation and mental stimulation they provide. The St. Louis case doubtless will convince most of them that perfect crimes should only be committed vicariously.

THE PACKSACK

Fifteen Traffic Fatalities Out Of Eighteen Killed

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A total of 18 persons died as the result of accidents in Eastern Canada during the week-end. Fifteen were traffic fatalities.

Province with the highest figure was Ontario with nine, including seven traffic deaths on Saturday, the day showed. Quebec had seven, six of them traffic, and New Brunswick and Nova Scotia one traffic death each.

One multiple-death accident was reported. Dr. Armand Lapierre, 48, and Roland Renault, 32, were killed when their cars collided at St. Joachim de la Praine, two miles from Montreal.

At Whitby, Ont., Roderick Williams, 18, died a few hours before he was due to play the guitar at a wedding party after the car in which he was riding was smashed 75 feet down the tracks by a Canadian Pacific Railway freight train.

Other Ontario deaths: Steve Brocks, 45, struck by an auto as he changed buses at Niagara Falls; Edward McBurney, 54, of East Wawanosh, when the tractor he was driving overturned into a ditch; Ernest Guy, 37, of Sudbury, on his way to hospital after his car missed a curve seven miles north of Sudbury; Michael Rash, 17, of Ekibiokde, when his car touched the shoulder of the road he was trying to overtake and went out of control; Wayne Burmaster, 18, of Aberwood, a passenger in a car which crashed into a tree; Mrs. Theresa Hanus, 72, of Brampton, in hospital of injuries suffered when the car in which she was riding skidded on the icy highway near Fenelon Falls.

Edward Heice, 41, of Oshawa was crushed by a 1,000-pound cement mixer which he was helping to wheel along and died within 15 minutes and at Sault Ste. Marie, Gerald Dawson, 13, was fatally wounded when his friend's 22 calibre rifle accidentally discharged while they were hunting rabbits.

Other Quebec deaths: Lucien Chatchoneuse, 28, when his trick smashed head-on into a car in Montreal; Armand Tougas, 36, as the car he was riding in hit a stone wall in Montreal; Raymond Goulet, 24, in a two-car collision near Sherbrooke; Robert St. Pierre, 34, when struck by a train.

Napoleon Trudeau, 67, in hospital as the result of injuries he received when he fell down stairs in his Montreal home.

Edward Saunders, 81, was killed as she tried to cross the road in front of a car.

Francis Perro, 22, of Pomquet, N. S., was killed by a train a few miles from his home. He was believed to have been walking along the tracks at the time.

Trapper Carries Two Nephews Out of Bush

CHAPLEAU (CP)—A trapper carried his two nephews in a packsack across 12 miles of rocky bushland from Lorrain Lake to Nicholson according to word received here.

Pierre Therrien, 30, carried John Therrien, 6, and Arthur, 1, whose combined weight was 60 pounds.

The trio set out with Mrs. Ralph Therrien after her husband failed to return to the cabin.

The brothers separated on their trapline a week ago but Ralph disappeared. Eugene searched for several days, then decided to head for Nicholson, 26 miles west of here, to get help. He didn't want to leave his sister-in-law and the children at the cabin, so he decided the youngsters in a packsack and strapped it to his back.

The group, after walking all day round lakes and hills, reached Nicholson at dusk. Eugene said he had to stop every hour for rest.

A search party was flown into the area to hunt for Ralph.

Archbishop To Stay in Rome Until Consistory

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—Archbishop Paul-Emile Leger of Montreal said that in making him a cardinal-elect the Pope has honored the "small and industrious people of Canada."

The archbishop, at 48 the youngest of the five Canadian prelates nominated Saturday to the College of Cardinals and second youngest ever to be nominated, handed a statement to reporters.

Archbishop Leger said he had planned to leave Rome shortly for Lourdes on his way home to Canada, but the announcement made him change his plans.

He said he will remain in Rome until the consistory in January.

Nightingales Back In Berkeley Square On Coronation Day

LONDON (AP) — Berkeley Square will have those nightingales for the Coronation June 2, and it's going to be a beautiful, but they won't sing.

It is in line part of the Mayfair Association's plans to brighten up the famous square for the big event.

But because they can't cage a real nightingale, it was decided to put up life-size, life-like artificial nightingales among pink and white rose garlands.

PENITENTIARY

The penitentiary population, which had climbed steadily since 1943 when it was 2,968, totalled 4,687 this year against 4,817 in 1951. Of the total, 40.05 per cent were repeaters, up slightly from 39.01 per cent in 1951 but down from the 43.45 per cent who were repeaters in 1946 when Canada's penal "new deal" began as a result of recommendations by a royal commission.

A total of 1,073 or 22.89 per cent had no previous record compared to 22.70 per cent with no previous record in 1951.

The privileges allowed prisoners during the last three years have had a "remarkable effect on their behavior," said the commissioner. The number of offence reports was 9,063 in 1950 and 4,576 in 1951. This year offences totalled 4,006 or less than one per prisoner.

At the end of the fiscal year March 31 last the penitentiary population included 485 inmates under 21 years of age compared with 520 the previous year.

Cow Pasture Landings

The airports at Minsk, Moscow and Irkutsk can, I believe, be classed as modern. They boast several runways and the installations appear adequate. But such is not the case of Kazan, Sverdlovsk, Omsk, Krasnoyarsk or Yoroshirsk. The runways often seem much too short for larger airships. Three times our ship had to land on and take off from open fields because the only runway was being repaired. The runways are often isolated from the airport by endless fields of mud. At Kazan and at Sverdlovsk a small bus is pressed into service to carry passengers from the plane to the airport. Otherwise they would cover the distance ankle deep in mud.

It seems a great number of people travel by air in Siberia. This no doubt results from the great distances. But the freakish schedules cause interminable hours of waiting at airports for airline customers. The sight of thirty, forty, or fifty people asleep in Siberian airport waiting rooms is a common one; men, women and children stretched out on benches or the floor, heads pillowed on baggage. Rather like a railway station when the local train is 12 hours late.

The Siberian landscape is strikingly reminiscent of the plains of Western Canada, with the same topography and same vegetation of birch and popar. Fields of grain stretch out interminably with the same monotony.

At the time of our outgoing trip (September 22, 23 and 24) the harvest was already finished. Here and there the straw piles left by the threshers could be spotted from the air. Many fields were in fall plowing. On our return (October 30) the country was already in the grip of snow and ice.

No Accidents in U.S.S.R.?

According to communists, there are very few plane crashes in the U.S.S.R. This is due to the fact, if we are to believe them, that human life is not regardded for profits, while in the United States the thirst for gain and commercial competition urges private companies to send planes aloft in any kind of weather. But is it possible to determine whether or not there are aviation accidents in the U.S.S.R.? Even if there were some every day very few people would know about them.

Before leaving, I sought to take out a $50,000 life insurance policy. All the companies I approached declined when they found out I was to travel behind the Iron Curtain. Only Lloyds of London took the risk, and that at a premium cost four times higher than if my travels had been limited to western Europe. Now that I am back, I really can't say that the premium was too high.

WEST HUNTINGDON

ENDEAVORS CLASS

WEST HUNTINGDON — Mr. and Mrs. Mac Sarles opened their home on Thursday evening for the members of Endeavors' Class to hold their November meeting. Mr. Dan Cooke presided.

Following the business period, the Hammond sisters contributed a duet.

Guests Present

The guests for the evening were then introduced and were: Rev. and Mrs. J. Pyonter of Madoc. It was an extra treat to have the Pyonters present as all the members listened to their radio program over CJBQ at Belleville on Sunday morning.

Mr. Pyonter gave the special address for the evening and Mrs. Pyonter gave a reading and also conducted the Scriptural reading.

The group also gave leadership in singing some favorite choruses as well as duets, etc.

Mr. Philip Carr voiced the appreciation of the class to Mr. and Mrs. Pyonter for their excellent program and Mr. and Mrs. Sarles for opening their home.

At the conclusion Mrs. Sarles served refreshments. There was a good attendance.

Officers Elected

The West Huntingdon Cheese Manufacturing Company held its annual meeting in the Orange Hall on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Barton Haggerty presided over the gathering. Mr. Morley Haggerty gave a resume of the year's activities. Mr. George Ashley gave the auditors report.

Election of officers for 1953 resulted in following names being submitted:

Directors: George Ashley, John Jeffrey, John McInroy, Morley Haggerty, Ray Donnan, Vincent Farrell and Russell Sills.

A president will be chosen from the directors. Due to the unsettled conditions of the cheese industry the hiring of a cheese maker and letting milk routes will be held at a later date in January.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Carr attended the Maxwell-Brummell wedding on Saturday afternoon at Massassaga.

Rev. R. L. Norman was a dinner guest on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Cooke.

Miss Patricia Lockhart of Peterborough was a week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Morley Haggerty.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bateman and baby of Stirling were Sunday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Wright.

Mr. and Mrs. Mac Sarles spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Desmond Gunnis of Frankford.

Mrs. J. Cathcart and daughter of Belleville were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. John McGrath.

Mr. James McGrath of Oshawa is spending a few days with Mr. Michael Kerby and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Rollins and Mrs. Tom Rollins of Belleville were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Don Fargey.

Rev. and Mrs. Pyonter of Madoc were tea hour guests on Thursday evening of Sarah and Arthur Wilson.

Cottage prayer meeting was held on Wednesday evening at home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Carr and was in charge of Mr. John Lainson.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Post, Kenneth and Brenda were Sunday evening guests of Mrs. Sandy McCurdy, Joan and Don of Frankford.

Those from this area who attended the sessions of Belleville Presbyterial held at Cannifton United Church on Tuesday were: Rev. B. Beckel, Ernest Sarles, William Johnson, Earl Holland, H. R. Burke and Arthur Wilson.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Clayton Hutchison of Detroit, Michigan, and Mr. Clarence Keith of Oshawa, are guests of their cousin, Mrs. John Exley, Bridge street.

Massassaga Couple Celebrate Their Golden Anniversary

Wedding bells recently rang again for Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Brummel, of Belleville R.R. No. 7, at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dubois (Hilda) of Picton, R.R. No. 6, on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary. Six of their seven children were present for this outstanding event, including Grayson, Erick, Linda, Mrs. Herman Abbey and family, who came 350 miles from Breezebridge), Adam, Ruth and Marshall.

Fifty years ago, on November 19th, 1902, Mr. and Mrs. Brummel were united in marriage by the Rev. Edward Harper Johnson in the Mount Pleasant parsonage in Hallowell township. Following a 6.00 a.m. chicken breakfast provided by Mrs. Salisbury at Crofton, they drove with horse and buggy to the parsonage, and from there to the ferry for Dorchester where they had dinner at the hotel.

Later, they left for the 16 mile trip to Selby for the wedding supper with Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Williams. The next day they drove to Kingston where they were overnight guests of the Reverend Orland Dorland, leaving early next day for Watertown where they spent several days.

Snow Closes Ferry

On their return, they found the Dorchester ferry tied up because of snow, so took the long way home. The Belleville to Kingston highway was then the old York Road, with two toll gates between Napanee and Kingston, where a fee of two cents was paid before being allowed to pass through.

Mr. and Mrs. Brummel are a highly respected couple of Massassaga, active in church and community affairs. For several years Mr. Brummel was superintendent of the Sunday School and also acted as teacher. Mrs. Brummel was also a teacher in the Sunday School. She has recently had a book of her own poems published under the title, "Home Poems" by E. Pearl Ballard-Brummel.

All their seven children are married. They have 23 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

They are looking forward to spending some time next spring with the only one of their children not present for this memorable event, Mrs. Anthony Carter, of Vancouver, who is finishing completion to their 50th wedding anniversary.

Friends, Neighbors Honor 80th Birthday

Friends, neighbors and St. John's Guild gathered at the home of Mrs. William Redner, Herchimer Avenue to celebrate her 80th birthday.

After spending a social hour, the guests returned to the tea room where the tables were beautifully decorated and refreshments were served by the hostess.

Mrs. Redner was the recipient of some lovely gifts, cards and cut flowers from the Guild of which she expressed her thanks to all for their kindnesses and good wishes.

Toasty Tootsies

By TRACY ADRIAN

LET it rain, let it snow—you can buck the weather with the greatest of ease in a pair of warm, dry boots that are completely waterproof.

A new and wonderful advantage is that this type of galosh is light on your feet, yet plenty cozy because of the fleece lining. A flattering pile cuff above the ankle is a protection from chilly breezes and the slide fastener gives the boots a trim look. There is a choice or colors—blue, black, brown red and green.

Glitter and Gay Color Take Lead for Festival Wear

By MURIEL NARAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Glitter and gay color take the lead for festive wear this pre-Coronation Christmas—glitter in evening dresses, in daytime jewelry, hair decorations and slippers.

Colors are rich and deep with the warmth of old claret, the cherry of burgundy, the frosty sparkle of pink champagne and the ice green of mint julep.

Men looking for this year's "special" present can choose ear-rings, chunky gold bracelets and marquisate rings to go with smooth satin evening gowns, rich brocades and frothy tulles.

Royal Fashion

Long glitter brooches have stepped up in favor since Queen Mother Elizabeth wore a diamond flower brooch about six inches long at the Oct. 23 society wedding of Lord Ogilvy and his American bride, Virginia Fynn.

Another popular choice is a "diamond" pin brooch in fern shape with six single fronds stretching outwards from a jewelled centre. This can be worn on a plain suit coat or pinned to the halter neckline of a gleaming satin evening dress, teamed with a four-strand bracelet and double-strand ear-rings.

Other fashions to bear in mind and the need for evening jewelry for the balls and parties that will take place throughout the country, jewelers are rising to the occasion with tempting sets. One example is a single strand of rhinestones forming a necklace with, twisted, drop front, having matching chandelier ear-rings brooch and ring. The set costs just under £5, and the pieces can be purchased separately.

For jumpers and suits, an effective "new" line is heavy oxidized metal brooch-and-cuver in gift sets with early English decorative symbols. Perhaps most popular, however, are heavy gold plate fittings gold bracelets and "slave" necklaces, for those who prefer an "arty" slant in evening wear.

Miss D. Connor Gives Talk to Chatterton W.I.

Halloway—The Chatterton Women's Institute November meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Floyd McGinnis. Subject for meeting "Health."

The guest speaker was Miss Dorothy Connor, Victorian Order Nurse of Belleville. There were 15 present, a nice number for the Institute.

Why are hospitals overcrowded was answered by the following reasons: Hospitalization plans more people in the land; seemingly more accidents, doctors want people to come to hospitals, and if a bone is broken, it has to be X-rayed before it is set.

The guest speaker Miss Dorothy Connor was introduced by Mrs. D. Smith, Reg. N., a member of the branch. Miss Connor received a warm welcome as she came home to Marsh Hill her girlhood home to address Chatterton Institute. All are happy to claim her as one of the local girls and also deeply impressed in the life work she has chosen in service to humanity. Miss Connor said the organization was National with headquarters in Ottawa, and all nurses were appointed by National staff. There are 60 in Montreal, and 103 in Toronto.

Given Charter

In 1929 they were given their charter. The work of organization originated from Queen Victoria. The service is a visiting nursing service. Their working hours are eight and visits are from one and one-half hours to two. Cases of need get the same care as those who are able to pay the $3 call.

She told of many cases where young mothers were not enlightened in maternity cases and almost fraulds in care of new baby where possibly an older child in the home was resentful over the new baby. Mother was in great pilght to know how to quiet and care for both and how overjoyed to see the nurse come in on her call.

Mrs. Leonard Prest graciously thanks Miss Connor.

In the business the Victorian Order of Nurses was voted $10. Attended Committee

It was gratifying to know nine of the members attended the Belleville Area convention as it is better than a report no matter how well given.

Twenty-five dollars were donated to Mrs. Keith of Halloway a lady from Holland who fell and broke her leg and is in Belleville hospital.

Four dollars was given for Cleb Gift Fund.

There were also several interesting readings given and after the enjoyable meeting was closed, refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. MacGinnis.

Queen Attends Her First Concert

Smiling graciously during bows and curtains of guests is Queen Elizabeth II, after she and the Duke of Edinburgh attended the St. Cecilia Festival Concert in London. The Duke can be seen just behind the Queen, left, shaking hands with another of the guests presented to them after the concert. It was Queen Elizabeth's first royal concert as British sovereign. — Central Press Canadian.

Canniffon-Corbyville W.I. Enjoys Four Films

The November meeting of the Canniffon Corbyville Women's Institute was held at the home of the president, Mrs. Florence Bleeckman with 19 members, one visitor and three children present.

It was decided to give $100 towards building bleachers for the Canniffon-Corbyville ball teams new ball field at Corbyville which has been lent by the Corby Distillery.

A basket is being put in Windsor's store for contributions to make up Christmas parcels for needy families in the village.

After the business was completed Mrs. Mary Plumpton took charge of the meeting and introduced Mrs. Bill Parry who showed four moving pictures which were greatly enjoyed.

Refreshments were served by the ladies after which a vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Bleeckman for opening her home.

The Christmas meeting was voted to be held in the town hall early in December.

Women's Institute

CHAPMAN W.I.

The regular meeting of Chapman W.I. was held recently at the home of Mrs. Fred McCaw, with 24 members and six visitors present, one of whom joined during the meeting.

An interesting program on "Health" was prepared by the leader, Mrs. William Boothe. Mrs. Stanley Bateman read an extremely informative article on "Tetradrycin", which told of its discovery, its uses, and its attributes over other drugs of similar nature. Mrs. Roy Jones read an article on "Caring for the Teeth". Some of the points to keep in mind being, keep in good condition; rout the bacteria; and have a wholesome diet so as to avoid placing and too many sweets. Mrs. W. E. Bateman gave an amusing reading, "Cold Was in the Nursery", Community singing was also enjoyed.

Mrs. Robert Wheeler gave an account of part of the Belleville Area convention. The six districts in the area all reported great progress in the past 25 years, club work receiving a high place in each district.

Mrs. H. Countryman reported on "Agriculture" in a reading on the care of garden tools and equipment before storing for winter. For "Citizenship", Mrs. H. Elliott read of the law that makes it possible for women to now serve on juries. Another short paper stated that good citizenship makes poor subjects for dictators.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Lincoln Elliott in the form of a pot-luck supper, to which the families of the members will be invited. A film is to be procured from the Belleville and Area Film Council to be shown at this meeting. A penny table, and the regular exchange of Christmas gifts will form part of the program.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served by Mrs. Borden Countryman, Mrs. W. E. Bateman, Mrs. Dewey Kleinsteuber, Mrs. James Gunning and Mrs. Fred McCaw.

RESTRICT FATHY'S STAY

NEW YORK (AP)—Fashion designer Jacques Fath, arriving here from France, was taken into custody by immigration officials Saturday, but later it was announced he would be released conditionally. Edward J. Shaughnessy, head of the immigration service, said Fath must not stay in the U.S. more than 10 days. He said the action was taken "for security reasons."

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Bleating should call guests it's to be a "television evening"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have just acquired a very fine television set, and we are planning to give several Sunday evening buffet suppers to be followed by television. My husband isn't as thrilled with television as I am, and he maintains that we should tell our guests, when we invite them, that we plan to watch television after supper. He says that personally he'd be "morally obliged" to be told beforehand. I don't think this is necessary. Still it might even give the impression that we're bragging about having the new set. Which is right? M.

Your husband has the right idea! A guest should be told in what form of entertainment he or she is being invited. Sunday evening is an important social evening for most people, and, believe it or not, some people don't want to spend the whole evening watching television, either at home or at a friend's house. So it's fair and polite to give them an opportunity to reject the invitation if they wish.

Not necessary to return calls of sympathy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband, my mother, and I moved to this development two months last year, and as my husband was extremely busy starting a new business connection and my mother was not very well, there hasn't been much opportunity for us to know many of our neighbors. But they have been very kind and sympathetic when my mother passed on, many of them even having called to leave a message of sympathy. Is it a "must" that I return those calls? I would like very much to, Mrs. Beeckman, but it would be very awkward for me.

Not at all necessary for you to return these calls of sympathy, dear lady. Get out of it entirely. Later, when it will be easier for her to speak of the subject, the calls, thank your kind neighbors as you chance to meet them.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Two questions about my wedding reception, please. (1) My mother and father are divorced. My aunt, my mother's sister, is my godmother, and she and I love each other dearly. Would it be correct for her to stand in the receiving-line, since she is my representative of my mother? If so, would my father also stand in the line as I would like to have him do?

(2) I understand that very often the groom's father does not stand in the receiving line. But I would very much like to have my groom's father stand with the groom's mother in the line. He is from a distant state and so will not know many people at the reception, and he's so charming and distinguished-looking that I'd like to show him off! What's your advice? —Beatrice R.

(1) Yes, a very fine and loving plan. I suggest your father, as host, stand first in the line, then your aunt as godmother. (2) By all means invite your groom's father to stand in the receiving-line, for all the delightful reasons you have named, and also so that he and the groom's mother will be on location to receive introductions and to feel that they are an important part of the wedding procedures.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I are going to give a dinner, of some formality in honor of a distant relative of his, a young girl whose engagement has recently been announced. More than half of the guests will be older friends of the family. Where should I seat the girl at table? —A. L.

Since the engaged girl is so definitely the guest of honor at your dinner, she should be given the seat at the right of the host.

RAID GAMBLING CASINO

DETROIT (CP)—Fifty men were arrested Sunday following a predawn police raid on River Rouge Anglers and Social Club at suburban River Rouge where, police said, a gambling casino was operated. Police charged their way through two doors to gain entrance. Justice of the Peace Roy Hall imposed fines ranging from $25 to $50 each on some of the men charged with frequenting a gaming establishment. Eleven others were held for investigation of maintaining and operating a gambling establishment.

~ HYACINTHS ~
~ Sturdy, Fragrant & Colorful ~
"THE PRESENCES OF GOD'S MYSTERIOUS POWER MADE MANIFEST IN NATURE'S SOVEREIGNTY."
--Wordsworth

• HYACINTH LADY DERBY •

Dutch hyacinths take an important part in the colour scheme of the spring garden. They are hybrids from the Mediterranean area, and as formal bedding plants, have been widely used since the 16th century. They should be planted in groups in front of the shrubbery border, or among perennials. Plant bulbs 4 inches deep.

Set the bulbs in well-enriched, sandy soil. Do not allow manure to contact the roots. Hyacinths require a light covering of straw or leaves before the ground freezes. Plant bulbs in five inches deep, and six inches apart. For garden use the second size bulbs are recommended—as the flowers from the larger bulbs are so big that a strong wind will blow them over—about that double type.

BEAUTY Neat Touch

Trimming down the waistline

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Every spring and every autumn, dress designers lay down the laws and ladies of fashion follow them to the letter. They determine the length of the skirt, the kind of fabrics to be worn, the colors that will prevail. And always, some place in these interesting announcements, is the joyful "Waists must be small and trim." Fine and dandy. Some waists are; some aren't. If yours isn't, what are you going to do about it? Of course you should have been warned when that extra spare inch arrived. One inch, more inches. And along with the waist, the hips start on a policy of expansion. Frocks must be a size larger. The youthful silhouette is on the wane.

This three-in-one exercise will turn the trick.

What women are likely to forget is that fat cells have a way of settling on specific parts of the body, and, since the mid-section gets less exercise than the arms and legs, that seems to be the favorite lodging place. Of course, posture has something to do with it. Unless you stand, sit and walk with your shoulders stretched to the limit, as it should be, there will be flabby folds of body or the belt. Correct posture keeps muscles strong and in place, keeps fat cells away.

If there is an inclination to gain inches and ounces, it is wise to cut down on the calorie intake. The builders of adipose tissue are sweets, starches and fats. It is easy enough to reduce them to the limit. Some are needed, however, as they create energy. Butter, cream, fat meats, rich sauces and pastries should be limited.

If the gain is only in the mid-section, ten minutes given over each day to muscle-toning and fat-destroying exercises will bring rewards. In reducing salons these calisthenics are insisted upon. Even short daily periods of stretching, bending and torso-twisting will take two inches from the waistline, and three or four from the hips, in the course of a few months. Is it worth trying? It is. If you don't do something, you will find yourself buying dresses in the stylish stout's department.

Here is a three-in-one exercise that will turn the trick:

Stand tall, with arms stretched high and hands together. Sway the upper portion of your body forward as far as you can, then back, keeping the feet firmly planted, and with a consciousness of stretching from the knees up. Do this twenty times. Relax; take a deep breath. Then, from the stretched-high position, with hands overhead, touch the floor without bending the knees.

traneous detail. A good traveler would be this tasseled stocking cap, fashioned of fireman's red wool jersey. As depicted here, it is worn back and drapes around the front where it is knotted, the tassel falling loosely. Two long slender pheasant feathers trail over the front of the cloche of deep piled, long haired, brushed felt. The crown is head-fitting and the brim is slit at one side where it is deep-dipping.

Beulah! Peel Me a Grape

By Mary Moore

Periodically I go on an economy spree and resolve to save some funds for Christmas shopping. I'll bet you do too.

When I saw a sign "Malaga Grapes, Special, 10 Cents per Pound" I promptly selected two of the largest reddest bunches I could find, for I wanted to take a tasty morsel of something to a sick neighbor and had an idea.

I peeled and seeded a pound of these grapes. It took me 20 minutes. I turned them into a little jar with a pretty cover and then put on my coat and took off for my sick friend's home. It was just before her dinner time so she had some of them for her dessert, and according to her report were refreshing and delicious.

Total cost: Ten Cents and Twenty minutes.

Another grape idea requires peeling and seeding them too, so if you have a scarcity of money, a little extra time, and guests are expected serve.

HEAVENLY GRAPE PIE

Meringue Crust: Sift together 1 cup sugar and ½ teaspoon cream of tartar. Beat 4 egg whites until stiff but not dry, then gradually add the sugar mixture, beating until thoroughly blended. Use this to line bottom of a 9 or 10-inch well-greased pie plate (preferably glass) and hollow out the centre but do not spread too close to rim. Bake in slow oven of 275 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour. Cool.

Peel and seed Emperor or Malaga grapes until you have 2 cups. Fold these into 1 or 2 cups heavy cream which has been whipped until very stiff. (Excess juice should be drained from peeled grapes.) If desired cream may be sweetened slightly but we did not sweeten it for the meringue is very sweet you know. We used extra grapes to garnish this filling when it was turned into the meringue crust. Sliced cherries would be pretty too. We serve this at a coffee party. The comments were music to my ears.

Alternate Filling: Lemon: Beat 4 egg yolks slightly and stir into them ¾ cup sugar, 3 tablespoons lemon juice and 1 tablespoon finely grated lemon rind. Stir this in top of double boiler, over boiling water until very thick. Remove from heat and cool. Whip 2 cups heavy cream until stiff. Combine half of it with the lemon-egg mixture and use to fill cooled pie shell. Cover with remaining whipped cream. Chill overnight.

CALIFORNIA FRUIT CUP

One cup each seeded and peeled Emperor grapes (or unpeeled seedless green grapes), 1 cup pine juice canned Mandarin oranges 1 cup pine juice grapefruit sections cut from skin and membranes, 1 cup drained canned pears cut in ½-inch cubes, ½ cup sliced maraschino cherries plus juice. Combine and chill. This does not require additional sugar if the juices as suggested are used. These amounts will serve 8 daintily for a first-course fruit cup or 6 a little more generously if used for dessert with crakers and blue cheese.

GRAPE AND ORANGE JUICE COCKTAIL

Two cups seedless green grapes (or peeled and seeded Emperor grapes), 2 cups unstrained orange juice, 1½ tablespoons combined or fresh lime juice or lemon juice, fresh mint. Chill grapes thoroughly. One – half hour before time for serving, arrange 1-3 grapes in each of 6 sherbet glasses. Combine the orange juice and lime juice, add sweeten if desired. Stir well and pour over the grapes, allowing ½ cup juices for each glass. Chill until ready to serve then garnish each with daintly sprig of mint.

I have a grape jelly calling for halving and seeding of grapes but one would care for it enough to write.

MOUNTAIN VIEW

Mountain View — On Friday evening the annual Christmas banquet sponsored by Mountain View Women's Institute was held in the church parlors.

The tables were decorated with beautiful bouquets of mums, supplied by Mr. S. Barber and Sons, and laden with many delicacies. 60 members and their families sat down to this sumptuous meal, after which a program followed.

Several of the girls who had completed a project of the Girls' Club were each presented with a silver spoon from the Institute, donated by the Institute and presented by Mrs. Ben Anderson.

The leader, Mrs. Harold Motley, was presented with a gift, also Mrs. R. Hall, who had acted as Institute president for three years.

Miss Lois Dexter then favored with a piano solo.

The guest speaker of the evening was Mr. G. Wishart, of Belleville, who was introduced by Mr. Clifford Barber.

Mr. Wishart showed films taken while in the British Isles and also on the continent, explaining them as the pictures appeared. These proved most interesting and when finished Mrs. Barber moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Wishart and also to Mrs. Wishart, who helped in showing the films.

Mrs. W. Hamilton and children of Belleville, spent Sunday evening with Mrs. F. B. Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jones and Mrs. Everett Jones spent a day recently in Toronto.

Miss Lillian Sprague has returned to her home from Belleville General Hospital, where she has been a patient for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Sprung, in company with Mrs. C. Frederick and Miss Noreen Frederick, of Belleville, spent a day recently in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Anderson, Miss Lillian Sprague and Mrs. Alfred Porte attended installation of Quinte Chapter at Amelisburg on Thursday evening.

Miss Elizabeth Jordan, of Picton, has been a house guest for several days of Mr. and Mrs. C. Sprung and also called on many of her old friends and neighbors.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Herrington called at the home of Mrs. Ed. Christie on Sunday afternoon.

Early History of Hubble Hill Now Known as Mount Pleasant Compiled by Dr. Mack, Detroit

RAWDON (Special) — The early history of Rawdon township, now known as Mount Pleasant community in Rawdon township, was compiled by Dr. Mack, Detroit, Michigan. He is a noted student of pioneer history and has written many articles about the early settlers. Dr. Mack has obtained his information from public records, from the written records of his father, Rev. Henry Mack and from various other authentic sources. He has forwarded the "Hubble Hill History to Mrs. Percy MacMullen, "Stirling Ledger," Stirling R.R. 2, in the hope that many Rawdon residents will be privileged to read it and that members of the Hubble and Mack clan will value it and keep it for reference.

A letter to the Hon. Peter Russell, Administrator of the Government of Upper Canada was read in Council and is as follows: The "petition of Nehemiah Hubble humbly sheweth: That your Memorialist served His Majesty from the year 1776 to the resolution in the year of our Lord 1783, as a soldier in the Prince of Wales Regiment, a Provincial Corps, Commanded by Col. Rowan, which was raised in this Province since 1778, with a large family consisting of his wife and nine children. He has drawn no lands, therefore prays your Honour in Council to order him a location of land adequate to his services, etc., and your Memorialist as in duty bound will ever pray. This letter was dated at Prestown, May 25th, 1797.

On February 4th, 1833, Surveyor General Ridout stated that Myer Hubble (the aforesaid Nehemiah) was located on Lot 20, Concession 3, Rawdon township.

Land Certificate Issued

On March 7th, 1833, an affidavit at Cramahi stated that Nehemiah (alias Myer) Hubble was living on Lot 20, Con. 3, and that he had lived there upwards of 20 years, A land certificate for this lot was issued to him September 26th, 1833 and the Crown Deed October 4th 1833.

The first settlers at Hubble Hill were Nehemiah Hubble and Baron Hubble, who came in 1797 according to the Belleville Registrar Office. Elijah Allen was the eldest son of the above Nehemiah. He married Fanny Chard, a sister of Dr. Mack's great grandmother Mary (Polly) Chard. Elijah, better known as Allen, obtained Land Certificate for Lot 19, Con. 2, Rawdon township, Sept. 26th, 1833 and the Crown Deed Oct. 4th that year. An affidavit of Cramahi stated that at that time that he had lived at Hubble Hill upwards of fifteen years.

Reuben Hubble was their son and in his will he states he owned the north half of this lot to him. Reuben married Melissa Moon, January 11th, 1845, with a Baptist minister Elder Geary, performing the marriage ceremony. This Reuben Hubble donated the land (free to all) for Hubble Hill Cemetery, with the provision that one full plot from north to south be reserved for the Hubble family. His great grandson, Clifford Hubble, Glen Ross, is now the director of the burial plots and has the cemetery plan. This Reuben was also a trustee of the Regular Baptist Church of Rawdon, erected at Hubble Hill in 1876.

Nehemiah Hubble the second, was a son of the above, Nehemiah. He married Mary (Polly) Chard in 1806. A Baptist minister, Elder Thos. Geary, performed the wedding ceremony. To them were born Nancy in 1807, Barre in 1810 and Nehemiah in 1812. This Nehemiah, being three months after the death of his father, who served in the War of 1812.

Nancy married Erastus Coe and she died a few days after the birth of their only child Benjamin. Benjamin lived to adulthood, married and moved to the States.

Obtained Crown Deed

Barce, being the eldest son, obtained the Crown deed for the lot the government had allotted to his father. The deed was dated Nov. 13th, 1834. Barce recorded the east half of the lot to his brother Nehemiah the third on December 24th, 1834.

Dr. Mack's great grandfather, Daniel Mack, a native of Connecticut, married Polly in 1813, three years after her first husband's death. The father of Fanny and Polly Chard also came to Canada from Connecticut. The Mack's continued to live on Lot 19, Con. three, and each year they cleared more land for farm purposes. They built a much larger home and barn of log architecture and here were born to them seven sons and a daughter, who died in infancy. Although Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Mack had cleared and improved the land and had raised the Hubble children by the first marriage, they decided to turn over Lot 19, Con. 3, with all improvements to the Hubble children as they were now approaching adulthood.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Mack then moved to Wellman's Corners, and they were the second settlers there far north in Rawdon township at that time. They purchased the west half of Lot 16, Con. 6 from Tom Wellman, Jan. 15th, 1838. This property was of course unimproved and again they hewed out of the forest another home and began to earn a livelihood for themselves and their family. Here they lived until their deaths in 1869 and 1874 and both are buried in The Wellman's Corners Burying Ground, (as called at that time). Part of the land for this cemetery was donated to the trustees, June 7th, 1865 by their son who was Dr. Mack's grandfather, the late David Mack.

Barce Hubble, the eldest son of Nehemiah the second, married, and a son George went to the States while their daughter, Miriam, married Francis Harlow, son of Hezekiah and Julia (Wise or Weese) Harlow. In 1856 Miriam Francis Harlow, Erastus, Mack and Daniel Mack Jr. went west to Wisconsin, U.S.A., and a year later their families left. Hubble Hill and joined the men in the States.

Deeded Land

Nehemiah Hubble the third was born, lived, died and is buried on Lot 19, Con. 3, Rawdon, in a small burial plot on that farm. Nehemiah married twice but he had no children. He was a deacon and trustee of the fifth line Baptist Church. Barney, he and his wife donated the land for the Hubble Hill Methodist Church (now known as Mount Pleasant United Church). They also deeded land for the Regular Baptist Church of Rawdon at Hubble Hill, which was a branch of the Stirling Church. The land reverted back to the property when the church was moved to the top of the hill in 1929 and became Mount Pleasant Church Hall.

William Henry Scott and his son Clarence Scott are the present owners and they occupy part of Lot 18, W. H. Scott is a great grandson of Mary (Polly) Chard Hubble Mack, first settler. He obtained the east half from Nehemiah the third; thus it has been in the family continuously since it was obtained from the government about 150 years ago.

It would appear that Hubble Hill originally was rightly named, that is after the first settlers, the Hubble Family.

Among other children of Nehemiah the first were James, Peter and Reuben. Two sons of Ira and Mary (Harlow) Hubble Hezekiah and John Hubble went to Wisconsin, U.S.A., in 1877 and 1880 respectively.

The Regular Baptist Church of Rawdon was built at Hubble Hill in 1876. The trustees at that time were Messrs. Reuben Hubble, Henry White, Frederick Hubble, Silas Sine, Allen Sine and David Mack. In 1916 when the property was first sold the trustees were Messrs. Henry White, Ernest White, W. H. Waller, Lewis Green, Walter Scott, Elgin Chard and Jonathan S. Chard. Only three of those men are living now, Ernest White, at Mount Pleasant; Walter Scott, at Wellman's, and Lewis Green, at Marmora.

First Burial

The first service held in the church was a funeral service for Daniel Chard, a cousin of Reuben Hubble, Nehemiah Hubble and David Mack. He lived in Seymour township near Chard's Bridge and died in 1870. He was the first burial in Hubble Hill cemetery. His wife was Debby and they had a son Elgar and a daughter Rebecca and there may have been other children.

Dr. Harry Mack's father, Rev. Henry Wilson Mack, born at Wellman's Corners and a Baptist Minister for over 40 years preached his first sermon in the Hubble Hill Baptist Church and his son in Detroit has those sermon notes. Dr. Mack's grandparents, David Mack and Allen Sine, with other close relatives and friends built the Regular Baptist Church at Rawdon at Hubble Hill. At the time of the 1876 were relatives of Dr. Mack and all the 1914 trustees were relatives except W. H. Waller and Dr. Mack says "he could have been."

Dr. Mack says it is a little satisfying to me to know that the former church now known as Mount Pleasant Church Hall is still being used in connection with a religious organization, that is for religious purposes, even the Baptist Doctrine in whole is not being expounded.

Dr. Mack plans to visit Rawdon relatives and friends in 1953 in connection with St. Paul's, Stirling, Centennial services.

This is just a brief sketch of some of the Hubble families but there were many others who lived here and there in what is now known as the Mount Pleasant Community.

MARYSVILLE

Marysville — The friends of Mrs. Patrick Farrell are sorry to hear she is on the sick list.

Mr. L. McGuiness and Joseph McCambridge spent the weekend in Toronto and while there attended the Royal Winter Fair.

Miss Margaret McAlpine, Belleville, spent the weekend with her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Leo McAlpine.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brennan have returned to their home after spending the summer months in Tweed.

Miss Monica Walsh, Belleville, was a weekend guest of her mother, Mrs. J. W. Walsh.

Rev. Father L. F. Donoghue spent Monday in Kingston.

The million dollar rain which visited the district the past week was very welcome as many farmers' wells were dry and they had to haul water some distance for their livestock.

MARMORA

GLEE CLUB

MARMORA—The Glee Club of St. Andrew's Church, Marmora, held its pre-Christmas meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. T. E. Potts, with a good attendance of members.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Austin Lowery, the meeting was conducted by the treasurer, Mrs. Charles Sophe.

A series of readings, comical and educational, were contributed by the members. An exchange of Christmas gifts was the concluding item of the program, following which, pleasing refreshments were served.

Argonauts Didn't Win Grey Cup 'We Gave It to Them', Say Eskys

By BRUCE PHILLIPS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—History and the scoreboard to the contrary, Edmonton Eskimos think Toronto Argonauts didn't win the Grey cup. The Eskies say they gave it away.

Startling concession that Argos were ever in Varsity Stadium Saturday for the Canadian Rugby title was offered practically every reason for their 21-11 defeat except the other side's ability to score more points.

In the dressing room after the game, the Western champions said their own mistakes cost them the game and the Argos "would finish fourth in our league."

Their remarks about their own performance appeared to have some foundation in truth. They were guilty of unprofessional boners that gave the Argos two touchdowns and set up a third.

Representative of the team's feelings were the words of coach Frank Filchock: "The officials were our worst enemies." He said the Eskimos were better in every department except pass defence, the very thing Toronto exploited to the fullest. Filchock was anything but downhearted as he joked with team officials and visiting players.

Most of the players agreed the play which finished Toronto's chances came in the third quarter when the Argos were in scoring position, trailing 15-11.

Quarterback Claude Arnold threw a long pass which Jackie Parker fell short of the line of scrimmage. It bounced into Argo Art Scullion's arms and shortly thereafter Toronto broke loose for a major.

Arnold more or less admitted being in error. "I had to get rid of the ball, and I hoped it would clear the line of scrimmage," he said.

Otherwise, Arnold wasn't inclined to give the Argos too much credit for the win. "We should have beaten the daylights out of them," he said.

Middle Joe Blanchard said the Argos "knew our plays as well as we did. When we went into a play the defensive captain told them the names of the formation. You just couldn't beat those guys."

Einstein Takes Witness Stand For a Friend

The renowned physicist, 73, took the witness stand Friday on behalf of an old friend, physicist Gustav Bucky, 73.

Bucky has brought a patent infringement suit against a New York firm, claiming insufficient royalties for a highly technical medical camera he developed.

Under questioning Einstein said that Bucky had solved a "very difficult" problem in inventing his camera. He launched into a discussion of its workings — so technical and complex that reporters found their note trailing off into unscientific doodlings.

When he finished he fixed his gentle brown eyes on Paul Kolish, Bucky's lawyer, and said: "Is that go so?"

"But I am not a witness," Kolish replied.

"And Mr. Kolish is not an Einstein," said Judge Sylvester Ryan.

Under cross-examination by counsel Emanuel R. Posnack for the defendant, the Corsco Research Corp., New York, Einstein launched into an even more detailed discussion of the camera.

Posnack handed Einstein a pre-trial deposition he had made. After studying it thoughtfully for some time Einstein said he thought one portion needed slight modification.

"Would you say that Einstein had made a mistake?" said Judge Ryan with mock amazement.

Einstein rubbed his nose sheepishly. "Yes, that could be," he said.

The case continues.

Finnish Boy Shot to Death, Father Wounded

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — A 12-year-old Finnish boy was found shot to death in a steam bath building with bullet wounds in his head and chest.

His father lay nearby with a wound between the eyes.

Police discovered a new toy revolver and a 22-calibre rifle with some rounds in the magazine at the scene of Friday's shooting. Weapons from the rifle and toys and family photographs littered the floor.

Hospital attendants said Eric Kalpiainen, 30, has a good chance of recovery.

Chief Constable Tom Connor termed the shooting murder and attempted suicide and said that family trouble was apparently responsible.

The family came to Canada from Finland in May, 1951.

The shooting occurred in a steam bath basement downstairs of the building occupied by the Algoma Steam Baths.

Police said the man had been separated from his wife. Mrs. Kalpiainen went to the police station and reported that her husband had not returned with the boy, who had been visiting him.

Bombers Take Two from Royals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Seattle Bombers had a profitable week-end in the Western Hockey League with two victories.

They edged New Westminster Royals in a home-and-home series 6-5 Saturday night and 6-1 Sunday night.

Gerry Foley scored two for the Bombers in the first game. Lorne Madeau, George Hamamba, Cal Stearns and Doug Macauley notched the others. Bob Love and Jerry Cowell tallied two apiece for the Royals and Gord Fashoway sank one.

Homemade and Macauley each scored twice in Sunday's game with Rudy Filion and Lloyd Ailsby adding the others. Hinky Boyce was the Royals' marksman.

Vancouver Canucks trimmed Tacoma Rockets 4-1 Saturday night. Ian Mackintosh, Ray Manson, Larry Popein and Les Rickey were the goal-getters for Vancouver. Doug Adams tallied for Tacoma.

In other league games, Vancouver Canucks trimmed Tacoma Rockets 4-2 Saturday night and Saskatoon Quakers trampled Calgary Stampeders 5-2 Sunday night.

National Hockey League and now in the hotel business, said that to undertake the project he would require as option for a 10-year lease on a suitable piece of land. The park board referred the plan to city council.

ARGOS DEFEAT ESKYS 21-11 TO WIN GREY CUP

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

ALL OVER!

King Football Is dead! Long live the Pinskin!

It's all over for the gridirons. The Grey Cup pastime came again in familiar surroundings in the Argonaut dynasty. Not a few Eskimo "bucks" nestle more or less comfortably in Argonaut supporters' laps. "Nine Grey Cup" is beaming with 35,000 words of prose and the problem of how to get that gift automobile back to the homey surroundings of Portage Avenue. Oil's well in Toronto for dinks. The hoof'n mauls once again reign through and didn't the pallid Eskimo grin gleam so brightly through the haze of defeat as did the Argos in the sunshine of victory.

Toasts were drank. The victors were acclaimed. The losers again were "the best team to represent the west." They were given the full honors as are accorded the vanquished. Football stories in banquet hall, reception room and hotel rotunda, jangled the nerves with erations on the breezy brilliance of Jeff Nixon and the gushing hospitality of the east, all joining in the several choruses of this "great additional connecting of East and West friendship." 'Twas a great day.

If you were one of the "3,000,000" (wonder who was the spotter on that job?) which set with this department on the radio-ists airing their impressions during the short-snort period. The western "finings and McFamees" while they were denied the opportunity of acclaiming a Lochinvar winner, made no place for showing when they slog to the microphone. The western radiocrety's share of the play-by-play was equally as good as that of the representative of the east.

Pall despite the defeat, supporters of the Eskys had their moment. "We've" thrilled to that first quarter touchdown when Normy Kwong skirted the end for the saiter. after that spine-tingling 67-yard gallop of glamour. We've pawned their best four fingernails and' munched a half-dozen dignels in that third quarter when Nobby Wirkowski was tossing strikes straight down the pat to Bruno and O'Connell. We've clicked the heels of our left four yards in the fourth quarter when the "Mo's" seemingly were back in the ballgame. But the Nob bobbed another lob downfield without benefit of any receiver to whack for touch. Gosh! We could have retrieved the pastime for ourselves and oilmen by adoption.

And so ended another Canadian sportsman's "Greatest Show on Earth." The Grey Cup final is rapidly becoming a national sports event in Canada comparable to the English Football Cup Tie event, and of the same high calibre on each side of the border. That it is big business, and growing growing mighty, there is no doubt. The Western Football Council is going to make big favor of it next year. In annual efforts for sectional supremacy on the gridirons, and with it, of course, the honor, glory and gold that goes with the winning, or losing of the Dominion Grey Cup.

And there is an individuality in the Grey Cup celebrations that "Azzy" and "Arriet" from "Amptead" in London, or Gowanus Gus and Bronx Bobby from N'Yawk mise in their respective Fall football fetes.

In Football Cup time at Wembley you're either a "Geordie" from Newcastle, a "Gunner" from the "Harsenal" or a "Spur" from Tottenham and so on, and are distinguishable only by your ribbons and colors. In world series cities you are known by the section you occupy in the park, the raucousness of your rooting voices, and in lots of cases the object of your affection from the financial point of view.

But over here the "East is East and the West is West" and the twain shall be all its colorful individual glory. The panorama splendor and reed sainted "madness" that marked the Calgary Stampeders' invasion of Toronto in 19468, in spurned a new appreciation that is now permanently wed with the football classic. And the post battle highjinks, regardless of winner, round out a trio of events that for sheer spontaneous interest and national interest, has never been equaled in the sports history of the country.

WELL! WELL!

Kingston's gridiron "Major Hoople" whose crystal ball record is perhaps better left in the dark, opined the other day that the Kingston Goodyears, Oshawa Transporters and Stouffville Clippers are the class group of the district Senior "B" hockey group. He commented, after the Belleville Glen Roys 7-6 defeat by Oshawa that the Mohs muskies would not furnish much threat but the Peterborough Petes might give the Goodyear goons trouble.

The Goodies had won four straight when El. Miguel pennant wents to that effect, but while he was in Toronto glimpsing the Grey Cup, the upstarts from Peterborough and Belleville headed the Goodies their second and third defeats in a row if you want to include that 10-4 shellacking Smith's Falls dished out in an exhibition tilt.

Yup, Saturday evening the Petes added insult to injury by tacking a 7-2 setback on the Goodies right in their own ballwick after the Glen had defended them with a 2-2 loss here on Friday. That puts the Petes and Glens just two points behind the Goodies in the sectional standing. Should be good times from here in.

"BESOM AND STANE"

Twenty-four curlers of the city have been invited to play an exhibition curling match with Kingston curlers on the latters' ice next Saturday. The "bonspiel" will start at 2.30 and will be followed by social amenities. President W. C. Geuit of the Belleville Curling Club, is anxious to have the required number of curlers register with him by Wednesday of this week. He can be contacted at the C.N. Express office. The Kingston Curling Club visited the Belleville club last winter and was instrumental in assisting the post-hockey season curling session held in Memorial Arena here.

Don (Junior) Barrett, newly appointed Black Hawk Junior "B" coach, gets his baptism of fire in Kingston tonight when the Hawks tangle with Mac Jackson's Vics in a return mid tilt. The Vics were edged by the Lindsay Warriors 7-1 in the league town the other night and they'll be out looking for the greasy perch at the expense of the Hawks. Kingston, Peterborough and the Hawks are still tied for tops although the latter two have a game in hand. A win for the Hawks tonight will put them out in front, unless Peterborough wins over the Oshawa quality team from Oshawa.

Take Historic Mug 10th Time In Brilliantly-Played Game; Second Title in Three Years

By W. P. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts, perhaps the greatest sportsmen's team in Canadian football, kept intact an unbeaten record for the Dominion championship with a 21-11 victory over Edmonton Eskimos.

The Argos emerged on top Saturday, it was the 10th time they have captured the historic Grey Cup in as many tries. It was the third time in 31 years the Eskies have come out in search of the title and lost.

It is doubtful if the big-doubleblue Toronto team has ever come up with a more brilliantly-executed game. Argos set up a pass defence that not only thwarted the passconscious Eskies time and again but, in the final minutes, led to the Westerners finally passing themselves out of the game victory with an inglorious attempt that was grounded.

Thereby hangs a tale.

There were "turning points" that swung the game first one way and then another before the colorful, record crowd of 27,395 jammed into Varsity Stadium.

The Eskies got the into a 5-0 lead in the first quarter. The Argos caught up on a field goal at the half. Late in the third quarter Edmonton struck a play, that Quarterback Claude Arnold tossing passes right and left.

Trailing 15-11, the Green and Gold team from the West went on the march early in the fourth quarter against a desperate, fighting Argo team. Then came the play that is to be decided the game.

With the ball on the Argo 17-yard line, Arnold took a direct snap from back and faded slightly to the right for a second-down pass. But the Argos had every eligible receiver smothered.

As the Toronto front line crashed through on him, Arnold elected to throw deliberately into the ground instead of taking a yardage loss. But his desperate play didn't reach the scrimmage line and the ball, by the Eskies on this play, Nobby picked out Zeke O'Connor on the left and let fly.

Zeke Zeroes

With no one near him, Zeke gathered in the ball eight yards out and galloped over for the touchdown that made Edmonton's cause practically hopeless.

It was the third and last touchdown for Argos. All were converted by centre Bel Ettinger whose second-quarter placement gave the Toronto team a four-point working margin.

Little Normie Kwong, Edmonton's swift-footed China Clipper, scored both the Western touchdowns. Each time, with the ball about five yards out, Kwong was called from the Eskie bench by coach Frankie Filchock at the behest of the running play through the Argo line.

Arnold's passing paved the way for Edmonton's 5-0 lead in the opening quarter. Passages took a short toss and streaked down the sideline for a 45-yard gain. He was brought down on the 10 and Kwong went over from the five-yard stripe on second down. Balliur Snyder missed the convert.

Argos practically duplicated the pass play in the second quarter. With play at the Toronto 22, Wirkowski sent a long pass to Doug Fyzer that was good for 77 yards. Then from a yard out, Wirkowski smacked through on a quarter-back sneak.

When Ettinger kicked the convert, Argos were in the lead to stay. Before the second quarter ended Ettinger had kicked a field goal from 17 yards out and Billy Bass had scurried over for a touchdown. The major came after Scullion had intercepted a screen pass on the Edmonton 30. Wirkowski's pass to Bruno was good for 18 yards, and on second down Bass slipped through the left side of the Edmonton line for the touchdown.

Edmonton's last touchdown was started from almost on the Eskies' goal line. A fake kick play sent Jimbo Chambers off on a 33-yard run. The Westerners were halted momentarily but after a kicking exchange, Arnold nailed Pantages, Rollo Miller and Rollin Prather with passes. Eight yards from the Argo goal line, Kwong was again called in and again he made good. Snyder converted, and the Argos once more held the 4-point margin. At the height of the Edmonton attack, Toronto's crowded-pass fizzle and the westerners never threatened again.

The Eskies blamed only themselves for the loss. "We made mistakes and they capitalized on them," they said. Their three-week layoff since winning the Western title may have hurt them, but Argos were surfeited with football, playing an extra game on the cross-town Ti-Cats to win the Big Four title in three games for Eskies had to stride the game with Sarnia Imperials, champions of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

The western fan delegation took the defeat philosophically before the game they put on a mile-long parade—bands, floats and marching. A colorful spectacle that had long been part of the Grey cup game. Argonauts welcomed Westerners—headed for home on a special train early Sunday—prepared to stage a homecoming welcome for their defeated but gallant team and to hope for another crack at the Canadian championship next year.

Hershey Bears Nudge Leading Cleveland Barons

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hershey Bears, in a strong drive to take over leadership of the American Hockey League, now are within two points of the league-leading Cleveland Barons.

The Bears nipped Buffalo Bisons 3-2 Sunday, Pittsburgh Hornets scored a 6-2 victory over Providence 8-0, Buffalo and Pittsburgh played to a 3-3 draw, and Cleveland routed Hershey 10-2.

The Bears came back strong after Saturday's humiliating defeat. Two fights enlivened the action. Gerry Sullivan and Jack Hershey with two goals and the other was by Dune Fisher. Harold Jackson and Don Cherry scored for the losers.

Monte McLean scored two goals and assisted in the third to give Ed. Looby Pfyers their win over Pittsburgh. Hornets scored five times in the second period in their win over Providence. Jackie Hamilton got fifth straight loss for the crippled Reds. Ray Laplante and Johnny Michaluk out with injuries.

OUTSIDER WINS RACE

HOWIE, Md. (AP)—A Maryland-bred horse triumphed in the Maryland Gold Cup Saturday as Finnan Dare pulled an upset to take the $50,000-added stake race. The 7-year-old is owned by Walter A. Edgar, president of the Maryland Horse Breeders Association. Campbell Stable's Ann's Love was second by a head. Emil E. Jackson's Caesar Did was third.

Marlies, Irish Win Sunday; Galt Drops Two

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A family feud developed during an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A doubleheader in Toronto.

The battle Sunday involved the James and Chapman clans. Toronto Marlboros' lusty Gerry James drew the wrath of the Chapmans when he boarded youthful Philip of Oshawa Generals, then high-sticked him for seven stitches. Philip Chapman, Sr. was so incensed that he tried to throttle young James and had to be restrained and ejected.

The injury was ruled deliberate and James received a match misconduct and an automatic suspension.

It was a good day for Toronto teams as Marlies won 5-2 and St. Michael's downed the middling Guelph Biltmores 4-2.

Windsor Spitfires seem to have the number of at least one team in the league. They won their fourth in a row Saturday and moved straight from Galt Black Hawks Sunday 3-2 in overtime. Saturday night the Marlboros made it a blank week-end for Galt by dropping the Hawks 5-0.

St. Catharines Teepees struck hot and heavy in the first period in their Saturday night win in Oshawa where they downed the Generals 7-3.

Kitchener - Waterloo Greenshirts started an interlocking schedule tour of Quebec with a 4-3 loss to Three Rivers Reds Saturday night and a 3-3 tie Sunday with Montreal Royals. Quebec Citadelles edged first-place Royals, Canadiens 4-3 in Quebec Sunday.

Even Television Got Excited

TORONTO (CP)—Televising of the Grey cup football game was marred only by a breakdown in the microwave relay equipment which caused a 29-minute cutoff in picture transmission.

A commentator Saturday carried on with a description of the third-quarter play until a punt was climbed 300 feet up the 500-foot steel tower of Toronto's station CBLT and fixed the trouble. The picture resumed at the start of the fourth quarter.

Apart from this interruption, viewers reported excellent reception here in the area within a 80-mile radius of the Toronto station.

HONOR BARKLEY MOVES

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Allie Reynolds, veteran pitcher for New York Yankees, and Darryl Spencer, infielder for Minneapolis in the American Association, were awarded honors Sunday by the National Baseball Congress. Other directors announced Reynolds won the organization's 1952 "achievement plaque." Spencer was voted the NBC graduate to make the best showing in the minor leagues last season.

Stratford Whips Brantford Reds 9-1 Mercs Keep Pace With 2-1 Victory

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Saturday night was the loneliest night of the week for goalie Bill Shirley of Brantford Redmen in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

Shirley handled 44 shots in Stratford Saturday as the league leaders downed Reds 9-1. His teammates managed only 24 on Jerry Herse in the Stratford goal.

Stratford Indians maintained their three-point lead in the standings though second place Owen Sound Mercurys matched their week-end pace by dropping Sarnia Sailors 3-1 in overtime.

The third-place Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen trounced Hamilton 7-2 to stretch the Tabbies' loss record to 15 straight.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior southern group Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Greyhounds stayed in first place as they edged North Bay Trappers 5-4 Saturday. Trappers bounced back Sunday to take the Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Indians 6-2 and move within one point of the leaders.

Ken Schults and Mickey Roth each scored three for the Indians. Herve Delgordy tallied twice and Bill Hill notched a single. Sam Kennedy notched the shutout for Hesse. A third-period penalty to Bill Hill proved costly as vigorously by Shill and Jack Taylor that both received match misconducts.

Veteran forward Mike Bukaschenki scored the overtime goal that gave the Mercurys the win in Sarnia. Pete Payette scored the other Mercury goal in the first period and Ray Leckie notched the Sarnia single in the same frame.

Hamilton Tigers performed as expected in Kitchener. The Dutchies led 5-1 after the first and 6-2 after the second. Howie Lee and Jack McKenzie scored two each for the Kitchener. Bill Mitchell, Al Buchanan and Paul Oliver divided the others. Bill Hammond scored both Tiger goals.

More than 5,000 fans were on hand in Sault Ste. Marie Saturday to watch Terry Bloechl score twice and Ron Lay, Johnny Officiandi and Roy Heximer add singles for the Greyhounds. Al Demarco scored twice for North Bay with others going to Rick Hogg and Jack Hogan.

On Sunday in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., the Trappers fared better as Ab Demarco, Vic Jackson, Bill Dwyer and Rick Hogg shared scoring honors. The Sault goals went to Claude Walters and John Lamlay.

Tonight the Greyhounds and Trappers will meet in North Bay with the leadership at stake. The only other senior game is in Hamilton where Sarnia Sailors take on the Tigers.

Detroit Whips Leafs Twice To Vault Into Second Place; Cut Hawks' Lead

Boston Thumps Canadiens 2-1 To Drop Habs to Third Place; Hawks Come Up With Two Ties

By CRAIG ARMSTRONG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Detroit Red Wings, defending champions of the National Hockey League, are beginning to act more like defending champions.

The Wings whisked front fourth to second place in the league standings as a result of two rough-and victories over the slumping Toronto Maple Leafs.

Saturday night the Wings downed the Leafs 3-2. Sunday night they won by a 6-4 margin. In the other Saturday contest, Chicago and Montreal played to a 1-1 tie. Sunday night Boston defeated Montreal 2-1 and New York and Chicago played to a 1-1 deadlock.

Chicago still leads the league with 26 points. Detroit is three points in the rear, Montreal is third with 23 points, Toronto and Boston tied for fourth spot on two points behind the Canadiens. New York is in the cellar with only 13 points.

First Win

Saturday's Detroit victory was the first for the Wings in four starts against the Leafs in five starts this season. Previously the Leafs had won three and tied one in the two ties.

Detroit scored two goals in the first period on shots by Johnny Wilson and Maggie Bentley and Toronto's Sid Smith tallied in the second period with Howe notching his first before the end of the session. Ted Kennedy, another Leafs' fabby in the period. Early in the third Wilson blasted home his second goal of the game to make it 3-2 and Howe tallied about the last one during a scramble in front of the Toronto nets.

At Boston, Johnny Peirson's first goal in his last 14 games gave the Bruins their 2-1 victory over the Montreal "fire sale" team. Maurice Richard had put the Canadiens into an early third-period lead. Joe Kelley had tied it before the session was over, which latter was a open shot. Then at 7:25 of the third period Johnny Peirson broke and got a combination play with Jack Gelineau and Fleming Mackell bunk. Billy Schmidt scored the other Bruin tally.

Chicago Blackhawks with New York was the third straight tie game for the Black Hawks. In the second period Hy Buller and Ed Kraftcheck of the Rangers and Fred Glover and Cal Gardner of the Hawks staged a near free-for-all. Referee Red Storey gave all four 10 minutes on five penalties to the four, majors for fighting to Gardner and Glover and for roughing to Kraftcheck and minors for high sticking and roughing to Glover.

Eskimos Outpassed Argonauts, But 'Nob The Lob' Tossed Payoff Flips

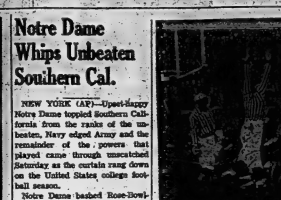
By ED EMSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Edmonton Eskimos were a forward-passing club, but boy passes hurt them.

A glance at the statistics of Saturday's Grey cup final shows that the Eskimos threw more passes than Toronto Argonauts, completed more, had a better percentage of completions and gained more yardage through the air. But the long-payoff passes were tossed by Argo quarterback Nobby Wirkowski.

Wirkowski completed only eight passes in 15 tries while Eskimo quarter Claude Arnold was successful on 16 of his 34 heaves. Edmonton gained 361 yards through the air to Toronto's 252.

But Wirkowski set a Grey cup record by averaging 29.4 yards on his completed passes while Arnold's average pass play traveled only 14.5.



Best Pass of Game

Wirkowski's 51-yard heave to Zeke O'Connor—the only direct touchdown pass of the game—was only the fourth-best of the day in terms of distance. The slickest passing play was the Argo quarterback's heave to Doug Fyzer which netted 78 yards early in the second quarter and led to the first Toronto major two plays later.

Edmonton's best also led to a touchdown. It was from Arnold to Rod Pantages for 63 yards in the first quarter and enabled Normie Kwong to cross the line in another two plays.

Passes set up Edmonton's second touchdown, but the Eskimos did it the hard way. Rollin Prather, Pantages and Rollie Miles grabbed short passes for a total of 45 yards, interspersed by four ground plays, to enable Kwong to score again. Wirkowski's passing performance eclipsed that of Tom O'Malley in the 1951 final. The Ottawa Rough Rider quarter set the previous Grey cup mark by averaging 28.3 yards in five completions for 141 yards on six heaves for Glenn Dobbs of the losing Saskatchewan Roughriders. Like Wirkowski, O'Malley had the poorer percentage of completions on the number of passes thrown.

The brilliant two-way game played by Miles showed up in the statistics as the Edmonton Negro speedster led all players of both clubs in yardage gained. Miles' total was 155 yards, made up of 97 on ground plays, 61 on passes and 58 on runbacks.

FIRST TOUCHDOWN — Quarterback Knobby Wirkowski sneaks across from Edmonton's one-yard line with Toronto Argonaut's first touchdown. Red Ettinger converted for Argos to make it 6-3 in the second quarter. Argos went on to win 21-11 over the Eskimos — for the dominion football title. (CP Photo)

Notre Dame Whips Unbeaten Southern Cal.

NEW YORK (AP)—Upset-happy Notre Dame toppled Southern California from the ranks of the unbeaten, Navy edged Army and the remainder of the powers that played the United States colleges football season.

Notre Dame bashed Rose-Bowl-bound Southern Cal 9-6 while Navy had to sweat out a 7-0 decision over Army.

Now, except for a few contests of minor significance next Saturday, the sport will take a rest for a month. Then, on Jan. 1, the major collegiate again will swing into action in the bowl games.

Southern Cal's demise let just two major teams remain for the season, Michigan State, which concluded operations last week, and Georgia Tech, which recorded its 11th triumph of the campaign Saturday—a 25-9 conquest of Georgia.

Mississippi, which will play Georgia Tech in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day, and State 20-14. Alabama, headed for the Orange Bowl, polished off Auburn 21-0, Tennessee, one of the contestants in the Cotton Bowl, took Vanderbilt 46-6.

Ma:k Il Has Narrow Escape

BOSTON (AP)—Fleming Mackell, Boston Bruins' leading scorer, had a narrow escape from serious injury when he suffered a cut on the left external jugular vein during Boston's 2-1 triumph over Montreal Canadiens Sunday.

Mackell, who has 18 goals already in the campaign, was carrying the puck toward the Canadiens' net at Boston Garden Sunday night when he was dumped by Doug Harvey, rugged Montreal defence man.

Harvey drew a penalty for interference but the neck cut was unintentional.

Canadiens Montreal-born Mackell was able to skate to the Boston dressing room following the mishap, late in the opening period. Five stitches were required to close the wound.

Argos' Clair Coolest Man on Field, After His Team Had Won, That Is

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—If ever a team had a real holler gang urging each other on to the Dominion football championship, it was Toronto Argonaut swifty-changing halfback Orrin Clair.

Offensive and defensive platoons trotted on and off the field Saturday and the chatterbox never let up. Coach Frank Clair paced up and down, a cigaret smoking, suffering figure as each set-back, wringing his hands but never letting his voice when talking to his players.

He singled them out on this and that play, he dashed to the telephone to talk with his spotter, Argo Nick Volpe, sitting high up in the press box, but most of his back-talk was directed at quarterback Nobby Wirkowski, whose pass tossing played a big part in Argos 21-11 victory over Edmonton Eskimos.

"We Did It"

When it was all over, Clair was the calmest man of the howling Argo contingent. With the final gun he said quietly: "We did it."

Then he trotted on the field to congratulate his players, but before he had picked up five yards, Frankie Filchock, Edmonton playing coach and his old buddie in '51 ran up with Washington Redskins, overtook him, shook his hand and said: "Nice going, Frank."

Then came the usual whoop-dedoo in the Argo dressing room. Players prances by yelling, shook hands with each other, back-slapped, with a few extra slaps to Wirkowski and big Al Bruno and Zeke O'Connor, who grabbed a touchdown pass for the points that just about decided the game.

"I think our pass defence was a big factor," said Clair. "And when O'Connor pulled in that pass and scored I felt we were safe. I knew our boys could keep cool, smart football, and that's just what happened. It was the silent effort that won for us. We had been trying to shake O'Connor loose on a play and we did it."

Big Joe Krol, who did the hooking for Argos, was the big hollerer on the bench.

"That's the way to cover Cope," yelled Krol when, Royal Copeland knocked down a pass. With Clair peering at the play, running to the telephone to talk to his spotter, talking to his players as they entered or left the game, here's the way the chatter went:

Bob Marshall: "I can get in there and drive the right half in."

Clair to spotter: "Who was our man offensive on that play?"

Ulysses Curtis when Claude Arnold grounded a pass: "He threw it away, he threw it away."

Clair to spotter: "I want to see if the right half (Fyzer) was open on the last couple of plays."

Clair, whipping around when the ball changed hands: "Let's go, offence."

Early Durocher had indicated he might consider quitting baseball to take a lucrative television offer.

Grey Cup Highlights

By WILFRED GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — How much planning went into that touchdown pass Nobby Wirkowski threw to Zeke O'Connor.

Many of the strategists in the stands at the Grey cup final Saturday noted that the tall outside wing had been Wirkowski's target all day until he caught the 37-yard heave late in the final quarter. They knew Argo coach Frank Clair had planned it from the opening whistle.

Clair denied it after the game. He said the Eskimos watched Zeke closely until the late stages. "We saw they were leaving O'Connor uncovered, so we told Nobby to throw to him," Clair said.

Wirkowski's version was a bit different:

"Every time I came back to the bench Clair told me, 'Now, now.' Finally the coach said 'Now' so I threw to Zeke."

The Royal York Hotel, headquarters for the thousands of football fans who converged on Toronto Saturday, was a madhouse after the game. With all the furniture removed from the lobby, fans milled about constantly. Lobby and corridors echoed to the shouts of the Edmonton and Argonaut fans long into the night.

The City of Toronto tendered a buffet dinner for the Ottawa, Canadian Rugby Union officials and others who have made the Eastern Grey cup an annual classic. Around 500 persons attended and Winnipeg coach Frank Clair kept busy receiving congratulations and explaining key plays. Frank Filchock, the Eskimos' coach, didn't attend.

The only untoward incident during the game occurred after Red Ettinger booted the convert on Argonauts' final touchdown. The ball was grabbed by fans in the end zone and the game held up for about five minutes while one of the officials and police argued with the group. The ball was finally recovered as more policemen walked over to send the fans back to their seats.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A player may bid high, jump to heaven, while resting at Horse Sense, of course. But when I count the scores, he hasn't the ghost of a horse.

♠ 2 3 5 4
♥ K Q J 8 2
♣ 10 4 3 2

South had opened the bidding with one spade and west came in with a simple overcall of two hearts. Everybody sit and scratch the table got into the argument as to what north should do here.

All I know is what I read in my column. Which is that the order of choice of responses is T-A-N-T-akeout, assist, no-trump. And tell the truth to partner at least as it is practical to do so.

The north heart suit is hardly takable. Should north takeout to it? No. When an opponent has just bid a suit, your rejection of such suit is an overcall in opponent's suit; a powerful signal.

With no takeout, look for an assist. North lacks adequate help for an assist of the south spade bid. With neither a takeout nor an assist, look for a response in no-trump.

In answer to an opening one bid, responses may bid one no-trump if he has three high cards. North has only two. Therefore, he lacks one high card of having enough for a true no-trump reply.

In expert play, a responder might say one no-trump on this ace and a queen. But only to give partner another chance to bid. Here it is unnecessary. West has given partner another chance to bid.

When an opponent has bid, partner of opener has not spoken of another call. It is doubtful in case he can defeat the opponent's bid. But if he can't, he here would promise three trump tricks.

Thus, it is not a takeout or an assist or a no-trump or double. If none of these, there is one thing he can do well here. Pass.

The efficiency of T-A-N is too obvious to be ignored. It will take a long time to convince everybody of it. But it's on the way.

U.S. Air Force Maintains Tight Border Patrol

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says today that operators of private aircraft in Canada are warned that the United States air force is maintaining a tight border patrol.

The newspaper says in a Saskatoon from North Battleford that at least two cases American jet fighters have crossed into Canada to investigate planes.

The story says lands and those officials report that two Middle Thomas, pilot of a department photographic plane was photographing Manitoulin Island recently, two U.S. jets swept in from Lake Huron.

"Apparently the security craft had registered on a U.S. radar screen. The American planes came down on two pilots of Thomas' plane. . . . After taking a look at the department plane they flew back across the lake."

The newspaper said that recently a Leavens Brothers aircraft, chartered for photographic work over Niagara peninsula by the forestry branch of the department, was intercepted by two U.S. jet fighters.

"The Canadian pilot refused to obey and landed at St. Catharines. From there he phoned U.S. authorities at Buffalo to state he was doing legitimate work inside Canada."

Steel Workers At Trenton, N.S. Turning Out Shells

TRENTON, N.S. (CP)—Trenton steel workers, one of three Nova Scotia companies in this Province fabricating components for the shell to be filled with explosives. The shell cases and fuses are added elsewhere. Eventually the projectiles will be used by tanks and anti-aircraft guns.

The shell plant is but one phase in the triple-headed operation of Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co. Ltd., the subsidiary holding company of Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation.

This Trenton-New Glasgow area is the oldest heavy manufacturing district in Canada. The country's first steel was produced here in 1882 from iron ore and coal dug in Pictou county.

Harvest Thy Money

At the turn of the century, the basic steel industry moved to Sydney after the discovery of the Pictou county ore and discoveries of new deposits at Wabana, Nfld. But the fabrication part of the steel industry continued. Today, third generation Scots-Canadians ply the same steel-working trades as their forbears.

Some other Dosco-owned plants are Eastern Car Co. Ltd. and Trenton Industries Ltd. Eastern Car turns out 30 gondola cars daily for Canada's railways. Trenton Industries Ltd.—basically a machine shop operation—manufactures the Dosco continuous miner, a mechanized behemoth that chews coal out of a mine face at the rate of eight tons a minute.

CARELESSNESS A CRIME

MOSCOW (AP)—A Moscow court has sentenced an apartment house caretaker to one year's corrective labor in his own organization for criminal carelessness in his work. P. Loginov, the builder, failed to complete the basement waterproofing at both the exterior and interior of an apartment house.

Canadian Govt. Approves Plan To Attach Koreans to Brigade

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (CP)—The Canadian government has approved a plan to attach individual Republic of Korea soldiers to the 25th Canadian brigade, The Canadian Press has learned.

The move is part of a plan to integrate attached RoK troops into United Nations formations. They would be attached as individuals down to the platoon level.

Commonwealth authorities in the Korean theatre are understood to have approved attachment of 1,000 Koreans to the Commonwealth's three brigades. That would give the 7 brigade more than 300 Koreans.

The United States army divisions already are receiving their first drafts of Koreans which would be attached in numbers varying from 1,500 to 2,500.

The equivalent of almost two divisions would be added to UN forces by the addition of an estimated 18,000 to 20,000 men under the plan. The RoK soldiers would continue to be paid by their own government.

The South Korean government is said to have met with mixed feelings the authorization of Gen. James Van Fleet, Eighth Army commander, to make active two more RoK army divisions and five regiments. Gen. Van Fleet has announced receipt of this authority since the United States presidential election.

Korean leaders are said to have expressed preference for attaching men to UN formations as small units with a view to their ultimate grouping into battalions, regiments and divisions.

Unofficial sources say the plan for attaching RoK soldiers is intended to enable the UN command to make maximum use of weapons ammunition, equipment and transport without committing the theatre to making active still more Korean divisions.

At Ottawa, Defence Minister Claxton was not available for comment but a defence department official said no decision has been reached and that discussion of the matter still is going on among the Commonwealth governments.

Last week it was reported that Canada was likely to agree to the RoK soldiers being attached to the Canadian brigade.

Canadians Run Far Behind U.S. Competitors

CHICAGO (CP)—Canadian farmers were running behind their United States competitors today as the hay and grain phase of the International Livestock Exposition neared its windup.

The judging gave U. S. growers four firsts to two for the Canadians while each country had three reserve champions.

The prized title of wheat "king" went to an American for the second successive year. In a field where Canadians have ruled for more than 30 years, Spencer Dunham of Ames, Mich., won the championship with a sample of soft, white winter wheat of the Yorkwin variety.

The reserve championship went to H. P. Robbins of Shaunavon, Sask., who topped the hard red spring wheat class.

Here is how the judging in other main events of the hay and grain phase went:

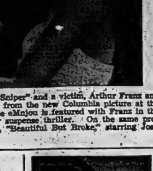
Alfalfa: Murray W. Coverdale, Cayuga, Ont., first; Sam H. Rober, Macgil S. D. second.



Grain sorghum heads: Henry Kuntz, Cyril, Okla., first; Nelis Hanse, Les Animas, Col., second.

Threshed grain sorghum: A. G Siegrist, Hutchinson, Kas., first; H. V. Landick and son, Hoisington, Kas., second.

Field beans: Betty Lou King, Cass, Mich., first; Albert Robbins, Laura, Sask., second.

After the hay and grain show, judging of livestock will begin but Canada has no entries in this section. A U. S. embargo against importation of Canadian livestock has been in effect since last February.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR TUESDAY, DEC. 2, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Planetary indications suspicious. Fine outlook for well managed efforts. During midday things should boom. Heart interests favored.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—From early morning advantageous aspects use utmost energy and knowledge to put over ideas, plans, P.M. take extra caution in confidential issues.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Go along with what you have started. Look for advantages affecting intimate undertakings, family, heart affairs.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Another stimulating planetary day for general endeavors. Still have care in investments, relations with employers, employees.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—All-out effort under most encouraging vibrations! Approved activities will dovetail into your scheme of affairs. Domestic affairs ask tact.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Interlocking your natural capability with the good aspects of the day will put you well on way to achievement. Be especially diplomatic after 5 p.m.

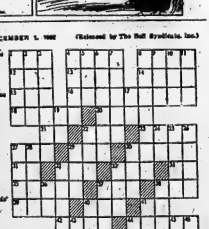
September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Maybe not a quick money-making day but surely favorable for foundation work, building your status for future enterprises.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Most schemers, gainful making and legal matters, sensible buying and investing can score gains. Things slow-maturing favored above quick turnovers.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Probably above headway in everyday tries than in large-scale issues. Conservativeness will help avoid mistakes, save time, money.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Not especially exhilarating. Don't take undue chances with frauds, difficult or vital matters. Finish necessary tasys don't force or worry.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Congenial influences mostly. Don't be susceptible to unscrupulous schemers, glib talkers. Sound investments can bring rewards.



February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Your stars emphasize worthy home activities in wee budget, and good cheer. Travel, home, heart affairs highly favored from noon on.

YOU BORN TODAY: A quick, orderly thinker, ready for action "at the drop of the hat," inclined to argue, too much for your own good. But you are usually shrewd, wisely ambitious. Sagittarius women often enter professional life and do very well. Mind your companions, don't be led astray by smooth talkers. Birthdate of: Pierre Waldeck-Rousseau, Fr. statesman; Jesse Crawford—organist.

FARMS TO GAIN LAND

BRANTFORD (CP)—Brantford's hopes of acquiring the 50-acre Glebe lands on the eastern outskirts of the city did not materialize Saturday. The Six Nations Indians voted 112 to 40 in favor of selling the land. But there is now hope a second plebiscite will be held. The Indian Act requires at least a 50-per-cent turnout of eligible voters and the total possible vote was about 3,500.

Labor Secretary Urges Quick CIO Merger With AFL

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP) — Labor Secretary Maurice Tobin today urged the CIO to negotiate a quick merger with the AFL to present the incoming Republican national administration with a solid union front.

Tobin sounded the call in a speech prepared for opening sessions of the CIO convention as the 700 delegates remained hotly split over selecting a successor to the late CIO president, Philip Murray.

Walter P. Reuther, 45-year-old president of the 1,000,000-member Auto Workers Union (CIO), was regarded as having the inside track for the CIO presidency but forces backing the CIO-executive vice-president, Allan S. Haywood, 54, were not conceding defeat.

Tobin said organized labor is in danger of its gains under the 20-year Democratic regime being undermined by the new Republican administration.

George Meany, elected as the new president of the American Federation of Labor following the recent death of William Green, has urged the CIO to renew previously fruitless unity talks. Meany, dean of the Nov. 6, Green Bay, Wis., AFL convention.

A CIO reply is expected at this week's convention.

The tilt between the competing Reuther and Haywood forces is close. Reuther's own strength and actions of the CIO convention as the 700 delegates remained hotly split over selecting a successor to the late CIO president, Philip Murray.

Two RCAF Pilots Found Uninjured After Baling Out

BAGOTVILLE, QUE. (CP)—Two RCAF pilots who parachuted from their jet fighter while on exercise in thick rugged northeastern Quebec area have been found uninjured, the RCAF announced.

The pilot of one of the planes was identified as Wing Cmdr. Hall of Ottawa who has been brought back to the RCAF station here.

The other pilot, FO. R. J. Barnett of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., was located 15 miles north of St. Fulgence, about 25 miles north of Chicoutimi.

They parachuted Friday.

FO. Marion MacDonald, a para-rescue corporal, and two para-rescue corporals were parachuted to the scene where FO. Barnett landed. A ground rescue party also has reached the scene and made camp for the night.

The RCAF announcement Sunday night said the location of the two men is so rugged that the party will not attempt to come out in darkness but will wait until tomorrow."

Cornwall Man Ordered to Give New Burial

CORNWALL (CP) — Fred Lefebvre of Cornwall has been ordered to rebury the body of Damien Jodoin in a new rough-box and casket and to pay the children of the dead man $300 costs.

Two Montreal contractors, Joseph Duhamel and Aldea Lussier, were ordered to pay $650 each in costs.

The three were accused in coroner sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario by Ernest Jodoin and seven other children of the deceased with encroachment on the burial plot.

Jodoin testified the coil of his father's rough box was sawed off and part of the top broken by workmen putting a concrete wall around the Lefebvre plot in May 1950.

Attractive Matron Found Slain

Mrs. James L. Cooper, a 1941 debutante and a former television singer, was found in her fashionable uptown apartment Sunday, her skull fractured by a heavy blow.

Six - year - old Allison Wheeler Trufler, one of two children from a former marriage, found her mother's body lying across a bed in the master bedroom only in a quilted housecoat and sheer blue nightgown that had been pulled up to her waist.

Police questioned the victim's 32-year-old husband several hours last night and then released him.

Marino R. Fazzi, New Orleans businessman and Mrs. Cooper's first husband, also was questioned and later released.

New P-C. Head Chosen

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia Progressive Conservative party has chosen Deane Finlayson, 33-year-old Maclime real estate and insurance man, to succeed Herbert Anscomb, finance minister in B.C.'s former Liberal-Progressive Conservative coalition government.

The action was taken at a party convention Saturday.

Mr. Anscomb was beaten in Oak Bay riding in last summer's B.C. election.

Hard Acres

by Harry Meldrum Moore

"It can't be a mistake, Curly," Hazel said, "and nowhat you have set your hand to the plow, there must be no turning back."

"I promise you, Hazel, I shall never turn back," Curly said soberly. "And now, Pop, let's have a look at Daddy in Harney, and you can follow Hard Acres, Harry Foster is along while I stay away."

With so much more to be done these days, Curly was up next morning at dawn. Perhaps it was on him a list of odd jobs that undone the day before, and now that he possessed Hard Acres, he must notify Bailiff Sweet to move the Cook's belongings, he must tell Bill McTaggart that Brown would be vacating his house within a month, he must get he key from Lize Barrier.

Curly took on a load of wood at the mill for Ma Cleaver, delivered it and kept it going. He found Lize Barrier in his horse stable and explained the nature of his call. Lize reminded him apologetically that Hard Acres might prove a good place for any one to live and-and he was beginning to get lonesome for a good neighbor.

But when Curly got back to Belanger's store to pick up some stuff for delivery, he was to realize that taking over Hard Acres — possessing property — brought with it responsibilities that he had not been thinking about.

"Hard Acres should be an ideal spot for you, Curly," Belanger observed. "And I'm going to be handy. It's not too far from your business. And-now that you can qualify, we'll be expecting to see you on the township council."

"What good would I be on the township council?" Curly asked.

"You never can tell—you never can tell," Belanger smiled.

In the main, the Depot was a quiet place. There was the odd fist fight where the men gathered to drink and it usually followed the arrival of one Bill Frost from the Lawson Settlement. Frost, a big, swarthy farmer, had built up the reputation of never having been bested, if any one dared to cross him. that man had to do one of two things—either stand up and fight, or run. Frost was that sort of man.

Early Bill Frost was back in the village after a long absence. Curly had seen him in front of the hotel shortly before the noon hour. And in the hotel at the same time was another big man, a blonde farmhand from the Greenwood section by the name of Neilson. Neilson, built like a wrestler, came to the village occasionally for a spree, but he was never known to bother any one.

And now that Frost was back, and was to drink with a man he had never met in combat, Curly sensed trouble, before the afternoon was over. And he figured it was pretty well, too, for in mid-afternoon when he was asked to notify Bailiff Sweet to move Cousin's effects from Hard Acres, some boys on the street shouted, "Fight" and ran around the corner into the hotel-yard.

Aaron Sweet would have followed them had Curly not stopped him.

"Leave this to me, Aaron," Curly said thoughtfully. "It's likely Bill Frost and Neilson. I've been expecting this to happen. They've probably sent liquored up by now—it's not apt to amount to much."

As Curly guessed, it wasn't much of a fight, but it was to make him a great enemy for his interference. It was a case of a wrestler trying to get hold of him who could use his fists in an untrained sort of way. The finish came when Neilson tried to wrap his arms around him, to crush him. Frost was swept off his feet by the sudden impact but he bounded up, and his right fist split Neilson's left eye. And then Curly was between them. His left hand caught Frost's right wrist in a vice-like grip, muscled him back at arm's length, while he pushed Neilson away with his right.

"Get out of here, Ollie!" Curly shouted, "get that eye fixed up, put your shirt on and go home. As for you, Bill, you should have known better than to pick on such an inoffensive man. He refused his grip on Frost's wrist, pulled him back. "Better get your clothes on, Bill," he advised. Frost scarled, swinging a right hand that went over his head.

"Never lead with your right, Bill," Curly laughed, and the crowd joined in. For a moment Bill Frost glowered at him, then he turned, picked up his clothes, trailed them after him to the shed. A few minutes later he was driving out of the yard, and he shouted, "I'll see you, some other time, Mr. Brown, and I'll change that face of yours."

Back in Aaron Sweet's office, the old constable asked: "Well, what was it?"

"Bill Frost hit Neilson the Swede in the eye," Curly said, "no great harm done."

"Bill Frost should be arrested for fighting," Sweet said.

"Yes," Curly agreed. "He should, but then you would have to sit up all night and guard him then take him to Bellevue in the morning. And all because we have neither a jail nor a magistrate in the Depot."

"So you've secured Hard Acres," Sweet said, changing the subject. "I think it's a good move for you. It should make a good home for you and Hazel. You'll continue your business in the village, I hope?"

"Oh, yes, the business is getting better every day," Curly said.

"Is there any part of the Count's property that you would like to own?"

Curly said that he was interested in the Count's piano and offered twenty-five dollars for them.

"But Curly, now look here!" Sweet wailed, "I can sell you those pews, but I have no authority to present them to you."

"Twenty - five dollars or nothing," Curly said stubbornly. "That's my bid, take it or leave it."

"Oh, well," Sweet said at last, "that's the odds! After all, Curly, you're not a bad fellow, even if you are a hard dealer. Pay the money and the pews are yours. Tell you what we'll do with the rest of the Count's earthly possessions. Bring 'em into Wilhurst—I'll sell him about three—and I'll call an auction sale. That all right?"

"Suits me for a start," Curly grinned.

Hazel and Pete had gone to the parsonage that evening to pick out the hymns for the Sunday service at the Methodist Church. Curly was sitting reading a late copy of the Bellevue News when Bill McTaggart crossed the street and, without knocking, came into the house.

Twelve Hours at Omsk Filled With Frustration And Communist Excuses

By Gerard Filion

When we landed at Omsk at seven A.M., the official in charge of passenger landings told us that we would be there for 12 hours, leaving at seven P.M.

Although we were anxious to reach our final destination, the news that we would spend 12 hours of full daylight in Omsk was an unexpected and wonderful wind fall. We would get a look at a real Siberian town.

In Siberia, the airports are equipped with sleeping accommodations for travellers. So the woman airport director opened up her best bedroom to us, giving us the chance of 12 hours of uninterrupted sleep if we wanted it, or the chance to rest and visit the town.

See Omsk and Die

We shaved in a hurry and ate a quick breakfast and at 8:30 we were ready for a look at Omsk. We were two Algerians, a French-man, a New Zealander and two Canadians, all crossing Siberia for the second time. Four of us were Communists; two were not. We all filed out to the front of the airport only to be met by the director with the news that the bus for Omsk had just left.

"When will it be back?"

"I don't know, but it will take at least two hours."

So we waited, played at chess to while the time away. An hour-and-a-half later, we trooped over to the office of the airport director again.

"Is the bus back yet?"

"No, it won't be back until tonight."

"Well, let's get a taxi. We'd like to see Omsk."

"A taxi? Omsk is quite far away you know. It's 25 kilometers. And the river is crossed by a floating bridge. And it's frosty over at this time of year. In the winter, you have to cross over the ice."

"If you go to Omsk, you can't be sure of getting back."

We went back and played two more games of chess and then we decided that we just had to see Omsk.

"I Swim if Necessary

"Madame, we're ready to swim back, if necessary, but we want to see Omsk. Besides, the town is only about 10 kilometers away not 25. And the weather is mild. There is no danger of the river freezing over. Call a taxi for us and we'll pay whatever is necessary."

"You don't leave. I've just received a telegram from Moscow, instead of staying 12 hours in Omsk, you'll only be staying four or five hours. I've received the same telegram which will definitely fix your departure time. So I can't let you go off because I don't know when you must leave here."

It was really worth watching the speed and coolness with which she invented her extraordinary excuses. But even more extraordinary was the way the other Communists swallowed, or seemed to swallow, the whole story with perfect resignation.

Since Omsk seemed to be out of the question, we decided to try, at least, to see something other than the airport. We pulled on our overcoats and started off. There was only one road leading out of the airport and was closed by a barrier with a uniformed guard on duty. I let the Communists go ahead to see if they would have the nerve to try to get through. They walked forward slowly with one eye on the barrier and one eye on me, waiting for me to make a move. Then, slowly and ashamed, they stopped about 30 feet from the barrier embarrassed at the prospect of being turned back in full view of a dirty capitalist.

Lightship Gros Cap Weathers Last Lake Superior Gale

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — The lightship Gros Cap has weathered her last Lake Superior gale.

After 39 years spent guiding mariners past the treacherous shoals at the upper approach to St. Mary's river, the 140-foot vessel is being retired. Some of her older crew members would call "a new-fangled light-house."

When the Gros Cap warped into the government dock here it ended another chapter in a career that began as a minesweeper on the North Atlantic in the First World War.

Familiar Sight

To mariners and cottagers along the upper St. Mary's river the rusty red flanks of the Gros Cap were a familiar sight, glimmering in the water by day, lights a friendly twinkle at night. When heavy fogs rolled in off Lake Superior, her horn boomed its warning through the murk.

Her future remains obscure. Captain John Griffiths, her master, expects to remain here for the winter.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: Cloudy skies and southerly winds kept temperatures up in the 30's here in most of Ontario Monday night. This weather will continue today and Wednesday throughout the province. Spots which moved up from Texas yesterday moved into south-western Ontario overnight, and will gradually move across the southern half of the province today and tonight. Wednesday it will clear slowly with a few light snowflurries in most regions.

GENERAL PEARKES CHARGES OFFICER WAS 'SCAPEGOAT'

Says Pearson Wrong In Cancelling Firing

OTTAWA (CP)—Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC, says the government fired the wrong man in seeking a scapegoat and whipping boy for the dispatch of Canadian troops to Koje Island last May.

The military spokesman for the Progressive Conservatives said Monday the "real blunderer" was Lieutenant-General Charles Foulkes but he couldn't be shunted off to the Senate because he is "the darling of the government party."

So, Gen. Pearkes charged in the Canadian Club, cabinet ousted Brig. Alan B. Connelly, a "brilliant" and "outstanding" young officer of 44, from the job to cover its embarrassment over "going off half-cocked" with a minister Pearson to Washington that backfired.

Used Mails

All Brig. Connelly did wrong, said the general, was to use the mails instead of the top secret cable to inform Ottawa that United Nations headquarters in Tokyo, where he was Canada's liaison officer—was considering sending a company of Canadians to help guard Red prisoners on Koje.

Brig. Connelly had suggested that the matter be taken up with the senior Canadian officer in Korea, Brig.-Gen. M. P. Bogert, head of the 25th brigade, and had reported that Bogert was "violently opposed."

The real blunderer, however, has been the government which decided that the troops were en route to Koje, had protested to Washington that this had been done without consulting Canada and was embarrassed to learn that there had been consultations both with Brig. Connelly and with Brig. Bogert.

Red-faced with embarrassment and determined to find a whipping boy, the government had picked on Brig. Connelly, had ousted him without justification and henceforth had his name with innuendoes.

Helicopter Used To Rescue Man From Water Tank

POINT PLEASANT, N.J. (AP)—A navy helicopter was used to rescue a man who fell inside a 160-foot high water tank and broke his neck.

John Breeze, 20, was gently lifted out of the tank Monday by a rescue basket lowered by the helicopter and deposited on the ground nearby.

A rescue squad took him to hospital where he was listed in critical condition.

Breeze had been working with several other men inside the tank when he fell 100 feet to the floor and crashed into the steel bottom. A first aid squad was called, but they had to wait another hour as the tank towers 160 feet above the ground.

FALLS 15 STOREYS

NEW YORK (AP) — Police said a 15-storey decline plunge of a 20-year-old youth Monday night apparently occurred after he slipped on a highly-polished floor at his home and tumbled over the low sill of an open window. The boy was Stephen W. Ordway.

Committee Overwhelmingly Approves India's Korean Plan; Reds Kill Hopes of Success

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Fifty-three Western and neutral countries yesterday gave overwhelming approval to India's Korean peace plan despite a Red rejection that already has shattered hopes of its ever working.

The one-sided 53-to-5 vote Monday came in the political committee. The five Soviet-bloc countries voted against the Indian resolution aimed at ending the prisoners-of-war deadlock which has held up a Korean truce. Nationalist China abstained because she didn't think the plan would work.

The committee set another meeting today to let delegates put on the record their reasons for voting the way they did.

But Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky of Russia was expected to turn the meeting into another bitter debate by demanding that his counter-resolutions be acted on first before the committee sends the Indian plan to the general assembly for its own approval and transmission to the United Nations command in Korea.

Even if Vishinsky succeeds in getting a vote on his proposals, they are doomed to defeat. The previous rejection of the Indian plan by the Soviet bloc already has rendered it just as hopeless a future.

India and her backers had carefully put the responsibility for place on the Communists the moral blame for torpedoing the greatest chance at a Korean peace.

The committee Monday climaxed one of the most violent debates in its history by approving the Indian resolution by a three-to-one (actually overwhelming majority, shouting down Communist opposition that would have remodelled it into the Red pattern.

U.S. delegates—and many of their allies—were pleased by the unprecedented solidarity in backing the Indian plan.

They said that, although there was little hope it would achieve the real objective of peace in Korea, the voting completely isolated the Communists. They predicted that could have a powerful influence among the non-communist Asians.

Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, head of the Indian delegation and Prime Minister Nehru's sister, also praised the solid support of the neutral countries. She said India still hopes "our great neighbor, China, will co-operate and appreciate our interest and friendship."

Although all but the Soviet bloc have applauded the plan, Nehru of India's resolution calling for a commission made up of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, Sweden and a fifth-country umpire to handle the repatriation question of prisoners, several Asian and Arab members abstained from voting on the Indian amendments.

Vishinsky charged that the Indian plan was no compromise at all but instead a dressed-up U.S. plan that Nehru has "let on his back to a confiscation of the war.

The familiar Vishinsky vitriol seemed lacking attempt to take a neutral stand as spokesman for the Asian group. He said:

"We won't be carried away by any false and spurious appeals for peace. We are ready for peace but turn all eyes on us. No, the eyes of Nehru, Mr. Attlee, Mr. Pearson, Menon. You by your resolution are trying to push people into the bonfire of war."

He hurled out charges that the Indian government had been directed by U.S. big business into "pathless" submission to the Western stand against forcible repatriation or detention of prisoners.

The Indian resolution now goes to the full assembly for final endorsement. Deputy Assembly President L. B. Pearson of Canada sends it on to the Chinese Communists and North Koreans.

The UN secretariat hopes to bring the resolution before the assembly Wednesday.

Nine Out of 12 Ontario Cities Re-elect Mayors on Monday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nine of 12 Ontario cities holding mayoralty elections picked their sitting mayors to serve another term.

Only Kingston and Fort William ran counter to the pro-administration trend Monday, both turning their backs on mayors who had served the 12th city, Oshawa, the mayor's recent retirement opened the field for a new man.

The re-election pattern in voting followed the trend set in nominations in the 12 cities, where only 18 mayors went back unopposed.

Kingston elected former city solicitor 47-year-old George Charles Wright over Clifford O. Curtis, 39-year-old Queen's University professor. Mr. Wright, mayor in 1933 and 1934, is the very last of 12 mayors whose father also held that office in 1897.

Class Alderman

Fort William elected Gordon E. Carson over Peter Anderson. Mayor Hubert Badani, who has served on the city council with Alderman Alex Anderson. Mr. Carson had a 636-vote margin in a hard fight which polled 81 per cent of eligible voters to the polls.

Other mayoralty results:

Ottawa elected Mayor Charlotte Whitton, the chief magistrate's post for the first time. She has served in a municipal capacity more than a year following the death of the previous mayor, Grant Hall, an old welfare worker won out with a late surge in a hot fight with Leonard Coulter, a municipal board member. Mr. Coulter, who led through more than half the returns, conceded.

At Woodstock, Mrs. Bernadette Smith was returned by a landslide 1,200-vote victory in 1,055—over Fred Childs whom she defeated for the office a year ago.

Toronto re-elected Mayor Fred Lamport for another two-year term and all five members of the city council who sought re-election were returned to office. At Windsor, Arthur Reaume was returned for his seventh two-year term in office.

Rank Easy Winner

At London, Dr. Ian Rank, the politician who ran for mayor two years ago on a third term platform, planned dismissal from the police force, went back for a third term, He had a margin of almost 17,000 votes over his nearest rival, R. E. Fairborn, a newcomer to the mayoralty race. Third man was George A. Wesley, mayor when Mr. Rank was dismissed from the police force.

Field Marshal Montgomery To Visit Canada, U.S.

PARIS (Reuters)—Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, Deputy Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, will visit the United States and Canada early next year, it was announced today.

He will arrive in New York March 23 and will stay in the U. S. until April 15. Then he will go to Canada for a nine-day visit.

He will meet defence and government leaders and will visit military schools and installations to study at first hand Allied Air Command strategy.

Lord Montgomery, hero of British victories over Rommel the Nazis in North Africa, is deputy to Gen. Matthew Ridgway in the North Atlantic Defence Organization.

Hotel Clerks Oblige Thief

NEW YORK (AP)—Police said a 24-year-old waiter Monday admitted robbing more than 100 hotel rooms in 18 months just by walking into the hotel and asking the clerk for the key. They said Murray Meckler looted the rooms of thousands of dollars worth of jewelry and other items and then blew the proceeds on horses and cards.

BRITAIN PLANS DRASTIC CUT IN TOBACCO BUYING

Canada May Have To Exercise Rigid Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Britain plans drastic reductions in imports of Canadian tobacco in 1953 and rigid controls may have to be exercised to reduce Canada's crop next spring unless new markets can be found, a federal tobacco expert said today.

N. A. MacRae, head of the agriculture department's tobacco division, told the 14th annual Federal-provincial agricultural Conference that Britain contemplates purchasing only 10,000,000 pounds of Canadian tobacco next year.

This, he said, will be a reduction of 70 per cent of Canada's 1952 exports to dollar-short Britain. Exports to the British West Indies and Australia are not expected to exceed 5,000,000 pounds and no additional export outlets are in sight.

Requires Some Action

Mr. MacRae did not look for 1953, in general, would appear to require some action which would result in the acreage expanded to be done domestic market as well as an increase in exports of raw leaf next year.

"Otherwise, grower organizations will be required to exercise drastic curtailment or plantings next spring."

Most of Canada's tobacco is grown in Ontario. Normally the province produces between 105,000,000 and 110,000,000 pounds a year.

But no gloomy was the sales outlook a year ago that the Ontario flue-cured Tobacco Marketing Board ordered that the acreage this year be cut by one-third, the largest reduction ever ordered.

But the weather upset the board's plans. Instead of the 85,000,000 pounds expected, a total of 133,000,000 pounds was produced through phenomenal yields.

Red Rebel Troops Launch Awaited Attack

By IAN FAWCETT

HANOI, Indochina (Reuters)—Communist rebel troops today launched their awaited attack on the isolated French fortress of Nasam. The rebels had lain in the surrounding hills for almost a week.

After 14 hours of battling around the perimeter the fortress was still in French hands.

The French garrison is pledged to defend it to the death.

The rebels used their circle tactics in the attack. Since then a mysterious lull has reigned over the jungle.

The fortress protects much of the French holdings in the rice growing Red River delta, a region of tremendous morale value. It is the key to Hanoi, capital city. French spotter planes have kept tab on the rebel movements which gather-together in the area favored them in a desperate attempt to knock out the vital base.

The French Army imposed a 24-hour news blackout yesterday as the battle for Nasam reached its peak.

The battle is expected to turn into a bloody struggle in the next few jungle war against the rebels.

The French command has rushed marine bombs on the Nasam fortress landing strip but planes were still able to take out with wounded early this evening.

Cloak and Dagger Air Surrounds Czech Diplomat's Death on Liner

GENOA, Italy (Reuters)—Italian police opened a top secret investigation today into a "spy-thriller" staying aboard a liner which docked here Monday.

In a first-class cabin of the luxury liner Giulio Cesare crew members found the body of a man believed to be a diplomat in the service of a Communist country, probably Czechoslovakia.

He was dead; hanged with a dressing gown cord from a porthole.

In a cabin not far away were two men reported to be Russian diplomats. Passengers, said the two had been watching the dead man ever since he came aboard at a South American port.

Police today transferred the body to Genoa mortuary.

A police officer said the passenger, Gladislaw Brocek, 44, was a Czech diplomat on leave of absence from Uruguay.

The man's body was found by a police officer at sea Nov. 26. He broke down the cabin door after a steward had received no answer to his knocking.

The passengers said the two Russians, described as couriers, had taken near Brocek's. The Russians were said to have boarded the liner at Buenos Aires. They were among the first to leave the ship at Genoa.

Four Aldermen Re-elected, Three Newcomers Chosen

Lightest Vote in Many Years Registered at Polls

Four aldermen were re-elected with three new candidates in a new all-low record-breaking city election held yesterday.

Returned to office are Aldermen Don Thomas, Angus Duffy, Wilbur Cunningham and Harry J. Clarke. Newly-elected are Messrs. Gerald R. Hyde, Bryson Reid and John Bradford.

Mayor A. McLean Haig was given an acclamation at the nominations held a week ago as was Alderman Harry Hollins for the public utilities commissionership, and members of the board of education. These include Mrs. Effie McCabe and Messrs. MacDonald Smith, Frank Grasdahm, Harry J. Allin, A. Clarence Wilkins and Gordon H. Trull.

In an election marked by a definite lethargy on the part of the electorate, a new low of one in five civic elections here were established.

With interest at an all-time ebb, only slightly over fifteen thousand votes will be cast by the polls to establish a new low for the city archives. This amounts to approximately 15 per cent of the total vote.

Last year slightly over 6,000 votes were polled, a figure slightly lower than the all-time record established the year previous.

All Time Record

Another record that was established, up was that of time.

The first poll results reached the city hall at 7.12 and the last two of the 35 polling divisions were filed at 8.30. Last year roughly five polls results had been returned by this time.

Another new low was marked in the votes polled by the polling-subdivision Alderman Clerk. There recorded 1532 votes to lead the pack. Last year ex-Alderman Arthur Bateman polled 2092 votes to lead the poll while the candidate finishing in last position polled 1530.

Alderman Reid and a brand new one is, that, for the first time in the history of city elections, a father and son sit side by side or will sit that way in the 1953 council. They are Alderman Charles Hyde and Alderman-elect Gerald R. Hyde.

Last Far Second Time

Alderman Don Thomas led the polls for the second time in his political career. This is a very close, Alderman-elect Bryson Reid battled him to the last ballot but very late poll to come in swung the tide to Thomas. He led in the early returns but with a few polls to go Reid had caught up with and overtaken the late arrivals. Here are the votes behind for second place.

Alderman Thomas nosed out the runner-up with 1532 votes with Alderman-elect Reid trailing 1542.

In third place came Alderman Wilbur Cunningham with 1455 votes and 11 votes behind came Alderman Angus Duffy.

Alderman-elect Gerald Hyde with 1316 votes finished in fifth position and Alderman H. J. Clarke, veteran councillor, came sixth. He was in second place and last to be elected was Alderman-elect John Bradford with 1202.

ANTI-GRAVITY MACHINE ENABLES POLIO CASES TO EXERCISE LIMBS

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—An anti-gravity machine to help polio victims exercise paralyzed muscles was shown today to the American Medical Association.

It lets them move arms or legs almost effortlessly without having to lift their own weight.

If they can do this, the machine is tightened, creating resistance to help them exercise for the muscles. It is like training for weightlifting by starting with light weights.

The device was shown in an exhibit at the opening of the AMA's clinical session by Dr. A. H. Schenker of New York. The machines have been used on several hundred polio victims, other diseases or accident, said, and many have seen become able to abandon canes, crutches or braces.

It cannot help muscles whose nerves have been killed or severed, but if a few muscle fibres are left alive, the machine helps strengthen them. It has helped persons with muscles so weak they could not move arms or legs overcome gravity. At Windsor, Arthur Reaume was returned for his seventh two-year term in office.

Rank Easy Winner

At London, Dr. Ian Rank, the politician who ran for mayor two years ago on a third term platform, planned dismissal from the police force, went back for a third term. He had a margin of almost 17,000 votes over his nearest rival, R. E. Fairborn, a newcomer to the mayoralty race. Third man was George A. Wesley, mayor when Mr. Rank was dismissed from the police force.

Retired Ministers Are Admitted To Association

The Belleville Ministerial Association held its regular meeting in the Bridge Street United Church parlors, with the president, Rev. Sidney E. Larman, presiding. The Rev. Keith Daniel, presented an interesting address about the Baha'i World Faith movement.

A discussion followed the address. The newly-formed constitution for the association was discussed and adopted, whereby retired ministers of all denominations and the principal of Albert College, Rev. A. E. MacKenzie and the Divisional Commander of the Salvation Army, Brigadier Reginald Gage, be invited to become members of the association.

Rev. Duncan McTavish was given the responsibility of arranging to have an adequate and a suitable book for distribution whereby they may know when patients are in the Belleville General Hospital. Archdeacon Arthur Smith and Reverend Sidney E. Larman were appointed a committee to interview the administrator of the General Hospital to secure adequate accommodation for the chapel recently removed to make room for a doctors' room in the hospital.

A leadership training school whereby courses for Sunday School teachers, of all grades, shall be given, to include teaching and administration. This training school to be inter-denominational and was appointed by the ministers' interests present. Two new members were received, namely, The Rev. Robert W. T. Middleton, of the United Church Bayside charge and the Rev. Harold Cliffin of Foxboro. Rev. Raymond Rowley conducted devotional service and Rev. J. E. A. Spearman acted as secretary. The executive committee in charge of association has been given the responsibility of suggesting dates, early in the new year, when an evangelistic campaign to be held in the city to which all ministers and their congregations are committed.

Two Escapees from County Jail Soon Recaptured by City Police

Freedom was short-lived today for two teen-agers who early this morning escaped from the Hastings County jail after locking a turnkey in a small basement room.

The two youths, John VanDusen, 18, of Tweed, and Harold Grey, 17, of Marmora, were picked up four hours later by city police officers as they were walking on No. 37 Highway just north of College St.

The youths offered no resistance when Sgt. Clarence Arnold and Detective Harold Reid pulled up behind them as they were walking on the highway. The two officers were riding in a private car and the youths did not realize it contained police until it stopped. The two boys climbed quickly into the car and were returned to the city jail.

Turnkey Carroll H. Holmes said that the two youths, VanDusen and Grey, were being taken from their cells to stand beside the jail building when they made a break for freedom. They passed one guard room, closed the door and escaped.

Turnkey Cook, turnkey, was able to smash a window and attract help from the inmates, but only three or four minutes had elapsed from the time he was shoved into the basement room until he was able to give the alarm.

City police were immediately informed and three police officers from city dept. and at least 12 provincial officers converged on the station area where they it was reported the two youths had been seen shortly after the jail-break. However, two and a half hours after the break officials had not yet recaptured the two youths.

Youths Seen Once

Sgt. Roy Milligan and P. C. Kent of the city police force reported they had seen two youths in the Bridge Street area in the vicinity of Garage Supply, but they hopped over the river embankment and disappeared. A search was then concentrated in the river area and later they found out to the north end of the city but without result.

An OPP.dog was under sentence of one year for car theft at Belleville, while Grey had been brought to the county jail from Marmora where he received six months indeterminate for attempted holdup. Both were at the county jail pending transfer to the reformatory.

It was believed the two youths had been at large for about before meeting in the jail.

The escape from the jail took place about 7.45. Turnkey Cook had taken the two youths to the jail building and they changed their clothes before directing them to carry in the clothes. He unlocked the door of the small room where the two inmates were to change their clothes, they suddenly shoved him inside, then closed the door and locked it.

It is believed the two youths then made their way out of the building and went along to Station John Street to Station Street where it is thought they were later seen in the vicinity of the river.

Belleville Firm Constructed Prize Winning Building

The new Marmora High School building has won for its architects, the firm of Craig and Madill, of Toronto, the silver medal from the Massey Foundation for the best educational building of the year, it has been announced.

The prize-winning design was one of several awards made by the Foundation for architectural work in the various fields of architecture.

The Mills Construction Company of Belleville, were the general contractors in the construction of the prize-winning building.

Township Clerk 'On the Spot'

Husbands, spouses and heads of the house in the case where it is the male of the species have from time immemorial been "put on the spot."

Usually it happens within the privacy of the home and unless the subject develops into a loud vociferous affair, only the principals know about it.

However, take the case of Mr. Clayton Price, clerk of the township of Dungannon. Mr. Price is very much on the well known "spot" these days, and not too much in the public eye.

In rural township municipal election in the northern township, two candidates for the school board contested the seats with an equal number of votes. In other words a tie.

One of these candidates is Mrs. Dorothy Price, wife of the township clerk. According to proper procedure, a recount is ordered by the returning judge, and if the count remains a tie, the returning officer, who is the clerk must cast the deciding vote.

But Mr. Price declares he will not do any such thing.

Mr. Price is definitely "on the spot."

polls led the field with 151 votes. Also elected were John McLean, 197, Harold Wheeler, 183, and Ewart Rupnow.

An odd situation occurred in the election for the school board. Edward McLean was elected, but Mrs. Dorothy Price and Don Littlepround were tied with 108 votes each. The election will be decided later.

NEW MEXICAN PRESIDENT

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Adolfo Ruiz Cortines became President of Mexico today and named Lida Padilla Nervo, Mexican delegate to the United Nations, as his foreign minister. He took the oath of office for a six-year term, said he will do all in his power to reduce the cost of living. He succeeds Miguel Aleman.

TEEN-AGER KILLED

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP)—An old model car carrying four teen-agers at a fast clip hurtled into steel girders protruding like a spear from a heavy truck Friday night. Three were killed. A fourth was critically injured. All were trapped in the car and had to be freed by police emergency crews.

2 Radio Station Employees Hurt In Collision

Scott Hannah and Phil Flagler, announcers for radio station CJBQ, were injured shortly before noon today when the car they were in which they were riding and believed driven by Mr. Hannah, collided with a truck driven by William Keast, of Camden East and loaded with 46 bags. The accident occurred near the home of Peter Hannah on the Trent Road. The station wagon after the collision went into the south ditch and was pushed back against a large tree, while the truck upset on the north side of the highway. When the truck upset it spilled the load of pigs scattered and it was with great difficulty they were rounded up in Mr. Reid's barn. Two of the pigs were badly injured and it is possible they will have to be destroyed.

Receive Lacerations

Both Mr. Hannah and Mr. Flagler were badly shaken up and received lacerations about the face and body. They were admitted to hospital and after being taken to the Belleville Hospital were attended by Dr. J. Russell Scott. The full extent of their injuries could not be obtained.

It is understood the truck was proceeding in an easterly direction turning out to pass a parked truck and while swinging back into line went into a skid. At the same time the station wagon was proceeding eastward and the driver seeing the truck in a skid, applied the brakes, with the result the station wagon into a skid also, one of the wheels on the wagon was knocked off and the front was completely demolished, while the side that hit the tree was caved in.

'Roly' Whitley Elected Mayor Over Two Rivals

Four men contested the three seats open on the Board of Education. Dr. John Richmond led the poll with 1366, trailed by Douglas Whitney, 1344, and Glenn Green, 981. John Hooper's 356 eliminated him from the field.

There was no contest for council. Of the six seats open, only three were previously filled by acclamation. A nomination meeting is scheduled in the Town Hall for Friday night in an attempt to fill out the slate.

Should an election for council become necessary, it will be held January 2nd, municipal officials indicated.

Change Voting Day to Saturday For Bush Workers

In an effort to coax a few more voters to the polls, the combined townships of Montegale and Herschel in North Hastings this year will change its election day from the traditional Monday to Saturday. Taxpayers of the northern municipality will go to the polls December 6th to elect a new reeve and council.

Reeve Thomas H. Scott will be opposed by Frank Cassidy, a council member some years back, while seven men will contest the four seats on council. Competing for council will be two of this year's members, Joseph Musclow and Bruce Parks. Others running are Walter McCormick, Arthur Mirkle, Herb Woodcock, Les Sutherland and Garfield Muckow.

Attending Hastings county council this week, Reeve Thomas Scott said their election day had been changed this year from Monday to Saturday to allow bush workers and others, who normally come to town on Saturday, to cast their ballots. Ordinarily bush workers would not come out of the bush on Monday to vote in the municipal election.

WOMAN LAWYER DIES

TORONTO (CP)—Gertrude Sinclair Haines, who practised law here before her retirement in 1941, died today. She was born in Tillsonburg and educated at Trinity College. She was graduated from Osgoode Hall in 1926. Her husband, James A. Haines, her mother, two daughters and a sister survive.

Carmen Scott Defeats Don Ward For Deputy Reeve

Dr. Carmen S. Slack and Neil Love were elected school trustees with Dr. Slack defeating Cyril McCloskey, 855 to 673, and Love Ward and Mr. Love winning over Pierce Jones 825 to 126 in Hallowell Ward.

Only one change was noted in the election for town council. Sam Genzlie replaced the veteran Ernie Ward with a majority of 52 votes to win sixth place in the election standing. Re-elected were Woodrow Blakely, 883; Randolph Clapp, 807; Lindlay Calnan, 701; Finlay McArthur, 645; Nesbitt McKinnon, 583. Mr. Genzlie polled 573 votes to win election.

The by-law asking for the public utilities to take over the operation of the town sewerage was defeated 818 against—454 for.

Officer Says Morale In Korea Standing Up

VANCOUVER (CP)—Morale of Canadian soldiers in Korea is standing up well under the strain of the static warfare, Maj.-Gen. H. A. Sparling, vice-chief of the Canadian general staff, said on his return from a flying visit to the front.

Gen. Sparling said Monday operations of Canadians in the front line, with their constant patrols and other engagements, could not be considered static, but warfare on the whole Korean front could since it resembled the trench fighting of the First World War.

Such a war of attrition could be more trying on troops' nerves than mobile action but Canadians were in good spirits, he said.

Elections In County

Voters in several county municipalities went to the polls yesterday with some changes noted in various centres.

In Tweed, Reeve T. C. Graham received no acclamation, as did Sam Curry for public utilities. Two new councillors headed the polls with Heath Jones receiving 418 votes and Douglas Spencer 415. Others elected were Ambrose Trudeau, 400, and Ken Burkett, 322. Deputy reeve was defeated with 236 votes.

The entire council slate was turned over with the new body being C. F. Dimmell, Gerald Lott, John Spence, Arthur Rendell, Ernest Graham and Percy Knight.

Reeve Percy Adams was returned to office in Dungannon township by acclamation. Louis Jan, in his first attempt at the

Dr. Carmen S. Slack and Neil Love were elected school trustees with Dr. Slack defeating Cyril McCloskey, 855 to 673, and Love Ward and Mr. Love winning over Pierce Jones 825 to 126 in Hallowell Ward.

Only one change was noted in the election for town council. Sam Genzlie replaced the veteran Ernie Ward with a majority of 52 votes to win sixth place in the election standing. Re-elected were Woodrow Blakely, 883; Randolph Clapp, 807; Lindlay Calnan, 701; Finlay McArthur, 645; Nesbitt McKinnon, 583. Mr. Genzlie polled 573 votes to win election.

The by-law asking for the public utilities to take over the operation of the town sewerage was defeated 818 against—454 for.

Officer Says Morale In Korea Standing Up

VANCOUVER (CP)—Morale of Canadian soldiers in Korea is standing up well under the strain of the static warfare, Maj.-Gen. H. A. Sparling, vice-chief of the Canadian general staff, said on his return from a flying visit to the front.

Gen. Sparling said Monday operations of Canadians in the front line, with their constant patrols and other engagements, could not be considered static, but warfare on the whole Korean front could since it resembled the trench fighting of the First World War.

Such a war of attrition could be more trying on troops' nerves than mobile action but Canadians were in good spirits, he said.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The American dollar was at a discount of 2 21-32 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Monday's noon rate was 97 11-32 cents. The pound sterling was $2.73 3-16, against $2.73 1-16 on Monday.

Lack of Export Market for Cheese Poses Serious Problem for Farmers

The 29th. annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association and British Empire Dairy Show opened this morning at the Quinte Hotel. Attendance was held down at the opening session because of the heavy snowfall. The convention concludes with a banquet on Wednesday night.

Neither of this morning's speakers soft-pedalled the problems facing the cheese industry today. They were R. Atherton, Markdorf, president of the association, and C. N. Heath, of Belleville, secretary-manager of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association.

"The loss of the British market placed the Canadian cheese industry in a most precarious situation, Mr. Heath stated in outlining the over-all picture for the past year. That, said he, left the sale of cattle and hogs to the United States because of the foot and mouth disease, had made it a trying year for the farmer.

Conditions Improve

Until mid-August, he said, cheese bought by the local association had been financed by the Marketing Board. Since that time, conditions have greatly improved. Payments have gone through fairly rapidly. Once the present stockpile was disposed of, the money would be promptly back in the factories.

"There should be some changes made," he said, "but I feel that those changes should all be concerned with improved marketing. If we are not troubled by imported cheese and do not increase our production, I doubt if many factories will close."

Pointing to the importation of oils for the manufacture of butter substitutes, Mr. Heath explained that 600,000 pounds of spread was needed to supply a city the size of Belleville yearly. That amount, he explained, represented the product of a great many cattle.

"The importation of oils isn't competition for us," he declared. "It's murder."

Pay for Quality

The speaker also suggested that the way for the cheese makers to improve the quality of their cheese was to pay for milk on a quality basis.

"In order to get better milk in vats," he said, "we need a differential in the price we pay for milk."

Complementing Mr. Heath's remarks that that has not been a happy year in the cheese industry, President Atherton said the loss of the British market has undermined its whole structure, at least for the present.

"Unless something is done," he said, "I am afraid a large percentage of the factories that operated this year will not be operating in the spring. You can imagine the depressing effect this will have on our agricultural life."

Curtailment of production would only mean that some of the better cheese makers would be forced into other industries, Mr. Atherton told the convention. Once they have become absorbed in other fields, he declared, it is doubtful if these men would return to cheese making.

Fewer Factories

In declaring that he was not one to paint a gloomy picture of the industry, Mr. Atherton said that his statements were made to provoke the convention to serious thought.

"But," he said, "unless something happens between now and spring that will guarantee the producer a certain market for his cheese at a reasonable price, there will be fewer factories operating next year than there were last."

In conclusion, Mr. Atherton thanked members present for the co-operation they had shown him during his term of office.

After a short discussion period conducted by W. E. Henderson, of Picton, the session adjourned for lunch.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Western oils led a moderate decline in slow early afternoon stock market trading today. Golds held firm.

Volume for the first three hours totalled 322,000 shares.

Central Explorers, a western oils issue that dropped sharply yesterday, continued its trade activity today and regained 25 cents in the first three hours. Britalta also rose but more modestly, helped by Canadian Williston, Del Rio, Grisdel and Anglo-Canadian.

Dominion Asbestos, a base metal that lost heavily yesterday, also featured actively today to gain 20 cents. East Rim slipped slightly in active trading but the show set little change. Most higher-priced issues slipped and others favored.

Most industrial groups were mixed but papers gained and utilities slipped.

Senior golds held firm and junior producers gained strength but prospects slipped in afternoon trading. Golf's Lake Shore jumped while Kirkland Hudson gained. Holding companies slipped.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP) — Cattle sales were steady today at the Ontario stockyards as receipts were trading. Receipts: cattle 690; calves 310; hogs 450; sheep and lambs 290. The hog-cover from last week was 1,200 cattle.

Choice steers sold at $25.50-28 with good at 24-25 and mediums at 22-24. Common to medium light steers and heifers ranged from 12.50-21 and good heifers from 22.50 to 23. Good cows and bulls brought 14-15.50. Choice fed yearlings were at 25.50 with medians at 19-23 and common to medium stockers at 14.75-21.

Choice veal calves were steady at 26-29 and common to medium at 14-25.

Grade A hogs made 26 and dressed sows $17.

Good lambs were firm at 24.50-25 with bucks and bwaies at 22.50-23 and sheep at 6-12.

At Oshawa, where Mayor Michael Starr retired because of his election to Parliament as Progressive Conservative member for Ontario, J. W. Naylor was elected over former mayor Frank McCallum, Samia re-elected Mayor W. C. Nelson in a six-man race.

Commercial Sunday sport was turned down by the cities of Ottawa and Oshawa, the towns of Gananoque and Smiths Falls and Neelon-Garson township near Sudbury.

Toronto voted down a two-year term for its council but the same plan won approval at London, Windsor, which already has a two-year term with staggered elections, voted to have elections only every second year.

Approve Housing

Toronto voted for a $3,000,000 bond issue to complete a slum-clearing housing project in Regent's Park. Oshawa approved an $850,000 bond issue for an addition to the general hospital. Sault Ste. Marie voted for a $222,000 school addition.

Two towns voted on secession from their counties, reflecting opposition to road and other county expenditures, and came up with a split decision. Fergus, in Wellington County, turned down the proposal. Paris, in Brant County, approved.

Stratford approved a $50,000 road resurfacing bylaw and St. Thomas a $25,000 grant to Alma College, a private school for girls.

Kingston also approved a franchise for bus transportation on city streets.

A veteran municipal figure went back into office at Cornwall where Mayor Aaron Horowitz was returned for an eighth two-year term.

Whitby Man to Jail For Beating Mother

WHITBY (CP) — James McGuire 49, today was sentenced to six months in jail for beating his 75-year-old mother when he came home drunk one night. Magistrate F. S. Elsie also ordered six strokes of the lash.

"This may possibly have more effect than anything else," said the magistrate.

Reuther Claims Virtual Control Of C.I.O. Votes

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—Walter P. Reuther seemed virtually assured today of becoming the CIO's new president after a close and bitter political battle among CIO unions.

The youthful, fiery president of the 1,000,000-member Auto Workers Union shrewdly master-minded a fight for CIO control which now apparently was a winner over CIO Vice-President Allen S. Haywood.

Reuther claimed "overwhelming victory" after the CIO Rubber and Oil Workers Unions, representing more than 400,000 members, late Monday night decided to support Reuther. The rubber and oil unions previously were neutral.

The fight for the CIO presidency as successor to the late Philip Murray still may go to a convention showdown vote Thursday.

The 44-year-old Haywood and David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer and president of the CIO Steelworkers, announced Monday night support and the core of Haywood's strength, refused to admit defeat.

Haywood maintained "everything is the same" and said the Haywood group would continue to fight.

It was considered likely, however, that in the last analysis the Haywood group would support Reuther to avert an open convention split that might drive a deep wedge into CIO ranks.

Lamport Scores Heavy Majority; No 2-Year Term

TORONTO (CP) — Forthright Allan Austin Lamport, a man with a flare for getting into the news, captured Toronto's mayoralty for a second term.

Back into office with him went all members of the 1952 city council who sought re-election Monday in their old posts. Two of this year's body went down to defeat as they sought to move up from aldermanic posts to seats on the four-man board of control, the council's executive body.

Paradoxically, the two - year council term the mayor supported was rejected by the electors for the sixth time. A $5,000,000 bond issue for a housing development, supported by the mayor, won approval.

The 47-year-old mayor handily turned back a challenge from Nathan Phillips, dean of the city council with 28 years service as an alderman before he made an unsuccessful attempt at the mayoralty a year ago.

With counting of the light vote polls, the mayor had 91,125 to 61,-704 for Mr. Phillips, a 29,419 majority.

Preliminary tabulation indicated that between 34 and 35 per cent of the city's 272,222 eligible voters went to the polls.

The mayor's victory became official at 8:30 p.m. EST when Mr. Phillips, 60-year-old native of Brockville, conceded.

The four sitting members of the board of control — Leslie Saunders, Louis Shannon, David Balfour and Ford Brand — went back into office with an emphatic margin over six opponents. Mr. Brand, low man of the four, had an edge of more than 17,000 votes over the next candidate, Alderman Joseph Piccininni.

Two controllers — Mr. Saunders and Mr. Balfour — announced that next year they would try for the mayor's chair.

Only one of seven Communists among the 84 candidates who contested the 37 offices at stake won re-election — Mrs. Edna Ryerson, member of the board of education for eight years, who headed the poll in her ward. The defeated Communists included Stewart Smith, one-time controller, who ran seventh in the board of control race.

The housing vote was for completion of the Regent's Park slum-clearing project in Toronto's old Cabbagetown area west of the Don River. It became one of the most contentious issues in a quiet election although neither of the mayoralty candidates opposed it. The opposition came from property owners and business interests.

WORKERS DIE IN FIRE

HONG KONG (AP)—The independent Kung Sheung Daily News reported said more than 100 mill workers perished when fire razed a workers' dormitory in Kwangtung province on the Red Chinese mainland Nov. 22. Most of the survivors were arrested on charges of arson, the paper said adding: The workers, most of them slave laborers, had been locked in and were trapped when fire broke out.

EVER WELCOME GUESTS

Belleville is proud this week to be host once again to members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association for their 25th annual convention and British Empire Dairy Show.

The beginnings of the cheese industry here go far back into Bay of Quinte history but the quarter century identified with the activities of the Association is marked by robust development of the industry as a flourishing division of the Canadian agricultural economy. To this district particularly it has been of much more immediate economic importance and, too, a source of no small amount of local prosperity.

In Hastings and our neighboring counties is to be seen the foremost progress in cheese making in this country. This region is the acknowledged leading producer for cheddar cheese and cheese quality. Its reputation stands high at home and is favorably known abroad.

No one could estimate what has been the measure of prosperity which has accrued over the years to succeeding generations of the people of the Quinte area through the steady and efficient expansion of this basic industry.

Belleville has every reason to welcome the cheese makers here again for their annual get-to-gether and be-speak for them a profitable and congenial convention.

MOST UNINTERESTING WAR

Something that a good many Canadian newspapermen had been telling each other across copy desks for a long time was put to the test of readers' observation a few days ago in Vancouver.

In the newsroom of the Vancouver Sun the city editor was complaining that he could not get good local stories on Page One because there were too many war stories. Contending that they were overplayed, for argument's sake he ran the same Korean war story every day, no one would notice." It was agreed to try it. Without tipping off the staff, the Sun ran the same Canadian Press story for three days straight under the same heading: Reds Blasted From Hill Korean Knob.

There were no calls from readers, the Canadian Press, or from reporters on competing papers. Of the Sun's own 50-man editorial staff, only one reported spotting the repetition. After the third day, the Sun confessed the trick to its readers, continuing:

"If the paper omits a comic strip . . . football scores or the horse-racing handicap column, the office switchboard begins winking frantically. . . . But the readers' reaction to stating the same Korean war story three times was disappointing indeed.

"Is it that British Columbians aren't interested in the war? Or is it because there are no new developments? . . . Or are the wire services failing down on their job by failing to find stories which stimulate the public interest?"

The Sun poses three questions. Our three answers would be: Yes. Yes. Yes. In two years we have failed to detect the slightest interest among Canadians in the war in Korea, with the exception of those whose immediate relatives or friends were serving with the Special Force. And these Canadians have come to depend almost entirely for their news about Korea from the letters they receive.

Nothing could be more obvious than the lack of new developments, and it is not to be expected that there will be new developments unless some drastic strategy is employed on one side or the other to break the stalemate. And in our minds there is little doubt that the wire services are failing down on the job. They are being handicapped by censorship red tape which prevents filing of newsworthy and readable stories from the war theatre.

We doubt very much that the blame falls on the individual correspondents. No trained newspaperman could be put down in Korea in war, in peacetime, and fail to file at least one good human interest story a day if he were given half a good report's chance to work. There must be, of course, a censorship code in force which imposes limitations, but we rather suspect that the same censorship code is being interpreted and judged in as much due to literal and unimaginative directives from the wire services offices here as to anything else.

But whatever the reasons may be, the Korean war — for all its overshadowing significance in the whirligig scheme of affairs at this crucial time — must be set down as the most uninteresting war in which Canada has ever been involved. And to say so does not disparage, or minimize one whit, the deeds and hardships of our Canadian force there or the anxiety and grief which must be the lot of loved ones and friends at home.

GARDEN IN WINTER

The grass has drifted off to sleep,
The evergreens
Their vigil near the garden keep.
The song birds all have flown.

The elms and maples, bare of leaf,
Stand black against the sun.
Only the blue jay's cry of "thief"
Is heard with day begun.

Who walks the garden space about
Believing ear and eye
Not trusting God this truth without
Is sadly doubtful.
That rest is not to die.

Yet soon again will bloom the rose
And green be grass and fern
And after winter's brief repose
The song birds will return.

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 2nd, 1932.

Only one building permit was issued in Belleville during the month of November and that was to Mr. J. T. Warren to build a private garage to cost $300. This is the lowest in years. For the eleven months of the year the building permits total $98,953.00. Last year the total permits amounted to $22,190.00. The increase this year is owing to the erection of the new building on Front Street."

The warm sun which has been continuous throughout the week continues to shine; the temperature on Monday at noon was close to 50 degrees. Most inquiries have been recorded during the late evening and early morning as the sun soon dispelled the cold. In some parts of the city it is reported that maple trees have been caused to bud by the unusual heat at this season. The warm spell has completed the job of breaking up the ice in the bay and harbor and has left the formerly hard sheet of ice in a dangerous condition for anyone to venture upon it.

Formation of a local branch of the Master Barbers' Association was completed Wednesday evening and the following officers were elected: President, Mr. Timothy Bolger; vice-president, Mr. J. Tripp; secretary, Mrs. R. E. Cole; treasurer, Mrs. K. Jones.

December 2nd, 1922.

Ald. William R. McCreary's endeavors to have a "Stop and Go" signal placed at the intersection of Front and Bridge Streets have at last been realized; the sign was placed in position today and a police constable is operating it. The constable blows a whistle when about to stop the traffic and the sign faces the motorists. When it is time to go. Speeding up of traffic and greater safety have already been noted by the owners. The matter was introduced by Ald. McCreary months ago by Ald. McCreary.

Belleville Cheese Board closed its business for this year today. One hundred and forty-nine boxes of white cheese and one hundred and fifteen boxes of colored cheese were offered and all sold at 15 3-8 cents. The buyers present were Messrs. Sprague, Cook, Alexander, Morton and Ivey.

40 YEARS AGO

Mr. J. Wilfred Holmes has been appointed auctioneer by the city council to succeed Mr. Fred D. Diamond, who recently resigned. There were twenty-five applicants for the position. The following were present at the meeting: Mayor Vermilyea, Aldermen Woodley, Clarke, Lewis, McCready, Sinclair, Marshall, Lott, Flagler, Allerford, Wright, Bogle, Paisley, Robinson and White.

Mr. E. VanDusen of Deseronto was in town today.

Mr. Walter Soule has been transferred to the Oshawa office of the Bell Telephone Company.

At the regular meeting of Malden Lodge No. 13 of Prentice Boys the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: I.P.M. A. M. Ketchenon; W.M., James Wareham; D.M. A. Stewart; chaplain, M. Dulmage; recording secretary, C. O. Richards; financial secretary, George Heckbourn; treasurer, Capt. Hart; D. of C., Gill Brown; O. T. George Andrews; J. T., William Cortier; committeemen, William Hart, Wesley Weese, William McDonald, William Hackett, J. Ayres; caretaker, Gill Brown; assistant, Wesley Weese; R. H. Ketcheson; visiting committee, James Warham, A. Stewart, George Heckbourn, Wesley McDonald; lodge trustees, A. Stewart, Wesley Weese and A. M. Ketcheson. At the close of the meeting an oyster supper was enjoyed at James Wallace's restaurant.

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

MOTHER TO MILLIONS

One of the most remarkable and beloved women in America was the late Dorothy Dix. She was actually mother to millions. A newspaper writer, who was an admirer of this writer, exclaimed: "Ach, that Dorothy Dix. She's a monument and poops wrapped up in one."

I have just read the story of Dorothy Dix, by Harnett Kane, in collaboration with Ella Bentley Arthur, the latter a long-time assistant and secretary. It is a fascinating story about a woman endowed with a will, a purpose, and courage that never failed her in the face of adversity. In many respects Dorothy Dix was one of the most useful women of her time — the sympathetic and understanding friend to millions who wrote to her over a long period of years. The book is well named — "Dear Dorothy Dix."

As an early reporter she was the peer of the best men on a woman. She was a small woman with dark, sparkling eyes. Perhaps that was why it was so easy for her to edge her way into people's hearts! Few could resist her charm, her honesty, and womanly understanding. She made it easy for anyone to confide in her. She had a rare wit and was heavily endowed with genuine common sense. She knew hardships, suffering and disappointments, so that when her great triumphs came they gave no character balance and serenity.

I can't help paying a tribute of love to Dorothy Dix in this space, for I knew her for more than thirty years. She had the most devastating smile — a smile that won you to her as a devotee for life! She was as kindly and joyous to all. She got stories from others when other writers could get. By her almost miraculous intuition she helped to solve many a puzzling crime. She once said no woman was ever convicted of libel she had the slightest cent, so penetrating was that intuition.

As an example of her succinct replies in correspondence, here is one. Said the correspondent: "I am going to be a secretary and want you to recommend a book that will help me become a typist and a good stenographer. I'm highly commened to you the unabridged dictionary."

Dorothy Dix's great service, as arrived however, when she diverted her talents for so many years to her newspaper column. Influencing millions with sound advice, comfort, and hope. Harnett Kane's biography is excellent and inspiring one — "the story of a commonplace woman." Dorothy Dix was "an institution"!

Skippers' Sixth Sense Serves As 'Native Radar' in B.C. Fogs

VANCOUVER—The fogs are rolling in these autumn evenings, and the skippers on the bridges of ships on this Pacific coast are scanning the picture windows of that newfangled thing called radar, which sees through the soup. But radar probably will never stop them using their own X-ray device, a sense of hearing so keen they can tell if a whistle echo has been bounced from a distant cliff or rock. Or whether the sound which is coming back at them was from the C.P.R. wharf or the one next to it.

This is the time of year when the fogs roll in along about sunset. The Loodoners talk about their pea-soupers, but those who have seen them say that ours are the West Coast are just as thick, and perhaps thicker. And while the motorists in gown-town Vancouver are creeping along, bundles of nerves as they watch for the dim, yellow lights in front of them, and beating their hearts as they put in the harbor are moving with hardly a break in their routine.

Stand down at the docks on a foggy evening and the fog is so thick that the street lamp above you sends out an eerie, yellow glow, but you can't see the ship whistles out in the harbor. The navigating officers, operating the whistles because of fog-travel regulations, listen to them intentant to them is the echo which comes back. By the echoes, they know where they are. The ability to read the sounds is a fantastic thing, even when they've had enough experience in developing it, they trust with their lives.

The skippers' probably have never heard of radar, but run the speed of sound. They just know by when they hear the whistle, and it takes a little while for the echo to come back, they're quite sure they're not in shoal water, or most no time lapse between whistle and echo, they are almost there.

The skippers know that each dock has little characteristics in the echoes. They probably don't realize it, but they do, and but they know that this echo is from that dock or the next one. One of the biggest tug boat companies on the West Coast, Charles H. Cates and Co., which has a formidable harbor fleet even makes its own particular brand of high-pitched whistle. It seems to have special echo-creating qualities. Sometimes the Cates tug slips out into the foggy channel to meet a freighter coming in and they whistle along guides it to safe anchorage. The tug, using the whistle, peers around the fog until the freighter's hull bounces back the echoes. Then the tug moves toward port, sounding its whistle, and the freighter slipper follows the sound until the hulk of the dock side creeps out of the fog ahead.

The fog whistle, of course, is used out at sea between Vancouver and Vancouver Island. There's a lot of island land between the mainland and Vancouver island and the skippers keep their whistles going. They are reading their compasses, of course, and keeping their radars on—if they have them. The not-radar ship skipper has his ears and his sense and he is attuned to the whistle, and when he hears one that sounds behind him where there shouldn't be one, he knows he's off his course. With an uncanny sense, he doesn't take him long to figure out where he is and get back there. Meanwhile, the big deep-throated fog horns, howling in the nearby mountains, are also helping to guide the skippers at certain points. Each of these land fog horns has a different rhythm, and the skipper recognizes it at once. He can tell how far he is from it, too. . . .

Radar, of course, is a tremendous asset to the skippers who are learning to depend on it. But they are trusting their whistles, and their ears, and their sense of echo-reading business for a long time.

As far as the passengers are concerned, there's only one drawback, the night-boat to Victoria, for instance. It's a popular excursion and the irritating routine when the ship gets to the fog patch is that those top-deck cabins with nothing between you and the whistle but one metal sound-conducting wall, you are liable to lay in your fingernails by half an hour.

100,000,000 New Trees

(Edmonton Journal)

The number of trees planted per year, in the provincial government scheme to put 100,000,000 trees on Alberta farms by 2011 is likely to be encouraging fashion. This year, the department's nurseryman reports, the total was close to 2,000,000. Last year it was about 1,650,000 and in 1950, when the scheme began, it was about 1,200,000.

Whether the objective of 100,000,000 proves to be realistic or not, it is obvious that every approach it the annual rate of planting must be stepped up still further.

Theoretically, it calls for 5,000,000 a year for the 25-year period; yet the total for the first three seasons fall short of 3,000,000.

Ties With Portugal

(St. John's Telegram)

No other foreign tongue is as familiar to New Foundland as the Portuguese, with the exception of to other provinces of Canada that Newfoundland has such ties of friendship and commerce with Portugal.

Portuguese navigators visited our shores shortly after John Cabot discovered this island and many of the place names were created by them and still remain in existence today.

Several times each year St. John's is crowded with Portuguese fishermen in from the Grand Banks for bunker oil and victualling. Apart from the trade which makes stores in this and other Canadian ports busy, the visitors are very gentlemanly in their conduct and cause the authorities no trouble.

BENEFITS OF "NO"

(Windsor Star)

A psychologist remarks that the best way to keep a child content is to say "No" to him occasionally. It's also the best way to keep him out of the reform school.

It Is No Offence

(Winnipeg Tribune)

It is no offence under the Criminal Code for a fraudulent promoter to offer a fictitious name to a police officer or anyone else unless done for purposes of fraud.

This is roughly, is what O. M. Mc Kay, deputy attorney-general for Manitoba, has told both criminal lawyers and police officers in connection with holding people of this province.

According to the attorney-general's department there are two exceptions about the use of false names. It is illegal in perpetrating a fraud and, under a city by-law, it is illegal to sign on a hotel or rooming house.

But if a person is arrested for being drunk or disorderly and for creating a disturbance, or being suspected of stealing, it is not illegal to give a false name.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

NEW ARMOR

Present day soldiers have gone through many wars.

Gone back? Some of us have been scrambling for a number of years why, amid all the modern gadgets, someone would not think up a new type of protecting soldiers from bullets and bayonets. Perhaps we have—with a fibre jacket which stops bullets and shrapnel and promises to save the lives of thousands of men.

But the new armor is distinctly a modern thing. It is no breast plate—no coat of mail. It is made out of the most recently discovered materials. It is worn on the battle field of today's paper. Twentieth century soldiers can only be protected by a twentieth century armor.

The wiles of the devil keep incessantly at their attempt to overwhelm the human beast. Evil never changes from age to age—and it never appears in two forms exactly alike and in the same form. Men and women—particularly young men and young women—are confronting the same temptations that have been confronting the human being since he always been confronting. But these temptations come to them now in different forms and attired in different dress. The only way modern temptations can be met is by modern devices. Medieval armor will not do for the modern soldier—nor old ways of resisting evil for modern people.

It takes new armor for new soldiers!

PLEASE, PIPE DOWN ON MIRACLE DRUGS!

Once or twice a year since Tony was a pup — Tony the Welsh Terrier that is — there's his portrait over my pipe dream desk — a pre-mistake cure for "the common cold" has been discovered or else an expedition has been launched to discover the common cold. After all, if I may say so, no one has yet identified such a malady or even described it scientifically. Perhaps this accounts for the fact that so many such projects, having made the front page, are never again heard from.

Only a search through back files of the magazines with publication circulation would tell just which of the rapid succession of "miracle" drugs was the original "miracle" medicine. It seems that in the early days of the Salk vaccine hope to 'release' a new or improved product and the shipper received it at once. He can tell how far he is from it, too. . . .

Radar, of course, is a tremendous asset to the skippers who are learning to depend on it. But they are trusting their whistles, and their ears, and their sense of echo-reading business for a long time.

As far as the passengers are concerned, there's only one drawback, the night-boat to Victoria, for instance. It's a popular excursion and the irritating routine when the ship gets to the fog patch is that those top-deck cabins with nothing between you and the whistle but one metal sound-conducting wall, you are liable to lay in your fingernails by half an hour.

By GREGORY CLARK

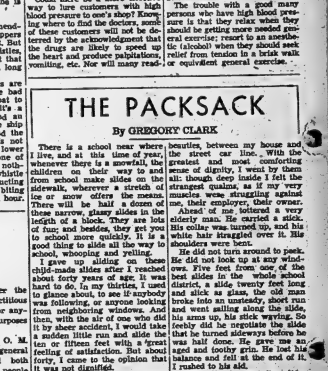
There is a school near where I live, and at this time of year, whenever there is a snowfall, the whole school goes out to play and from school make slides on the sidewalk, wherever a stretch of ice or snow offers the means. There will be small slides and those narrow, glassy slides in the height of a block. They are lots of fun and before I get past to school more quickly. It is a good thing to slide all the way to school, whooping and yelling.

I gave up sliding on these child-size slides when I reached about forty years of age. It was not that I, in my loftiness, looked down on sliding, but I was ill-anybody was following me, looking from their neighboring windows. And then, with the air of one who did it for his grandchildren, I would take a sudden little run and slide the ten or fifteen feet with a great feeling of satisfaction. But about forty, I came to the opinion that it was not dignified.

Yesterday was a glorious day for slides, where I live. There must have been twenty of them, beauties, between my house and the street car line. With the bracing air and the comforting sense of dignity, I went by them all: though deep inside I felt the tickle coming on. Like if my very muscles were struggling against it, their employer, their owner.

Ahead of me, loitered a very elderly man. He carried a stick. His coat was buttoned up, and his white hair straggled over it. His shoulders were bowed.

He did not turn around to peek. He did not look up at any windows. Five feet from one of the best slides in the whole school run, he put down his head long and slick as glass, the old man took his stick and made a short run and went sailing along the slide, his arms up, his body erect. So much so that he negotiate the slide that he turned sideways before he got to the end. He was not an aged and toothy grin. He lost his balance at the end of it. He rushed to his aid.



So we did the next five slides, between them we got our line together, holding each other up.

In Mexico last week a world famous painter once expelled from the Communist party for support of Trotsky, Stalin's rival and physicist, for restoration to Stalin's graces. The man was not being sent, to all the newspapers in Mexico he was a counterfeiter in a gold "deviations," hailed Stalin as the saint of peace, asked that he be ordered by communist good standing.

Some there are who still believe that communism is an economic creed, that it can be met and conquered by matching men from hunger. But communism is more than that: communism is a godless religion, dark, soulless creed whose cult is materialism—and evil challenging weapons more potent than alleviation of hunger.

'Christ in Christmas' Subject Bridge St. W.A.

The regular meeting of the Women's Association of Bridge Street Church was held in the church parlor on Friday afternoon, Mrs. R. H. Wray, the president, presided.

Reports were given by the secretary, treasurer, and conveners of the various committees. The treasurer's report on the annual bazaar and tea was a very gratifying one.

The program for the afternoon was under the direction of Mrs. Dallas and Mrs. Seldon's group. Mrs. A. H. Maginley conducted the devotional service based on Jane Scott's "Rocking Chair Reverie."

Study Speaker

The guest speaker Rev. A. E. MacKenzie, of Albert College, was introduced by Miss Pearl Campbell. Mr. MacKenzie chose the 53rd chapter of Isaiah as his theme for an inspiring address.

This passage of Scripture was written many years before Christ was born yet the prophet had given a marvellous description of the life of Christ in it.

The speaker agreed that this idea one reads and hears so much about of getting Christ back into Christmas, is an admirable one But it is well to remember that there is no real Christmas unless Christ is included in it. We must remember too that the Babe of Bethlehem is also the Christ of Calvary. The two are inseparable.

Men and women should grow up with their religion and become mature in it. We rejoice that the Christmas cards are so popular. Beyond the immediate emotions of joy others should want to participate in the spirit of Christmas.

"There is much work for us to do, we should be gripped with a sense of urgency about our task here and now! We should pray for our nation, day by day and be concerned and anxious about these people and their work. They are relying on us!

"The Holy gift of God that came down at Christmas time was meant for all people, we should open our hearts, eyes and ears to the Christmas message and work for God's Kingdom here on earth." With this thought provoking sentence, the speaker concluded his talk.

Mrs. V. J. White extended the sincere appreciation of the members to Rev. MacKenzie for his splendid message.

A social half hour was enjoyed with tea being served by the group in charge.

Miss W. Kydd To Speak Here

Miss Winnifred Kydd, C. B. E. will be guest speaker at the Women's Canadian Club, Wednesday evening at St. Andrew's Church Hall.

Miss Kydd holds her master degree from McGill University in Economics and Political Science and is a brilliant and experienced speaker. Having returned from an extended tour of South Africa, Rhodesia, Basutoland and East Africa, she brings first hand knowledge to the topic of her address, "The Race Question in Southern Africa."

Women's Activities

WESLEY W.A.

Mrs. Gooding opened her home recently to the Wesley W.A. for their regular meeting. Mrs. Windover conducted the program opening with an interesting reading on "Women" followed by a sing-song of hymns.

Election of officers took place for the following year.

Mrs. Gunn paid birthday dues. The copper contest was won by Mrs. Rutter Jr. Collection amounted to $3.10 and flower fund 36 cents.

Final arrangements were made for the bazaar which is being held on December 5th.

The meeting closed and a social half hour was spent.

$4,000 THEFT

HAMILTON (CP)—Theft of about $4,000 in cash and cheques from an east end home during the week-end was revealed Monday by police. Wesley J. Saunders told police the money was taken from a kitchen drawer. Some $2,000 was in cash and the remainder in cheques.

200 Attend Holy Rosary Parish Dance

Over 200 attended the Holy Rosary parish's first inaugural dance held on Friday evening at the Knights of Columbus rooms, where both old and young alike enjoyed the modern and old time dances.

The 17 time prizes, and the refreshments which were later served were graciously donated by the merchants of the city for which the Reverend Michael Simpson, pastor of the Holy Rosary parish, and the dance committee, Don Lee, E. Read, C. Doyle, Jack Barrett, Abbey Kaves and J. S. Colligan extend appreciative thanks. Thanks are extended also to the following: Miss Edna Lalonde, Mrs. E. Read, Mrs. Herbert Bowen, Mrs. J. S. Colligan, Mrs. Abbey Kaves, Mrs. Eddie Schnider and Mrs. Theresa Hogan, Mrs. George Lee, Peter Melchior and to all those who greatly assisted in making the dance such an outstanding success.

All are looking forward to the next event which will be held in the near future. The Christmas baskets draw will be held at the Holy Rosary card party early this month.

Club Activities

ST. ANDREW'S (HEAD E.B.)

The Christmas meeting of the Gilbert Baby Band was held at the home of Mrs. Carman Huffman with 22 ladies and 23 children present.

Mrs. Huffman, the leader, opened the meeting with the thought, "The best investment is in children." "You had better take a good look at them as they pass you on the street for they are the ones who are going to make a new world for you, and you can catch some glimpses of the dawn in their faces."

Before a picturesque Christmas setting the worship service was enacted by the pupils of S.S. 23, Thurlow and their teacher, Miss Meribeth Holgate.

Collection was received by Percy Treverton amounting to $4.50 and the Baby mite boxes were received totalling $7.18.

Program

The following program was then enjoyed: reading, "The Birth of Jesus", by Betty Pelcher; recitation, "I'm Glad I Live in Canada", Percy Treverton; reading, "Christmas Joy", Blanche Swan; solo, "Here Comes Santa Claus", "The Little Prayer", Linda Rose; reading, "David Brings Christmas Gifts From Angola", Eugene Badgley; recitation "Little Case dies", Francis Gordon; solo, "Away In a Manger", Blanche Swan; reading, "A Dream of Christmas Eve", Gladys Rollins; recitation, "Christmas Secrets", Muriel Gordon; recitation, Doris Bandy; recitation, "Love", Harry Huffman; reading, "Thank you from Canada", by Audrey Swan; recitation, "Christmas Lights", Lois Bandy; reading, "The Kittens' Christmas" by Betty Badgley; reading "Christmas Time Again", by Jimmy Leavens; recitation, Dorothy Bandy; story, Mrs. James Huffman; music, Audrey Swan, Candy Hand.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and an enjoyable social half hour was spent.

A vote of thanks was tendered the leader and hostess for her services during the past year by Mrs. O. Bertrand.

HOLLOWAY FELLOWSHIP CLUB

The Fellowship Club of Holloway Street United Church, held its meeting of the month on Wednesday evening in the church parlor.

Mrs. Mary White presided in the absence of Mrs. William Anderson.

During the business period $25 was granted to the M. and M; $5 for Salvation Army; $5 for the Home for the Aged for Christmas.

The devotional period was taken by Miss Helen Hawley, Mrs. Wilkes and Mrs. F. Eigle.

Miss L. Morton gave a piano solo and Mrs. Hawley a reading.

TANK HURLED 30 FEET

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Are Mother-in-Law Automobile-ally entitled to Love?

One of my readers is very cross with me indeed because of some remarks I made a few weeks ago in this column about a mother-in-law.

The situation which involved this particular mother-in-law concerned a young couple who lived with the husband's mother, and the latter was driving the young wife crazy by insisting that everything, even the bringing up of her daughter-in-law's young twins, should be done her way. The latter telling me about the problem came from the wife who said that her mother-in-law's constant interference in everything she did had made her so nervous that every time she tried to beat her mother-in-law's footsteps she began "to shake all over."

Most of what I said in my comments concerned the importance of a young couple having their own home. About the mother-in-law herself, I said practically nothing, except that interfering in-laws are one of the greatest causes of trouble between young husbands and wives; that for any young married couple to live with the parents of either is simply asking for that kind of trouble, and that when a young woman begins to "shake all over" at the mere sound of her mother-in-law's footsteps, it's high time something is done to remove her from such nervous strain.

Under the circumstances, it seems to me that these were very mild remarks, but the reader I mentioned at the beginning apparently feels that what I said was a vicious attack on all mothers-in-law everywhere.

Have Own Opinions

"My mother-in-law is surely no different from any other mother-in-law," she continued, adding: "Everyone, no matter who they are, has their own opinions and their own way of doing things. I always believed that you accept people as they are and for what they are. I never have had any cause to say that my mother-in-law's steps make me tremble, though I have lived with her for two years.

"It might be well to uphold the mother-in-law of today, and not these young modern wives who only went to marriage with no responsibilities.

"Certainly I grant that maybe there are times when the wife who rewrote you really becomes provoked, but is that any reason for her to think her mother-in-law the worst person she knows? After all, isn't she her husband's mother, and doesn't that mean anything at today? How can she possibly love her husband when she loathes his mother so much, the one who raised him and cared for him so that today the wife can have him? I want you to publish this, and I hope that the countless wives who have the law trouble will try to make their husbands happy by at least trying to love their mothers."

Although I have never had any "in-law" trouble myself, I feel happy state of affairs does not make me blind to the fact that there are numerous wives not so fortunate. Apparently this reader's own domestic fortune in not having "in-law trouble" does make it impossible for her to understand that other women might not be so lucky.

I can by no means opposed to mothers-in-law on general principles! But I think that they, like everybody else in the world, are not automatically entitled to love and respect from anyone, including daughters-in-law and sons-in-law, but must earn it by being the kind of loving, understanding, considerate person who deserves love from others if a mother-in-law is not that kind of person, instead, one who is domineering, interfering, and a general nuisance, as thousands of them certainly are, then I think a daughter-in-law or son-in-law should keep as much distance between her and themselves as possible.

Christmas Gift Candies

By Mary Moore

By MARY MOORE

When it comes to typographical errors such as "Mary stinks you should make pickles" or "Drown the onions in the beer better" all of the blame rests on me of course. I can absorb it. Oh sure, I'm strong. My shoulders are broad. But I will not, I won't shoulder the responsibility of guaranteeing good candy if you don't use a candy thermometer.

How can anyone gauge the 236 deg. Fahr. required for fudge? If it is lower your fudge won't harden. If the temperature is higher the fudge will be sugary.

Don't pass a plate of candy to your friends and say "I made this from one of Mary Moore's recipe, but it's not very good— of course I didn't use a thermometer..." Grrr, I bite too.

Peace On Earth Good Will to Men. There. That brought me back into the Christmas spirit fold with a bang.

Dearies. Here are some candies you might like to make up for your Christmas gifts. (I'm all unruffled and mild as milk, see?)

CREAMY CHRISTMAS FENUCHS

(Brown sugar fudge)

Three cups brown sugar well-packed, 1 cup whole milk, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon butter, 1½ cups nuts—walnuts or pecans, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Place sugar, milk, and salt in 1½ quart saucepan and cook to 236 deg. Fahr., stirring occasionally, but not frequently, to prevent sticking. Remove from heat and add butter. Let stand until temperature is reduced to 110 deg. Fahr., leaving thermometer in pan while syrup cools. Now beat with heavy spoon until syrup starts to become cloudy and thicken, now add chopped nuts and vanilla. Beat a few more strokes to mix them in then pour into buttered dish. Smooth top, mark into 1-inch squares. On each square place ½ nut meat or half cherry alternately or use green and red cherry halves only, and make it look like a checkerboard, with the cherries in alternate positions. You could give a glass pie dish plate with the candy, prettily decorated in it, for your gift.

CHOCOLATE CREAM FONDANT

This is an honest recipe that I worked on for weeks. It is a smooth Chocolate Fudge but may be used as centres for chocolate dipping.

Three-eighths cup golden corn syrup, 2¾ cups granulated sugar, ½ cup best quality cocoa, 2/16 teaspoon salt, ½ cup milk, (Don't substitute brown sugar.) Add all ingredients and place over low heat in large saucepan, put thermometer in syrup and heat to 234 deg. Fahr. Stir constantly but very slowly after temperature reaches 230 deg. Fahr., to prevent scorching. Immediately remove from heat and stand pan containing syrup in larger pan containing cold water, to cool it to about 130 deg. Fahr. then beat it with strong rotary beater or electric beater until it stiffens. 1) if for chocolate Fudge pour into buttered pan to depth of ¾ inch, and mark into squares and chill. When 1 or 1¼ cups freshly shelled English walnuts or pecans are added it is superlatively good. 2) It may be formed into centres, chilled and chocolate dipped.

WHITE FULL CANDY

(These may be after-dinner mints)

Stir together until sugar is dissolved 1½ cups sugar, ¼ cup water, 2 tablespoons milk vinegar and ⅛ teaspoon butter. Do not stir any more but cook to 238 deg. Fahr. over high heat. Remove at once and add flavoring (if to be colored green add 4 drops peppermint; if to be pink cinnamon oil, etc.) Pour onto oiled platter or marble slab and let cool until a dent can be made when touched with finger. Gather up into lump and pull between buttered hands until it is light and porous. Any desired coloring may be added while you pull. When it is opaque and porous and feels as if it might hold its shape, roll into long ropy thin strips and cut them into ¾-inch pieces. If placed in tightly covered jar or waxed-paper-lined tin these will become creamy—but sometimes this creamy stage requires 10 days. Worth it though.

Did I mention a thermometer somewhere?

Children . . . And Their "Very Own" Christmas Cards

Lovingly urge your children to send Christmas cards . . . even when they are so young that you guide the little fingers to print, say initial as a signature, or to add an "X" to their name, which you have written. This plan, if at all possible, to have a child choose with perhaps some gentle and discreet guidance from you, his or her own Christmas card. This adds a sweet value to the child's greetings.

Writing Invitation to Carol-Singing on Christmas Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

This will be the first Christmas we (my husband and I and our three children) have lived here in this friendly town, and everyone has been wonderful to us. We love Christmas, and we love to sing Christmas carols, and we'd like to ask all our friends and neighbors here to come to our house on the afternoon before Christmas to sing Christmas carols, as was our custom "back home." I have already bought our Christmas cards, and now I'm wondering if it would be at all proper to write the invitations to this sing on these cards. If so, will you please suggest a form?

E. Y.

Yes, indeed it is. This is just the thing to do—proper, festive, friendly! For example, on the inside page opposite the message, write: "The Five Festers—Frank and Frances, and Florence and Fay and Freddie—hope that you and the children will come to our house on Wednesday, the 24th, to sing Christmas carols with us, and have some Christmas cookies. Please tell us 'yes'."

Bride's Mother to Come to Wedding From England

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

(1) For several years I have been living with my aunt and uncle in this country. I am to be married soon, and would like to have a quite large wedding in the church where my fiance and I have been active in several organizations. (We are having no reception.) My mother and father live in England. My mother will come to the wedding, but my father is not well enough to make the trip. I would like to send the invitations in mother's name, but I wonder if I should send them in the names of my aunt and uncle, since I have been living with them. Or should I use all three names?

(2) In these circumstances, who should give me in marriage?

Molly E.

(1) Your wedding invitations may be correctly sponsored by your mother and father, even though your father will not be able to be present. "Mr. and Mrs. Joseph English request the honor of your presence . . ."

(2) It is correct for your mother to give you in marriage. She may either step forward to make her response of "I do" to the clergyman's question, "Who giveth . . . ?", or she may just remain in her seat in the front pew on the left of the church aisle.

TRAPPER RENTS BEAR

CRANBROOK, B.C. (CP)—A trapper from nearby Wardner defended himself from an attacking wounded grizzly by holding the animal's jaws apart with his hands. Frank Fitzsimmons escaped with gashes on his hand after the wounded female charged and slapped him to the ground. A companion finished her off with a bullet behind the ear. Before charging, the big bear had been hit twice. Fitzsimmons is recovering in hospital.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Moist air good for the complexion

Be a Rainy-Daisy. Don't just be a fair-weather baby. Make it a practice to get out of doors often, as you can, to be housebound is likely to result in a pallor, to say nothing of moods and boredom.

On a murky morning you will probably plan to stick in the house, catch up on sleep. But you do, you will be missing an opportunity to give yourself a fine complexion treatment. Bank on your seven league boots and beat it. What! Get soaked, huh? Always seek transportation of one kind or another? There don't do that bawling if the youthful lines of your figure evaporate and you take on the middle-age spread. Walking is an excellent exercise, especially if you step along prettily, carry yourself properly.

Be a Rainy-Daisy.

Women who travel a lot discover that when the climate is extra dry their skins develop artificial tendencies. Desquamation—a flaffing away of dead skin cells—takes place. The surface of the skin loses softness, takes on the texture of an emery board. The hair loses gloss, breaks at the bonds of the comb.

When these same gababouts go to the seashore, where fogs roll in from the ocean and the air is heavy with moisture, they behold a complexion change for the better. The skin blooms; the surface is soft; the texture is pleasing. In England, where heavy fogs frequently occur, women are distinguished for their beautiful complexions. The same is true in Norway.

Here is what the Rainy-Daisy should do put on a short skirt and a raincoat with a hood. She doesn't want to be hindered with an umbrella it will interfere with correct walking. Her feet should be shod in comfortable shoes with flexible leather soles and low or medium heels.

The chest should be lifted, the head held high, the arms have an easy swing. Never let the kneed buckle. There should be no hips with no swinging or swaying. She must come down evenly on heels and toes then there is no body jar. She must not dawdle or saunter, but walk briskly. The idea is to get herself all steamed up so her skin will be moist.

Breathing should be deep and free, and spaced with one's steps.

Fashion Flashes

ALWAYS BEGUILING is the flatty-cotton print, when it is trimly handled. For evening wear there's a handsome outfit made up of a slightly flaring, waltz-length skirt made entirely of ivory white lace ruffles, and a strapless bodice of black mat rayon jersey. With it is a double-length piece of matching jersey that slips over the head, poncho-fashion.

DID YOU EVER see anything nicer than this winter's crop of at-home clothes? For instance, one girl had just treated herself to a softly full skirt of boldly striped silk acetate in red, black and gold. Black wool jersey is used for the short-sleeved, collarless top, trimmed with black braid.

ORIGINALITY marks the present crop of accessories. Handwoven gold and wool tweed is used for a flat oval bag. Matching gloves are cut with a sharply pointed cuff.

A SERVICE BROW is required for one of those off-the-forehead golf hats. Red felt is used for a golf hats that fans out in pleats in back. Over the hair in front it lies in crown folds.

NEW HANDLING of such fabrics as camel hair and cashmere has helped to make for a most luxurious winter season. Gray cashmere is used for a moderately flared coat with wide, turned-back cuffs, and a light gray knitted yoke that is attached to a stove-pipe collar that buttons to the chin.

Canadians After Capturing German Sub Found Nazis Knew About Coastal Waters

By DOUGLAS ROW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian navy learned of German use of snorkels at the end of the Second World War and made an embarrassing discovery. The Germans knew more about Canadian coastal waters than Canada.

Their charts left no doubt of that. It was information the Germans had been gathering in one, too.

Nazi U-boats, the navy suddenly realized, had lurked on top of entire surface layers of water, had hidden by hooker and crannies of the Atlantic the Canadians didn't even know existed. The plume layers and the arctic basins the Canadians used to try to pinpoint the enemy.

Working in Dark

"It was like trying to run an air force without knowing much about weather," one officer explains.

One of the big assignments given post-war defence research board was the elimination of that ignorance. Over several years of broad-sive study, teams of oceanographers and hydrographers, spearheaded by DRBe have roughed in charts that tell much about the character and constitution of the waters off both Canadian coasts.

They have learned, among other things, that the gulf stream, the great current that runs through the Atlantic ocean, swings like a giant cable in the depths south and east of Nova Scotia. They're still after more detail to fill in their charts.

This campaign attacks is one of numerous major studies assigned to DRB, either to do itself or to correlate the work of other departments.

Big Undertaking

Five years old and steadily expanding, this scientific arm of the defence department—along with the three armed forces' own development projects—has blossomed into a $42,000,000-a-year business and is charged with keeping Canada abreast of the advances of military science.

Its headquarters are a small fortress within defence headquarters itself, a hush-hush fortress where solid security laws prevail. Under Dr. O. M. Solandt, the chief of physiologist, it is the pivot of Canada's international bargain in military science.

By that bargain, Canada specializes in certain fields and trusts her successes over to her Allies. She relies on those Allies to protect her to other fields, notably atomic weapons.

Notable Advances

For her part, Canada has developed these types of scientific aids which have either been adopted by Atlantic Pact Allies as standard or say reported likely to be:

1. An anti-tank shell called the "Sabot," now in production. DRB has become so intrigued by the "Sabot" principle that it is likely to show up in other shells. The principle is to sheathe the real shell in a larger outer casing to give greater initial velocity. Once in flight the outer shell drops off, resembling an old Dutch shoe or sabot.

2. A flametthrower nicknamed the Iroquois which spews a dense stream of fire much farther and more accurately than its wartime predecessor, costs much less to make and is easier and better to handle.

3. The best snowmobile available for arctic travel as well as certain items of arctic clothing including the parka.

4. A walkie-talkie wireless set with a radius of one-mile for infantry use.

Both the first two projects are primarily developments of army experts.

New Type Bazooka

DRB has a new-type bazooka just about ready for anti-tank field trials by the army, a weapon said to be far more accurate and just as deadly as the 3.5-inch U.S. bazooka now in use in Korea. It, too, may get into international use.

An air-to-air guided missile for RCAF fighters has been passed through the early phases of development and is progressing satisfactorily. Canada is benefiting from work by her Allies but is aiming at an anti-bomber missile that will more than the speed of sound—roughly 750 MPH — and which will be in some ways unique.

Important developments have been going on in other fields with DRB involved to a greater or lesser degree—the CF-100 jet fighter and Orenda engine, arctic clothing, much more powerful and effective radar, defensive work on gas and germ warfare that puts Canada in the forefront in this category, various types of human medical and operational research arising from the problems of war.

Most of all, Canada has made her first full-fledged effort to know the Arctic. She has mapped it, manned military outposts in it, established air and weather bases and made studies of its communications with the mysterious barriers the northern lights or aurora borealis throw up against radio communications.

The war on northern lights has finally reached the point where scientists predict that within a few years they will be able to send radio signals right through rather than skirting the obstacle.

Span Canada

Strung across Canada and into the sub-Arctic are DRB's 11 research bases, topped by the chemical and bacterial warfare base at Suffield, Alta., and the Canadian armament research and development establishment at Valcartier, Que. Another important establishment is the defence research northern laboratory at Churchill, Man. on Hudson Bay.

Out of CARDE come such things as the Sabot shell, the new type bazooka and the guided missile. Suffield remains largely a place of mystery, a half-million acres of Prairie where the chief security as Canada makes studies for herself and Allies of the threats of gas and germ warfare.

Winthrop Aldrich U.S. Ambassador To Great Britain

NEW YORK (AP)—Winthrop Aldrich, New York banker, will become United States ambassador to Britain early next year, it is announced. The appointment was made by President-elect Eisenhower who stated he was reluctantly accepting the resignation of Walter B. Gifford.

Aldrich is chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of New York and chairman and director of the Chase Safe Deposit Company.

Gifford, former chairman of the board of American Telephone and Telegraph Co., was appointed ambassador in 1939 by President Truman. He is 67 and an active Republican.

ATTACK UNKNOWN SUB

MANILA (AP) — The Manila Bulletin today said a Philippine Navy patrol vessel dropped depth charges on an unidentified submarine Friday off the east coast of Lumon Island, Philippines Navy headquarters confirmed the presence of a submarine in the area but refused to discuss the report.

Chalk Up Two More for Reds

MOSCOW (AP) — Mark up two more inventions claimed by the Russians. The Soviet press declared Soviet; inventors put into operation 17 years ago today an automatic radio printer. The press also claimed that I. P. Rulkin of Russia in 1791 constructed a pedal-propelled automobile.

BRITAIN PLANS

Less Need in 1953

Growers managed to sell 130,000,000 pounds, but purchasers in both Canada and other countries bought a lot of it to build up stockpiles that would mean less need for purchases in 1953.

Because of the high yields and reduction in demand for certain types of manufactured tobacco products, stocks on hand at the end of 1953 will be considerably higher than normally required, Mr. MacEachen said.

The conference, in its second day, has already appealed to the federal government to bolster price support for eggs, and extend it to poultry. Provincials also have urged that the government change its support policy from a flat to sliding price by three cents a pound. The move, planned for Jan. 1, will reduce the hen floor to 23 cents a pound from 26.

Commodity Forecasts

Today, the provincial agriculture ministers gave consideration to these other commodity forecasts:

1. The current price floor is not likely will continue throughout 1953 but probably will not go much higher.

2. Apple prices likely will remain firm throughout the season, with production this year down from 1951. Britain is not taking any Canadian apples this year, but Canada may get a share of the South American market.

3. Lower prices for such forage crop seeds as timothy and creased wheat grass likely will continue in 1953. Feeders this year of principal forage crop seeds is expected to be sufficient for Canada's needs with some exportable surplus likely for alfalfa, alsike, timothy and brome grass seed.

Complained of Prices

Canadian housewives complained last year of unusually high potato prices, caused mainly by a below-normal crop. This year production stepped up to 58,000,000 bushels from 48,600,000 in 1951, but potato prices were just about where they were a year ago.

Under an agreement with the U.S. Canada can ship a total of 13,315,000 bushels of potatoes into the American market at half-duty but prices in Canada are so much higher than those in northeastern U. S. that Canadian maritime exporters aren't shipping to the U.S.

Killer Captured

PHOENIX, Ariz. (CP)—Winnie Ruth Judd, red-headed killer who broke out of Arizona State Hospital last Thursday night, was captured here after 48 hours of freedom.

Police picked her up Saturday after receiving a tip that she might be at the home of her prison guardian, Mrs. Fay Harvey.

It was the sixth break for freedom by Winnie, 49, who was committed to the hospital in 1933 after killing two girl friends and dismembering their bodies.

Accident-Free Drivers to Get 20 P.C. Discount

MONTREAL (CP)—The dominion board of insurance underwriters announces a plan to offer a 20-per-cent "no accident" discount on 1953 rates on public liability and property damage insurance to pleasure drivers accident-free for the last three years.

Drivers must be in the "a-1" insurance classification which covers pleasure automobiles driven by persons over 25 years of age.

The board, made up of more than 100 companies writing automobile insurance in Canada, said Sunday its members had agreed in principle to the plan.

The board estimated that 60 per cent of all Canadian motorists — more than 700,000 drivers—are in the classification and would be eligible for the discount if their driving record was accident-free. To qualify, such drivers would have to declare they had not been involved in an accident for three years.

The plan would become effective when 1953 automobile rates are announced and would be based on those rates. The announcement said the plan is being introduced "as a means of encouraging safer driving and in an attempt to keep insurance costs down for careful drivers in the face of sharp increases in the accident record and in the ever-rising costs of accidents."

For the present, the plan was confined to public liability and property damage coverage and did not extend to other coverage such as collision, fire and theft.

GENERAL PEARKES

244th On Leave

(It was announced in October that Brig. Connelly was being relieved 11 years early because there was no further room for him in the army. He's still on leave and hasn't got a civilian job yet.)

That was Gen. Pearkes' version of the case. He invited Defence Minister Claxton to give a full and clear statement of the government's position. There was no chance Monday.

He didn't name Mr. Pearson in saying the real blunderer should have been sent to the Senate. But later outside the House he said in an interview that Mr. Pearson is the man he meant.

The House, its sessions still foreshtened by the long throne speech debate, also heard:

1. Defence Minister Claxton say Canada and the U. S. have agreed to allow frigate planes to cross the border in checking on unidentified aircraft in certain defence zones.

2. New D. G. Hansell (SC-Macleod) predict that a new two-party alignment will emerge in Canada with the CCF and Liberal parties merged on one side, Social Credit as the defender of free enterprise on the other. The Progressive Conservatives, he said, will cease to be a major party.

3. Members on all sides brie ed orful, loquacious Jean Francois Pouliot (L-Temiscouata) on the 29th anniversary of his election to the Commons.

4. George Murray (L—Cariboo) say he is shocked by statements about the late prime minister Mackenzie King in Bruce Hutchison's book "The Incredible Canadian" and that it is unfortunate no one has replied to them.

FOUR

Few at Hall

Interest in the election results was practically commensurate with that shown by voters at the polls. When the first return filtered in to the city hall where tabulators city treasurer Drury Denyes, Leighton Thompson and George Whitman awaited them, approximately a half dozen people were in evidence.

By seven-thirty with ten polls accounted for, a few more had trickled in and by eight o'clock with two of the polls to hear from, roughly fifty people were on hand. Even some of the candidates had not shown up at this time.

However, the quickness and dispatch with which returns were filled with the tabulators probably had something to do with the small attendance. Ordinarily only some half dozen polls returns were filed by increased up to 41 Came the last returns and the small audience grew when it was noted that Thomas had polled 43 votes to take the lead.

Countryman and Duffy also staged a close fight for third and fourth spots with the lead alternating at times. At the finish only 11 votes separated the candidates. Alderman-elect Gerald Hyde rode strongly throughout, while a close battle was fought for the seventh positions between Alderman H. J. Clarke and John Bradford.

Clarke in Sixth Spot

Reluctant to admit a lethargic attitude on the part of the electorate, one or two veteran observers of city affairs felt the absence of a mayoralty contest; election of public utility commissioners and members of the board of education; and the fact that no new by-laws were up for public approval, had something to do with public lack of interest.

However as some others put it, "The public at times makes up its bones about criticism of its elected aldermen and what they do. Perhaps they're not taking enough to go to the polls and vote. It is not a fair attitude to take. And if it is so secret that the severest critics are those who do not bother to go to the polls."

However "middle" interest was fair, although not up to the standard of previous years, it telephone calls in the news rooms of the Ontario Intelligencer can be taken as an indication.

A battery of telephones were in use last night with additional staff on hand to take care of the calls of the curious. The requests for information were fairly steady, but in no wise reached the numbers of last year.

And again the operators of the Bell Telephone Company were cause for praise for the splendid job. They handled whatever calls came through with speed and precision, and should be commended on an outstanding effort.

She Was Laid Up With RHEUMATIC PAIN

"I had been afflicted with rheumatic attacks ever since I was a girl," writes Mrs. Evelyn Sleight, Alta. "Four years ago I was in bed tormented by rheumatic pain and could not move. Frost Says Grants Helping to Keep Taxes Down

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost says provincial grants to municipalities are helping to keep down taxes on real estate.

Speaking Monday at the opening of a 10,000,000-gallon water filtration plant in suburban Scarborough he said that, in the 19 years since he became provincial treasurer, the amount Scarborough receives from the province has increased 677 per cent to $575,778 a year. This was exclusive of school grants, up 630 per cent.

"These tremendous sums, common to municipalities across Ontario, have substantially supplemented the work of municipal councils," the premier said.

Existing Fees Hard on Stations Says Counsel

TORONTO (CP)—Counsel for station CHML of Hamilton said before the Exchequer Court of Canada that existing fees for use of copyrighted music "could put Canadian radio stations out of business."

This argument was put forth Monday at the closing session of a test case to determine the validity of rates set by the copyright appeal board for use of music on radio for which the Composers, Authors and Publishers Association of Canada holds the copyright.

The case was heard by Mr. Justice J. C. A. Cameron. He reserved decision and it is expected within 30 days.

Station CHML, backed by the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, whose membership includes most private Canadian stations, decided to contest the board's decision that stations would pay 1% per cent of gross revenue for use of CAPAC music.

CANADA IS ON THRESHOLD OF VAST ADVANCE, SAYS B of M PRESIDENT

B. C. Gardner Sees Voluntary Savings As "Seed Corn of Industrial Growth"

Montreal, Dec. 1—Affirming that Canada stands "on the threshold of vast industrial advance," B. C. Gardner, president of the Bank of Montreal, today emphasized four factors of "fundamental importance to this country's future well-being" in his address to the 135th annual general meeting. These covered Canada's continued dependence on foreign markets, the recognition of productivity as the key to progress, the role which saving played in a dynamic economy, and the growing function of government in the economic and social order.

Gordon R. Ball, general manager, presented the bank's 135th annual statement reporting record total assets of $2,986 millions and record deposits standing at $2,146 millions. These compared with assets of $2,321 millions and deposits at $2,025 millions at the year 1951 year end. Total current loans another new high, were $603 millions, an increase of $46 millions. Dominion and provincial taxes were $5,918,000, and net earnings amounted to $5,665,778, of which $4,000,000 was paid out in dividends at the rate of $1.25 per share, an addition of $2 millions was transferred from the profit-and-loss account to the reserve fund, now standing at $53 millions.

Need Remains for Markets Abroad

The B of M president noted that "our impressive industrial expansion has in no sense little to render us less dependent on export trade," and that much of the new industrial capacity being established in Canada today is for the "manufacture or production of materials that will have to find external markets if the enterprises are to prosper."

"The course of business in the United States, and its influence on that country's demand for the bulk of Canadian products, are of greater direct concern to us than ever before," Mr. Gardner added. "We also have a vital and continuing interest in the recovery of the dollar purchasing power of the Commonwealth and of other overseas countries."

Another factor of the same problem, Mr. Gardner stated, was that Canada can ill afford" the competitive disadvantage that would result if the domestic level of prices should rise faster than corresponding prices in other major countries.

Actual Output Grows Slowly

Great as Canada's material progress has been, Mr. Gardner said "the over-all gain in output that can be achieved from one year to another is relatively limited." It was, in fact, only about one and a half per cent per annum for the 5-years Canadian.

"Yet it is out of this relatively modest annual gain in productivity," he said, "that all desire for enhanced living standards, for greater social security, and all the growing requirements of the community for defence, for urban expansion and increased governmental services must be met, if they are to be met."

There was a real danger, Mr. Gardner maintained, that in the competitive jostling of various groups and interests, "too much may be demanded too quickly, resulting only in a reduction of "the quantity of goods a dollar will buy."

Profits Have Role as Savings

The president next discussed the vast capital requirements of an expanding economy, and their tendency to "run ahead of new savings provided voluntarily by the Canadian community." He said that, normally, the largest single constituent of voluntary saving was money ploughed back into industry itself through the use, for corporate purposes, of undistributed profits and depreciation reserves. Such retained funds are, therefore the seed corn of industrial growth. Far from being anti-social, they are a social necessity."

Turning to the role that should be assigned government in the social and economic order, Mr. Gardner observed that "this demands of the community for civilian services provided by government seem to grow from year to year," and there seemed to be an increasing tendency to run to government for protection against the "ordinary hazards of day-to-day business." But "the services provided by government must be paid for out of the pockets of private citizens," and "increasing governmental costs can be a retarding influence on Canadian progress."

General Manager's Address

Mr. Ball stated that, once again this year, the "accordance of national economic activity" would probably show new high records for output, employment and income, but the "margin of gain will be relatively small."

Consumers, he said, had recently been spending more freely, especially on durable items, but selling has been "off the shelf," bringing inventories down to more conservative levels. "Reflecting this drawing down of stocks, manufacturing output in physical quantity has been running somewhat below last year."

Livestock and meat prices were still adversely affected by the U.S. embargo, Mr. Ball noted, but Canada's greatest wheat crop had been safely harvested. Canadian defence spending and U.S. military orders in Canada were growing, along with private capital expenditures.

Referring to the exceptional strength of the U.S. dollar in last year, the general manager said it reflected both the favorable situation of the Canadian economy at the present time and also, through external investment, an optimistic appraisal, by outside observers, of this country's future prospects."

Advocates Free Sterling Rate

Mr. Ball commented that Canada's abandonment of a fixed exchange rate had resulted in a less speculative, more soundly based inflow of capital for long-term investment. He also noted that, within 15 months after the exchange rate was freed, Canada's exchange control was completely abandoned. These lessons, he thought, might in some measure apply elsewhere.

In the case of Sterling, Mr. Ball pointed out that «"the defence of a fixed rate cannot be one of the influences contributing to recurrent drains on exchange reserves and to continued dependence on restrictive controls . . . These controls were becoming more difficult to apply effectively. The advent of full convertibility and elimination of exchange controls might be greatly hastened" if the Sterling exchange rate were first set free to find "a realistic level determined by market forces."

Mr. Ball concluded his address with an expression of thanks "to those 19,000 people who, in their various capacities, are serving the bank so faithfully and so well." He added . . . "I am confident that our staff, in addition to doing their work efficiently, are building for the bank, through courtesy and cheerfulness, an enormously valuable fund of goodwill."

Bank of Montreal Appointments

B. C. GARDNER

GORDON R. BALL

ARTHUR C. JENSEN

MONTREAL — Election of Gordon R. Ball to the presidency of the Bank of Montreal and appointment of Arthur C. Jensen to succeed him as general manager, were announced yesterday, following the bank's 135th annual meeting, by B. C. Gardner, B. of M. president since 1944. Mr. Gardner has been elected chairman of the board and of the executive committee.

Mr. Ball becomes president of Canada's senior banking institution after five years as its general manager. Beginning his career as a junior at Perth, Ont., he now president — a Torontonian by birth — takes over as chief executive officer after a broad experience over 38 years. Immediately before his appointment as general manager in 1947, he was head of the bank's important agency in New York, where he was active in Canadian affairs.

Banking Over Half a Century

His predecessor, Mr. Gardner, who was recently made chancellor of McGill University, comes to the chairmanship of the bank with more than half a century of banking experience behind him. Born in England, he came to Canada in 1906 at the age of 22, after five years' banking in his native Bristol. Four years later — at 26— he was a bank manager — at Trail in British Columbia, which was then very much in the pioneer stage of its development.

Like Mr. Ball, Mr. Gardner was also once head of the bank's New York organization. Subsequently, he was made an assistant general manager, and ten years ago he became general manager under the late George W. Spinney whom he succeeded as president upon Mr. Spinney's death nearly five years ago.

New G. M. is Newfoundlander

Arthur Jensen, a Newfoundlander by birth, succeeds Mr. Ball as General manager following five years as assistant general manager. As in the case of Mr. Ball, Mr. Jensen's experience in banking extends over 30 years, during which he has served the bank in both London and New York. His first appointment with the bank was as assistant manager of the securities department at the head office in 1935. Eight years later he became a superintendent and in 1947 assistant general manager in charge of the bank's Ontario division at the head office.

During the war Mr. Jensen served with the National War Finance Committee at Ottawa under Mr. Spinney who was chairman of the committee until shortly after he was elected president of the bank.

Mr. Jensen has been active in the affairs of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, in which he has recently served as honorary treasurer and as a member of the national board of directors and executive council.

Canada Asks Permission To Support Plea

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Canadian government has asked the federal power commission for permission to intervene in support of New York's application to join in construction of the proposed St. Lawrence power project.

The power authority of New York State has applied to the FPC for a licence to be the American partner in the estimated $500,000,000 project which engineers say will yield more than 13,000,000,000 kilowatt hours annually.

The Canadian petition was filed Monday under the power commission by Hume Wrong, Canadian ambassador to the United States. Charles M. Goetz, lawyer for the New York State authority, said that Connecticut and New Hampshire also have filed petitions in support of the New York application.

AWARDED DAMAGES

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—James G. McEwan, Windsor, and four members of his family Monday were awarded damages of more than $8,000 in connection with a fatal way accident at nearby Tilbury a year ago. A counter claim by two passengers in the second car, driven by Mildred Barges of Chicago, was dismissed. Mr. McEwan's wife and daughter and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wellington McEwan of Wyoming, Ont., had sought damages of $61,303 from Mrs. Barges.

TWELVE

That afternoon, the chess games were something less than exciting. There we were, with Omsk, the capital of Siberia, outside our front door and we couldn't see it. Perhaps that's an exaggeration. We could see it. We could see factory chimneys and office buildings on the right bank of the river, a few kilometers away.

The Fadlock Law

Towards the middle of the afternoon, one of the Algerians, the Communist one, came into the dormitory grumbling. He had been returning from the bathroom when he ran smack into a padlocked door, bumping his nose. I hurried out to see if deadlock law was in force in Siberia. And, sure enough, a sturdy padlock, emblazoned with a red star, kept the lavatory tightly shut.

"That's really a bit too much," I said to my Algerian companion.

"Sorry, friend, but it wasn't foreseen in the Five Year Plan that this toilet must be open at three in the afternoon. I advise you to telephone to the Supreme Soviet and ask them to suspend the padlock law."

He said this with a twinkle in his dark Arab eyes.

"You know," I said, "you're lucky you're among friends. Otherwise, a remark like that might cost you dearly. Remember, we're in Siberia."

"So it's true what they say about Siberia?" he asked with a grin.

And the game of chess began again, a little more sadly this time.

Omsk, An Immense Slum

"I have my own opinion why we weren't allowed to visit Omsk. On our first trip across Siberia, the plane had flown in a wide circle above the town before it came in for a landing. It was and sunny without a cloud in the sky. I had been able to fix the town in my memory as we flew over it at less than 1,000 and the office buildings, the town is built of round wooden huts. I don't think you were in a mining town which had sprung up overnight. But Omsk is an old city which must have a population of almost 500,000.

Omsk has remained in my memory as a symbol of liberty in the Soviet Union.

Detroit Red Wings Back In Stride; Gordie Howe Leads Point-Getters

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

OSHAWA HERE TONIGHT

The Chick Boys, who surprised a lot of hockey people, especially Kingston, with their 5-3 triumph over the Generals last Friday night, meet a tougher in the Oshawa Transports in Memorial Arena tonight. The Oshawans, tieing with the Stouffville Clippers as the one-two team of the group in some starters have a casual, speedy manner which started off like a house afire but has not been doing so well of late. The Oshawa have relinquished the top slot of the group to the Clippers, who now lead with eleven points, one in front of the Motor City crew.

The Transporters have won five and lost two, while Stouffville, which was extended to the limit to edge Orillia Saturday night are in top spot with eleven points. The second-placers have been defeated by Stouffville and Peterboro, but have nailed out not a few of their wins by one-goal margins.

The Glens riding high after their win over the powerful Kingston squad find their own take the measure of the Transporters Tuesday night should be an entertaining senior game. It is the first visit of the Oshawa crew here and a large crowd should turn out to root the Glens to their second straight victory.

The Petes, too, have showed a change of form. After dropping a 7-3 verdict to the cellar-dwelling Terriers of Orillia, the Petes roared back Saturday night and slipped a 5-2 defeat on the Kingston Goodyears. 'Tis a topsy-turvy loop with the strangest things happening. The Stouffville Clippers had all their could do Saturday to nudge the Terriers by a 5-4 count. The Orillians dumped the Petes 7-3 and the Petes threw a 5-3 setback at Oshawa. Things are tightening up afterwards and it should be a dilly-thriller of a group before the playoffs loom up.

In any event the Glens are not taking any chances and Coach "Red" Dorrin had them out there Saturday night in a blizzard of snow and they worked their hard pried back night and should be in top fettle for tonight's tilt. Incidentally Vern Geyer, after a much-needed rest, is feeling a lot better and don't be surprised if you see him in the Glen nets in heavier duty tonight. He could be used on the defence where he played before he was moved up front two or three years ago.

LOTS OF WORK

The junior Hawks will work out tomorrow night from 7-8 and the Glens will go at it again from 8-9. On Thursday night the Glens will be out there from 6-7. On Friday night the Lindsay Warriors will be the guests of the junior Hawks, and the youngsters roar back to practice on Saturday evening from 7-8.

Coaches Dorrin and Barrett believe that nothing but a lick of work will keep their charges "on the ball" as to speed and arrangements with the arena and between themselves where resulted in a parade of practice hours.

BASKETBALL

Bill Spafford's Moirus, city entry in the Bay of Quinte Intermediate "B" Basketball League, ey questing for their second triumph in schedule play tonight when they visit Picton to take on the Army eldest of the group. The Moirus edged the Trenton RCAF Flyers in their first outing and should add their second scalp tonight. Spafford and Ken Foster, Moirus scoring luminary, are believed to be the league finals last year, and holds high hopes of the title this season. Ted Fraser, incidentally, has been appointed manager of the team.

GRATITUDE

Marse Cec Perdue, the Kawartha scrivener, deprecatingly remarks that "even Belleville is knocking off the best of 'em at times." That's the thanks the Glens get for suffering up the Quintown so that the Petes could plaster them with a 5-3 defeat the next night. We note, however, that last night the Goodies repeated the count, as it appears the Peter can't knock the good ones off when they're at their best... All friendship has come now, pal, from here in you're on your own.

JUNIORS WIN

Don Barrett came through with flying colors in his debut as coach of the junior "B" Hawks last night in Kingston. In what was a homelanger of a game the youngsters avenged their 8-4 setback in the league Wes handed them on a previous occasion of their last visit to the Limestone yonkers and emerged with a neat 5-4 victory. The Hawks grabbed a two-goal lead in the first period, dropped behind 3-2 with three markers in a hard-fought second shakker. They again evened scoring honors in the third heat, each scoring a lone goal.

At time of writing the filed story from Kingston had not arrived, nor the Peterborough-Cobourg doubleheader. Incidentally, the games between Kingston, Peterborough, Belleville, Cobourg and Oshawa count four points for one round only. The standing to date appears in another column.

Dodgers Ready to Swap The Gowanus For a Topflight Southpaw Pitcher

By JOE REICHLER

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Brooklyn Dodgers have prepared a pair of three-for-two packages deals involving top-flight players in an effort to obtain either Warren Spahn of Boston or Curt Simmons of Philadelphia, it was learned today.

Recognizing the need of a starting southpaw pitcher to go along with Joe Black and Preacher Roe in defence of their National League championship, the Dodgers are willing to give up two players for either of the pitchers, generally recognized as the best lefthanders in the circuit.

Any Takers?

The Brooks have these packages deals to offer:

1. Outfielder Carl Furillo, Andy Pafko and third baseman Billy Cox to the Braves for Spahn and outfielder Sid Gordon or:

2. First baseman Gil Hodges, Furillo and Cox to the Phillies for Simmons and outfielder Del Ennis.

Spahn is the man the Dodgers covet the most despite his comparatively poor 14-19 won-and-lost record last season. The 30-year-old southpaw failed to notch 20 or more victories for the first time in four years in 1951, but topped the circuit in strikeouts for the third successive season with 183. Simmons, 23, posted a 164 record including six shutouts and is far from his peak as a star hurler.

Pafko enjoyed a successful season with a .287 batting mark that included 19 home runs. He will be 32 in February, a year older than Furillo, whose batting mark dropped to .267. Cox, however, is regarded as one of the best defensive flychasers in the league and is possessor of the most accurate arm in the majors.

Glowing reports on Don Hoak, a kid third baseman brought up from Montreal for next season, make Cox expendable. The Dodgers feel Hoak as the equal of Cox in the field. That is high praise, indeed, since the 33-year-old Cox is rated as the fielding third sacker in the league.

Hodges, Brooklyn's leading slugger the last three years, has been mentioned in every trade rumor involving the Dodgers. The first baseman walloped 32 home runs but slumped in the final month of the season and was benched without a hit in the world series.

But Chicago Still Leads Loop Three Points Ahead of Wings; Leafs Slip Back to 5th Place

MONTREAL (CP)—Detroit Red Wings seem to be hitting their stride at last, if last week's results in the National Hockey League are any indication. They won two and tied one to squeeze out a tie to put them in second place, three points behind the league-leading Chicago Black Hawks.

Gordie Howe of Detroit, too, is in his usual spot, atop the league in individual points. He has 15 goals and 13 assists for 28 points.

He is tied as league-leading goaltender with Wally Hergesheimer of the cellar-dwelling New York Rangers and tied for tops in assists with team-mates Ted Lindsay and Alex Delvecchio and Maurice Richard of the third-place Montreal Canadiens.

Leafs Falter

Toronto Maple Leafs faltered badly during the week's play, dropping three out of four and slipping into fifth place. Their only saving grace is the records of Ted Kennedy and Max Bentley, both among the top seven point-getters.

However, they lead the league in penalties with their players racking up 153 minutes.

Ted Lindsay is the league's most penalized player, but he makes up for it by being in second place in the scoring race, with 11 goals and 15 assists for 26 points, only two less than team-mate Howe.

Maurice Richard is in third spot with nine markers and 13 assists, followed by Hergesheimer with a 13-8-21 record and Kennedy with 9-13-21.

Sugar Jim Henry of Boston is still the loop's top goalie with three shutouts and a 2.95 average.

Leafs, Royals Lose Players In Annual Draft

PHOENIX, Ariz. (CP)—Montreal Royals and Toronto Maple Leafs lost one player apiece as baseball's major leagues picked only 11 minor league players in the annual draft.

The selections for which the majors will pay $130,000, were the fewest since 1932.

Righthanders John Hetki of Toronto and Marv Grissom, who moved up to Montreal from Mobile, Ala., after last season, were picked up Monday by Pittsburgh Pirates at the $10,000 minor league draft price.

Hetki, one of the mainstays of the Toronto pitching staff, appeared in 30 games and had a record of 13 and 7. His earned run average was 3.85.

Face, the No. 1 pick, had a 16-11 record at Mobile, a Brooklyn farm team.

Aussie Tennis Queens 'Sour' On Little 'Mo'

MELBOURNE (AP) — Some of Australia's women tennis players are a little sour on Maureen Connolly, the 18-year-old United States champion, for not practising with them. And they're a little envious, too.

They are also annoyed at Harry Hopman, Aussie Davis cup captain who has been giving her tips.

None of the Australian girls would allow herself to be quoted by name but most of them:

"I wonder if our Davis cup coach has ever considered spending a bit of time with some of our own girls."

Another commented:

"We know little MO is out of our class, but I thought she was here to improver our standard at tennis. We might if we had an opportunity of practising with her. Most of us have not even been introduced to her."

Maureen defended her actions.

"We are down here to improve our tennis," she said. "We are prepared to wait until any hour to get to practise with the Davis cup players. Local girls do not practise as much as we do. We are out to practise with one of the local girls and after a quarter-hour she said she was too tired to go any more."

On the subject of Hopman's coaching, she said:

"He has helped all the players."

Hapless Tigers Have Lost Sixteen in Row

TORONTO (CP)—Hamilton Tigers scored three goals in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A competition this week and had 22 scored against them.

Figures released by the OHA including games of Nov. 29 show Stratford Indians still leading the big seven with 27 points. Owen Sound Mercurys are next with 24 and Kitchener has 19. Hamilton has lost 15 straight without a win or tie. The Tigers have managed to score 27 goals while the opposition rapped in 161.

Marv Brewer, former Guelph Biltmore goalie in the OHA Junior A series and now between the pipes for Chatham Maroons, took over the goal-tending leadership with a 1.67 average in three games. Gerry Hess, Bob Dale of Stratford Indians dropped to second and third place with 2.5 and 2.57 respectively in 10 and seven games each.

Seixas Is Lone U.S. Entry In Aussie Tennis

MELBOURNE (AP)—Vic Seixas of Philadelphia swept into the semi-finals of the Victorian tennis tournament today along with Australians Frank Sedgman, Ken McGregor and Mervyn Rose.

But Seixas' young Davis cup team-mate — Ham Richardson — was eliminated, a victim of Rose's tremendous play.

The lefthanded Aussie trimmed the 19-year-old Baton Rouge, La., youngster 6-3, 6-2, 6-3 in 55 minutes.

Seixas had no trouble with Aussie Ken Rosewall, winning 6-0, 6-3, 6-2. Sedgman also was easily over-powered by countryman Ian Ayre 10-8, 6-0, 6-2, but McGregor had to work before subduing Rex Hartwig of Australia, 2-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Maureen Connolly of San Diego, Calif., and Julia Sampson of San Marino, Calif., gained the women's semi-finals. Miss Connolly whipped Pam Southcombe 6-0, 6-2 while Miss Sampson eliminated Beryl Penrose 6-4, 6-2.

Fielder, Marcel Share Top Spot In Scoring Race

NEW YORK (AP)—Rookie linemates Gaye Fielder and Marcel Bonin of the St. Louis Flyers share the lead today in the American Hockey League's scoring race at 26 points each.

Fielder, undisputed leader for four weeks, sat out his team's two games during the week because of injuries. Bonin picked up five points to tie his team-mate for top honors.

The Hildebrand of Cleveland Barons and George (Red) Hildebrand of Hershey Bears are tied for second place, one point behind the co-leaders at 25 points apiece. Arnie Kullman of Hershey is fifth with 23 points.

Hildebrand tops the circuit in goal-getting with 14 and Sullivan and Kullman co-leaders in assists with 20. Frank Sullivan of Pittsburgh leads in penalties with 48 minutes.

Armand Savoie Given Verdict Over McFater

TORONTO (CP)—Armand Savoie of Montreal, Canadian lightweight boxing champion, scored a split decision over Allan McFater of Toronto in a non-title bout at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The fight Monday night was the third meeting between the two scrappers and each time Savoie has beaten the Toronto youngster.

Savoie weighed 139 pounds and McFater 143½.

Referee Billy Burke cast the deciding vote after Judge Fred Norbert picked Savoie and Judge Jack Johnston called Savoie the winner.

In a scheduled eight-round semi-final, John L. Sullivan of Preston, England, thirds a nine pounder weight from Britain, was awarded a technical knockout over Billy Fifield of Toronto at 2:20 of the seventh round. Sullivan weighed 165½ and Fifield 165.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN
by Elmer Ferguson
Third and last of a series briefly outlining the growth of the National Hockey League.
When the National Hockey League was born, 35 years ago, it came into being at a time when many of the most drastic changes of all time in playing rules. For in 1912, the leaders of professional hockey in the east decided to abandon the 7-man game, the effect was the beginning of organized play, and adopt the 6-man game.
The whole Dominion rose in arms, and stormily denounced this new heresy. It was pointed out, quite correctly, that the 6-man game, with its greater speed, would bring changes in the rules were accomplished with a minimum of criticism, certainly nothing like the storm aroused when 6-man hockey was introduced.
Stress on continuous and sustained speed resulted in clubs increasing from 7 to 11 substitutes and even less, to at one time 17 players, exclusive of goalers.
In 1918-19 the three areas, the forward pass in the centre area, and kicking the puck in the centre area were adopted.
In 1921, it became permissable for the goalers to pass forward in the defensive areas.
On September 24, 1927, legislation was effected whereby forward passes could be made in the attacking zone. On September 26, 1929, the legislation removed all restrictions from forward passes, in all areas.
The penalty-shot a spectacular addition, came into existence in the National League in 1934. Later it was made more thrilling by allowing the puck-carrier designated to carry right in on the nets.
When the first N.H.L. games were played, the only mark on the ice was a face-off dot at centre. Now there are the blue lines, which many of the fans think is a red line across centre ice. There are the circles at each end, for face-offs in each defensive zone; the similar circle in the centre. There are dots five feet out from the blue-lines, to show the spots for face-offs caused by minor offences in the defensive zones.
These are major changes that marked the revelvetion, or evolution, of the game. There are scores of minor changes, as an obligatory floodlight of the ice surface between periods, while a penal beneath the box, synchronized goal lights, signals to referee time why penalties are given, all contributing to a uniform fame why penalties are given, all contributing to a consistent speed of play. Thus the strong sustained speed and clean play in the world's fastest game.

Hawks Nip Kingston Vics 5-4 In Hard-Fought Junior Tilt; Take Over Group Leadership

KINGSTON (Special)—Belleville's Hawklets registered their second one-goal marginal triumph over Kingston's Canadiens Vics here when they won last night's OHA Junior "B" six-team Dan Cushenan Memorial Centre by 5 to 4. It was anybody's verdict at those two wide matched teams battled for supremacy before a rather slim crowd of approximately 300 fans. In advertising the Vics 5-4 out of a three-way tie for the group leadership which is now held solely by the peppery squad from the Metro-River city.

The visitors knocked the issue from the start at hostilities and scored the first and second goals at 3.14 and 13.08 before the local defence got into full stride late in that opening session which produced a half a dozen minor penalties. Marcale, aided by Reid, Hall and Bell, did the scoring blow for the Jacksonites.

Tied In Second

Dick Cherry, aided by Lay Ullman, fanned a 2-2 deadlock at 2.40 in the middle period but the Belles forged ahead on a shot by Therrien at the nine-minute mark and widened their margin when Halstead soloed for their fourth marker thirty-eight seconds later. Vics quickly came back with Reid scoring and Vallier and Marcale assisting at 11.18.

Six penalties were inflicted by referee Louis Lecompte during that rather hostile second frame when Marcale of the locals and Therrien of the Belles drew the referee's ire engaging in a swinging duel. It was the only serious scrimmage of the evening.

The pace was fast throughout the final period with Belleville making the tying counter and the Belles cling-ing desperately to their one-goal advantage. The goaltenders, however, Bernie Schultz aided by Jack Jackits took a pass from Halstead and racked up the winning tally at 14.38. In the last frame Vics resorted to the gambling attack and in its search for the equalizer Scissor flashed the light after attacking in collaboration with Reid and Vallier.

One Goal Each

An oddity of hockey occurred when no player on either team scored more than one goal. Reid of the Vics paced the point-getters with two counters and two assists while Vallier got a pair of assists. Halstead with a goal and an assist and Stocco with two assists were Belleville's most potent stickhorses.

Therrien who served a minor and a major was the so-called "bad-man" of the fray in which the visitors spent 21 minutes on the penalty bench. The Vics were not so aggressive but did amass a total of 17 minutes make up of six minors and one major.

The teams:

Belleville — Goal, Barclay; defence, Stocco and Green; centre, Pavilla; wings, Jackits and Halstead; alternates, Jones, Therrien, Gilmour, Houle, Casey, Paramaulk, Wheeler and Gregory.

Kingston—Goal, R. Senior; defence, Marcale and Keeso; centre, Cherry; wings, Davis and Ullman; alternate, Wilding.

Reid, Bell, B. Senior; Reid, Vallier, Pettitt, Reynolds, McLaughlin.

Referee—Louis Lecompte. Linesmen, Hall and Halstead.

...key trip in the Scullers' successful campaign, Al Bruno, Nobby Wirkowski and Zeke O'Connor, smile broadly as they clutch the cherished silver cup. Wirkowski, Argos' unheralded little quarterback, tossed long payoff passes to the two rangy ends, who successfully eluded the Edmonton pass defence. O'Connor made the Grey Cup trip victory a certainty when he made a dramatic fingertip catch of Nobby's pass at the Edmonton 12-yard line and another over for the final TD, without an Eskimo near him. Edmonton's Rollie Prather, Normie Kwong, Rollie Miles and their hard-fighting teammates combined to make this stand one of the tightest games in many years. (Central Press Canadian).

Sport in Brief

TORONTO (CP)—Dale Mc I Wis, owned by S. Love of Milton and driven by Keith Waples, and Nancy Maker, owned by S. Revington of Lansdowne, handled by Bud Gilmour, each won a heat in the seventh and featured harness event at Dufferin Park Wednesday.

Buster, owned and driven by Henri Larochelle of Sorel, Que., and Neptune, owned and driven by Ernie Gilmour of Stratford, divided the sixth and secondary feature when they each won a heat.

MONTREAL (CP)—A spokesman for Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League said Monday night centre Elmer Lach will be out of action for at least a month as a result of a broken left thumb suffered in a game against Chicago Saturday night. The thumb was "broken near the wrist, in a join with player-coach Sid Abel of the Black Hawks.

EDMONTON (CP)—A woman should know says Rollie Prather, the giant Edmonton Eskimo all-star outside wing, has played his last football game. She's Mrs. Rollie Prather. Aboard an Eskimo special train rolling home from Toronto Monday she confirmed a rumor that Prather has decided to hang up his cleats. The decision comes after one of the most successful seasons in his football career.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The University of Southern California was chosen Monday to represent the Pacific Coast Conference in the Rose Bowl game against Wisconsin on January 1. Pete Pihos, All-America end and pro star from Indiana, was named by the conference grid coaches as the school's main opponent in the Rose Bowl game, which will finish the season, then hang up his cleats for good.

LONDON (AP)—Freddie Mills, former world light-heavyweight champion, said Monday there's more money to be made boxing than promoting in Great Britain and as a result he is toying with the idea of staging a comeback. Mills, 32, retired three years ago after losing his title to Joey Maxim of Cleveland. O. Since then he has been promoting.

Eskys Given Terrific Welcome, 70,000 Greet Homecoming Heroes

By JIM PEACOCK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos, by their own admission gave Toronto Argos the Grey cup, but Edmonton gave the Eskimos its heart.

The gridiron heroes were paraded through downtown streets Monday to the cheers of an estimated 70,000 persons.

The city smothered its football team in a blanket of snow and went all out to warm the 15-degree temperature with the greatest spontaneous spectacle ever accorded an Edmonton sports club.

Traffic was tied up long before Eskimos' special plane landed. Thousands of fans, including 2,000 school children who had a special holiday, huddled in parkas and mittens in the streets, on the rooftops. They hung out of windows and perched on lamp posts all along the 20-block parade route.

Police lines couldn't hold them. Coach Frank Filchock and his assistant Joe Aguirra went by in the first car. Shouting fans mobbed the street. Children climbed bumpers to get autographs.

Kwong's "China clipper" who scored both Eskimo touchdowns at Toronto Saturday, summed up the team's feelings: "Just terrific, terrific." he said.

All Edmonton seemed to harmonize with a ladies' curling group banner—"Eskimos, you darlings."

First Twin Bill In Int. League

DETROIT (AP) — The first doubleheader in International Hockey League history has been set for Jan. 25.

The league's board of governors made the arrangements Monday night after the Troy, O., team failed to get through the snow to play at Cincinnati Saturday night.

The two teams will play a regularly scheduled game at Troy at 3 p.m. Jan. 25, then move over to Cincinnati for another contest at 9 P. M.

The governors also voted to assess a $500 fine in the future of any team that fails to give proper notice of its inability to keep a playing date.

FRANKFORD

Bowling League

Frankford—Division "A": of the Frankford Bowling League saw three of the second division teams defeat first division entries this week. Bob Gaetz's Hopefulats took two games, but failed to get enough total from Ray Scott's league-leading Outlaws. Karl Austin's Curling Crew took five points as did Gib Gilmour's Gib's Gang, while Jack Farley's Jack's Jokers were sweeping five from Lloyd Hanna's Robbers. The Maples Jets, led by Preston Chase won their first game in six weeks from Ross Huffman's Racketeers, but the Racketeers' skein was broken by the other two as well as high total.

Standing: Outlaws 53; Gib's Gang 52; Robbers 51; Racketeers 52; Hopefulats 49; Curley's Crew 38; Jack's Jokers 36; Jets 27.

Division "B" was also a sight for the lower teams, as Silbourne Sharpy's Karelee Kids took five from Earl Rogers' Merry Macs, while Elmer Rogers' Screwballs were blanking Milford MacAnulty's Aristocrats.

Aristocrats (0); Merry Macs 53; Screwballs 38); Karelee Kids 31.

Gad, The Tigers Almost Copped One, Barries' Teal Still Leads Tars for Two Heats, Then Fade

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Tigers have smarted a warning to the other teams in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A loop.

The Tabbies Monday night dropped their 18th start this season but mashandled Sarnia Sailors for two periods, forcing the Tars to come from behind with three goals in the third period to win 6-5.

The OHA's more action around the conference table in the Northern, Ontario Hockey Association senior southern group than on the ice.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Greyhounds bounced North Bay Trappers 8-5 to stretch their first-place lead to three points.

Admit Four Teams

The NOHA executive decided to admit all four teams in the league to the playoffs. The other two are Sudbury Wolves and Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Indians. The Wolves Good where a win could bring the Mercurys within one point of the leading Soo Thunderbirds. There are no NOHA games tonight but Wednesday the Indians are scheduled at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

Playing Coach Johnny Horeck of the Indians and centre Ron Rubic protested a penalty to Rubic so vigorously that both were ejected with the game awarded to Greymonds.

The Indians claim they went the referee because their team was not satisfied with the outcome of the match.

In the heartbreaker at Hamilton, Tigers led 3-2 after the first, and 4-3 after the second. Tigers opened the scoring among Mac Beaton, Marty Xarfax, Ollie Haddon, Vern Gardiner, Rollie Beauchamp and Skip Fressell. Haddon scored on Ab Conick, Jim Brown, Murray Comfort and Murray Dutcher.

Jim Johnston, Ron Ly and Roy Rentzos scored two each in the Greyhound win. Terry Blocchi and Lorne Watters hit for singles. Al Romano sank two for Trappers. Don Hogan collected the other two. Delight Hazelton Redmen visit Cow Sound where a win could bring the Mercurys within one point of the leading Thunderbirds. There are no NOHA games tonight but Wednesday the Indians are scheduled at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

Canucks Regain First Place

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks climbed back into a tie for first place in the Western Hockey League Monday night with Saskatoon Quakers with a 6-3 victory over Victoria Cougars.

13 Horses Die in Fire

MONTREAL (CP)—At least 13 saddle horses perished in a fire that destroyed the Tally Ho stables at nearby Pierrefonds.

No one was reported injured, but an unidentified woman and two children were said to have left the stables seconds before they went up in flames, Monday night.

The blaze is believed to have started when an oil burner at the rear of the stables exploded.

Belleville Service Darts League

The league-leading Hasty Pees extended their margin in the Belleville Service Darts League last night, defeating the Brewers by a 4-2 score. The Big 'A' team, second place occupants, was held to a 6-4 count by the Mail Carriers.

In the other games, the 9th Anti Tank Regiment point-pushers scored a 7-4 win over Corbins while The ANAF's went down to a 7-4 decision before the Corbin quintet.

The standings including last night's games are: Hasty Pees, 73; Big 'A's, 69; 9th Anti Tank, 68; ANAF, 67; Mail Carriers, 62; Brewers, 60; C.N.R., 37 and Corbins, 32.

$35,000 Fire

GUELPH (CP)—A $35,000 fire destroyed the Canadian National Railways roundhouse here and badly scorched two locomotives.

The fire was discovered Monday by a "roundsman," an engineer from Stratford, who noticed smoke billowing from the southwest corner of the three-sided frame structure.

When firemen arrived, flames were eating through the roof of the shed and had gained a firm hold on the building.

Woodwork on the two engines was burned, while heat shattered the glass, melted wiring and twisted steel parts.

Two Plead Guilty

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Two former residents of Sarnia pleaded guilty to charges of providing narcotic drugs in an attempt to procure a miscarriage.

Leona Phillipson of suburban Riverside pleaded innocent in a similar charge and was remanded a week for trial.

The Sarnia men were remanded for a week for sentence when the cases came up in court Monday.

John A. Phillipson and Jack Parenteau were arrested in Sarnia Nov. 22 following a police investigation which stemmed from a complaint by the father of an 18-year-old Windsor girl.

They were arrested after a car they were driving was traced to Sarnia. Licence number of the car was provided by the Windsor man.

Leona Phillipson was arrested later at Riverside when police said the alleged attempted abortion was performed.

Michigan State U.S. College Football Champs

NEW YORK (AP) — Michigan State, victor in 24 straight games, took the No. 1 place in the Associated Press' final poll to win the O'Connell trophy, emblem of the U.S. collegiate football championship.

The trophy was donated by the Notre Dame Monogram Club in honor of the late Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, former player and later president of the South Bend, Ind., institution.

The trophy is awarded yearly on the basis of the Associated Press poll. Tennessee won it last year.

Michigan State Spartans won the honor for the first time this year by collecting 1,210 of a possible 1,271 sports writers and broadcasters took part. Pre-season favorites, they received 207 first-place votes and 1,003 points.

Georgia Tech was second with 2,240 points and Notre Dame third with 1,200.

Gault Repeats Title Victory Over Gagnon

QUEBEC (CP)—Henry (Pappy) Gault, a superbly-conditioned boxer from Spartanburg, S.C., defended his title as the North American bantamweight title he won here two weeks ago against Pierrette Gagnon of Quebec.

Gault weighed 117½, Gagnon 116.

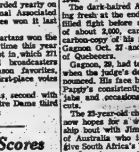
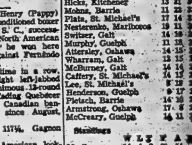
Gagnon, 29, had tears in his eyes when the judge's decision was announced. His face bore welts from Pappy's consistently accurate left jabs and occasional right uppercuts.



The 23-year-old champion said he now hopes for a world championship bout with Jimmy Carruthers of Australia, who is scheduled to give South Africa's Vic Towsel, the six-charges, a return contest at Johannesburg February next.



Gault opened up with Gagnon's mouth in the fifth round and had the Quebecer in bad trouble with hard rights to the sixth and seventh rounds particularly.

Be convinced that a player tells the exact distribution of his hand by the way he bids his suits. If he is not, what you have been doing there is something wrong with your basic method.

A biddable suit is one at least four cards; a rebiddable suit must have, at least five. And rule says: With equal length suits, first bid the higher rank; with different lengths, first bid the longest.

So, bid the hand shown here:

♣ A K J 3 2

Start with a bid in spades, then clubs, then clubs again to show five cards in each suit. Partner then learns you have three red cards. See it?

When you bid the higher rank number before the lower rank suit you announce that the clubs are not longer. When you rebid clubs you say the clubs are at least five cards long.

If clubs were cards and not longer than spades, the spades must be at least five cards. Thus you have a total of ten black cards in your hand.

Your hand must contain a total of 13 cards. If ten of them are blacks, three of them must be red. And the most likely division of the red would be two in one suit and one in the other.

Pope into your head the question: Instead of rebidding the club suit why not rebid the spades? If this bothers you, see what you would show by such an order of bidding.

If you bid spades first, clubs next, spades again this is what you say: My clubs are not longer than spades; my spades are rebiddable. Therefore, my clubs are only four cards long.

Because, if my clubs were five cards long I would have rebid them. Unless I had bid them before spades to show they were longer. So, spades, clubs, spades tells of nine black cards and four reds.

Fundamentals tell what complex routes dispel.

Speed up Work In Completing Airfield Shield

PARIS (AP)—The Atlantic powers are working at top speed to complete a shield of 136 military airfields across Europe, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization council says.

The council Monday confirmed earlier unofficial reports that seven NATO countries have built or are building 95 airfields at a cost of $750,000,000. In addition, more than 30 airfield have been constructed in western Germany at the expense of the occupying powers.

Brig. W. H. Wedd of Canada, NATO airfield expert, declined to tell a press conference how many more airfields will be completed next year. However, sources close to NATO said Supreme Headquarters of the Allied powers in Europe had already asked for an allotment of $300,000,000 for airfields.

Using Wedd's figure of between $7,500,000 and $9,000,000 for the cost of each base, the unofficial allotment required would be a maximum for around 40 more fields.

29 Women Take Municipal Seats In Monday Voting

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Twenty-nine women were elected to municipal office in Ontario elections. They took over responsibilities ranging from mayor to township school trustee.

Charlotte Whitton as mayor of Ottawa and Mrs. Bernadette Smith as mayor of Woodstock head the list in Monday's results. Miss Whitton won out in a close fight and Mrs. Smith gained a handy victory, each over a man candidate. Five in County

Four cities elected women as aldermen—Mrs. Grace Hayman at Sudbury, Mrs. Hughes at Waterloo, Mary Mack at Cornwall and Mrs. Dorothy Pickup at Fort William.

Mrs. Helen Cronier was elected deputy reeve of the town of Walkerton, Mrs. H. C. Richard at Tilbury, Mrs. K. B. Clydale at St. Marys, Mrs. Isabel Tetham at Listowel and Mrs. Vera Bluegiass at Hanover were elected to township councils. Mrs. Ada Cammon at Wardsville, Mrs. J. E. McCarthy at Port Stanley and Mrs. Gladys Reilly at Lucan wereelected village councillors.

Three were elected to boards of education, Mrs. D. D. Shutt at Guelph, Mrs. Evelyn Moore who headed the poll at Stratford and Mrs. Kathleen Bell at Petrolea.

Mrs. Mary Johnson and Mrs. Service Holmes were elected to the public school board at St. Thomas. Mrs. Iola Brookbanks was elected school trustee for Scarboro North, a Toronto suburb, and Mrs. Thomas Lebozel was named to the separate school board in the village of Tilbury.

Toronto elected eight women, Mrs. May Robinson to city council and the others to board of education: Mrs. Dorothy Pearson, Mrs. Isabel Hoss, Mrs. Edna Iverson (a Communist), Mrs. Nellie Tennant, Mrs. Irene McBrien, Mrs. Mary Temple and Mrs. Jean Newman.

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP)—E. E. Buddy Fogelson, husband of actress Greer Garson, went out of the newspaper business Friday. The Santa Fe News, a weekly owned by Fogelson, discontinued publication, blaming lack of advertising support.

Highest Awards For Scout Heroism Given Parents

OTTAWA (CP) — The highest awards for heroism by scouts or cubs were presented to the parents of two boys who lost their lives attempting to save drowning companions.

At his first investiture since his appointment as Governor-General, Vincent Massey, Chief Scout for Canada, made the posthumous award of bronze crosses to the parents of Wayne Prescott of Leaside, Ont., and David Kruse of Gaspe, Que.

The awards were among 22 scouts, cubs and scout officials from many parts of Canada.

Scout Ronald A. Furness, 16, of Toronto received the Cornwell badge, known as the Victoria Cross of scouting, for "remarkable courage, the determination and fortitude" in his scouting career.

Mrs. John Prescott accepted a bronze cross for her 10-year-old son who died in an attempt to save a small girl from drowning. The citation said the award was for "extraordinary gallantry" in the attempted rescue.

The second posthumous award of a bronze cross went to the parents of David Kruse, 15-year-old scout who drowned in a life-saving attempt in the Bay of Gaspe.

Cub Grantley Briscoe of Calgary won a silver cross for "presence of mind in rescuing a girl from drowning in Bragg Creek." Scout Robert McDonald of Youbou, B.C., won a silver cross "for his gallant rescue of a man who had fallen from a raft in Lake Cowichan."

Ottawa Elects Whitton; Rejects Sunday Sports

OTTAWA (CP) — This capital has decisively rejected Sunday sport and elected Mayor Charlotte Whitton to a two-year term of office.

It was a clear-cut victory for the opponents of commercialized sports on Sunday. The move for Sunday sport, started by citizens who sought international League baseball on that day, had been bitterly opposed by the clergy and many of Ottawa's leading citizens.

For the fighting, indomitable "Charlotte," as she is popularly known here, was no doubt victory. She came from behind to win Monday's mayoralty race by a clear margin over controller Leonard Coulter, her only opponent. She also had been one of the leading opponents of Sunday sport.

With 59 of Ottawa's 369 polls counted, the vote was 39,084 to 36,349 against Sunday sport and 38,038 to 37,541 for Miss Whitton over Mr. Coulter.

The stocky, 56-year-old Miss Whitton, a welfare worker, writer and lecturer, is a staunch Tory who despite a keen interest and natural flair for politics entered the political arena only two years ago—in the biennial civic elections of 1950. She was elected a controller.

She was voted mayor by the 30-man city council after the fourth in August, 1951, of Mayor Grenville Goodwin.

In that election she used a needle and thread as her campaign symbol. This time she made it a darning needle — "because the job is bigger."

Three of the four sitting members of the board of control were re-elected in a seven-man contest. In nearly complete returns, Daniel McCann, a veteran city councillor, headed the poll with 38,494 votes. Paul Tardif was second and Roy Donaldson third. Controller John Powers, who succeeded to the board when Mayor Whitton left it, was fourth.

Also up for a 1953 plebiscite, the old system of 14 named wards was replaced this year by nine numbered wards.

AT THE CAPITOL—Marie Windsor is a victim of "The Sniper" in the Columbia picture at the Capitol Theatre for its first city showing today and Wednesday. Also starring Adolphe Menjou and Arthur Franz, the crime drama is a Hollywood production of "Beautiful But Broke," starring Joan Davis.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR WEDNESDAY, DEC. 2, 1953

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Fitting planetary day for Aries. Personal affairs, matters pertaining to home, children, health highly favored. Benefic for romance, partnerships.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Ideal outlook for Tqurus' fine mechanical talents, building, mining, all skilled trades. Secretaries, bookkeepers, postal and govt. employees among those sponsored.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Not as many artistic lines favored as yesterday, but your planet sponsors practical and necessary work. Personal attention will increase your gains.

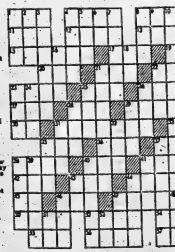
June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Formulate plans thoughtfully, early, and act according to opportunities. Be ready for helpful, quick changes; take extra care in investments.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—Don't attempt the unusual or unknown unless it prove thoroughly clear or necessary. Stay within bounds of what you can control. Be cautious.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Good day for most earnest workers. Down-to-earth interests, unselfish personal and family affairs rate high.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Artistry, as designing, dressing; promoting essential commodities, useful social functions prominent. Be consistent in efforts.

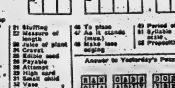
October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Hold your opinion if it is likely to be blunt, too much to the point. Stars favor the diplomatic slant. Calm attitude best.



November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Amendable period for earnest efforts. Your planet in stimulating configuration for well planned projects. Fine for builders, manufacturers.

December 22 to January 21 (Capricorn) Moderation your safeguard. You can accomplish if you heed this. Private matters, health, family affairs sponsored.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Avoid unnecessary risks, actions. Build up your quietly patient attributes for better results and happiness.



February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Today can be a productive, gainful one. Avoid extremes in business, work or play; lean toward the happy medium. Shun unwise financial schemes.

YOU BORN TODAY: are the jovial, fun-loving type. Usually generous to a fault. Your industry and willingness to venture into new fields brings fresh opportunities. You can be very successful. Seek religious guidance always. Birthdate of: Newton D. Baker, Amer. statesman; Gilbert Stuart, portrait painter.

FOR FREE IMMIGRATION

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Canada will continue to favor freedom of immigration, K. W. Taylor told a United Nations committee Monday. The Canadian representative on the economic committee of the general assembly said much can be done by international co-operation to eliminate unnecessary obstacles to the actual movement of people.

Good Opportunity For Women Writers Says Miss Rushbrook

MONTREAL (CP) — Industrial writing and editing offer unlimited opportunities for women, says Audrey R. Rushbrook of Kingston, Ont.

Miss Rushbrook in addressing a conference of Canadian industrial editors here suggested women should keep these opportunities in mind when obtaining their education.

Herself editor of the Abstract Bulletin of Aluminum Laboratories, Miss Rushbrook stressed—that a knowledge of technical subjects is often required for industrial writing. This made such work attractive to those interested in writing and technical work.

Miss Rushbrook outlined the duties of a wide scope of writing along with the advantages of working for a large company. Malleable Iron Fittings, Malleable Bridge, who is a graduate chemical engineer. She stated that for instance now has about 10,000 company publications, compared with 2,000 before the Second World War.

Her own job calls for condensing articles found in a wide variety of technical publications.

Two Adventurous English Nurses Go to Far North

EDMONTON (CP)—Two adventurous English nurses passed through here on their way to Beaverlodge in the Peace River district, 430 miles northwest of Edmonton.

Jean Ingleson and Anne Robinson are each 26 years old and unmarried. They will work at the Beaverlodge Mine Hospital there. They came under a plan of the women's division of the national employment service to help meet the nurse shortage in northern Canada.

Will Repay Passage

Under this plan the nurse's passage is paid by the hospital to which she is assigned, and the nurse undertakes to work for at least one year during which she repays the passage money. Miss Ingleson and Miss Robinson are the first two to be sent under this scheme.

Miss Inglesen's Yorkshire misses said they have a desire to see the world and felt that Canada is a good place to start.

At Beaverlodge they will get about $215 a month, plus board, compared with $110 a month—without board—at an English hospital.

Little Benny's Note Book

It's pritty near time for me to get my hair cut again, on account of pop and us both starting to remind me whenever they notice how I look, and after dinner pop said to me I think I'll get my haircut tomorrow

I got a couple of ruther fules to hinder you, let me know, pop said, and I'll do the rest. The only thing is I'm kind of going to the same old barber shop with the same old's barber, so why can't I try a new place for a change? I said.

I cant thinke of a single reason, pop said. Variety is the spice of life; and there is nothing better than travel, pop said to our own nayborhood, to give one a broader outlook on this narrow world. There is a nice clean looking barber shop about 2 blocks further on in this devine, and I believe it has 3 barbers to attend to what the televizion, and in that case he cant see what he's doing to your hair. We will remsee negociations when you find an acceptable solution to the difficulty, he said.

Meening probably never.

WEST CAN, BEAT RUSSIA

DETROIT (CP) — Sir Percy Spender, Australian ambassador to the United States, said Monday the free world can beat back Soviet power as it exists today but it may take one generation or perhaps two to do it. In an address to Economic Club, he said military means alone can not solve the problem.

Martin P. Durkin, Democrat, New Labor Secretary

NEW YORK (AP)—President-elect, Eisenhower's cabinet was completed with the announcement that he has designated Republican party - official Stanley C. Hoster of Boston for secretary of commerce and Labor leader Martin P. Durkin of Chicago for secretary of labor. Durkin is an AFL union leader and a Democrat who voted for Governor Stevenson. He is the only member of the Democrat party in the cabinet.

He is general president, United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices of the Plumbing and Pipe-Fitting Industry of the United States and Canada, International Union, American Federation of Labor.

In Washington, he told reporters he was surprised by the appointment but believes Eisenhower will give full consideration to the problems of labor and that he will help all he can to make Eisenhower's administration a successful one.

Announcement of the two designations for the cabinet was made Monday by Arthur H. Vandenberg Jr., who will be White House secretary to the new administration. Walter Williams of Seattle, Wash., has been designated to be undersecretary of commerce, Vandenberg announced.

Body of Apostle To be Exposed For Last Time

BOMBAY, India (Reuters)—The tomb of St. Francis Xavier is to be opened today and the body of the "Apostle of the East" to be taken from its massive glass and silver urn to be exposed for the last time for public veneration.

The ceremony, marking the fourth centenary of the Saint's death, will take place on the Portuguese island of Goa, off the west coast of India.

Thousands of Roman Catholic pilgrims from Europe and Asia have been visiting the island to witness the last exposition of the remains of the Jesuit missionary who spread the teachings of Christianity in the Far East.

New Discoveries Give Surer Operation To Kill Cancer Pain, Other Causes

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

ST. LOUIS (AP) — New discoveries about how nerves telegraph pain have led to a surer operation to kill incessant pain from cancer and other causes.

The operation cuts into the spinal cord at a point just below the brain. This surgery, shockstony, is not new. But the new findings show how to do it more efficiently, how far to cut into the spinal cord, safely, to end pain originating in the arms, legs, trunk or face.

The operation is done under local anesthetic. The patient remains conscious. The patient tells the surgeon whether he can feel pin-pricks when a pin is jabbed lightly into the skin of his body. When the patient no longer can feel the pricks applied to one area, it also means that he will no longer feel pain from cancer in that area.

The nerve studies were made by Dr. Herbert S. Schwartz, professor of neurosurgery, and Dr. James L. O'Leary, professor of physiology at Washington University school of medicine.

There are two main kinds of pain. One is a pricking pain, which is telegraphed by nerve fibers at a speed of 20 yards a second. The other is slow moving, burning pain, telegraphed at only two yards a second. Cancer causes the slow-moving type.

The nerve telegraph lines for both kinds of pain combine in the spinal cord, Schwartz and O'Leary found, at a point just below the thalamus at the base of the forebrain. The thalamus is the last important relay point for all feelings of sensation that register in the brain.

The surgery cuts into the cord to sever the pain lines, but without cutting the cord completely. That would be fatal.

The pin-prick tests tell the surgeon how deeply to nick the spinal cord. The pain pathways for different parts of the body lie at different depths within the spinal cord.

The nerves for the area at the base of the trunk lie nearest the outside of the cord. Those for the leg lie a little bit deeper, those for the arm still deeper. Those for the arms and the face closest of all and nearest the center of the cord.

Only the pain message lines are cut. The patient still can move and control the leg or other part of his body.

50 Miles an Hour Top Speed For Most Highways

KINGSTON (CP) — Ontario motorists who drive more than 50 miles an hour take a dangerous chance on provincial highways, a Queen's University highways expert says.

Professor Oscar Martin, who studied highways in several European countries including Russia before coming here recently, said Monday that Ontario roads, except the four-lane highways, are engineered for top speeds of 50 miles an hour. Four-lane roads were safe at 60 to 65 miles an hour.

PAPER IN NEW PLANT

ST. THOMAS (CP)—The St. Thomas Times-Journal Monday began operations in a new two-storey building with 13,000 feet of floor space, more than double the old plant in which the newspaper had been carrying on operations since 1883. Scores of machines were converted from 25 to 80-cycle power in the changeover.

Pilot Reports Plane Intercepted By U.S. Craft

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says today that an RCAF pilot reported his plane was intercepted by two United States Air Force fighter planes near Niagara Falls, Ont.

The unidentified pilot was commenting on reports that several Canadian planes have been checked over Canadian territory by American fighters.

The Globe and Mail says the airman took off from an airport near Toronto in his Harvard and decided to have a look at Niagara Falls. When his plane neared the Falls two Thunderbolt fighters closed in on either side.

The fighters, from the U.S. air defence squadron at Niagara Falls, N.Y., forced him to turn back and escorted him most of the way to Toronto.

Backbenchers Urge Loosening Of Purse Strings

OTTAWA (CP)—The new session of Parliament is little more than a week old but already on the Commons' order paper are at least seven resolutions demanding government urging a loosening of the federal purse strings for bigger and more social service payments.

This is definite warning by Finance Minister Abbott that if Canadians want tax cuts they can't expect increased services.

The resolutions—four from Liberals and three from CCF members—run the gamut from increased family allowances to aid for needy university students and more help for fishermen.

Chances are that the resolutions will be debated but—unless the government sees fit to act—nothing further will be done about them. They will go to the bottom of the order paper and die there when the session ends.

Rev. Dan McIvor, a United Church minister and Liberal member for Fort William, has a resolution urging discussions with the provinces to provide pensions for the incapacitated. He feels all persons who cannot earn their own living should be paid $40 a month regardless of age.

REPORT DYNAMITINGS

BOGOTA, Columbia (AP) — The Evangelical Confederation of Colombia said Friday one man was killed and five Protestant homes and chapels were dynamited in a series of 25 attacks on Protestants in September and October.

Negotiations Not Yet Resumed On Wage Dispute

OTTAWA (CP)—No moves toward resumed negotiations in the deadlocked railway wage dispute developed and there seems to be none ahead as to who is to get them started.

The railways and unions representing 164,000 non-operating employees, who split last week over acceptance of a conciliation board's finding in their long contract dispute, were willing to meet again for the first time since early fall.

But there was no indication Monday of whether one or another of the disputants, or the federal labor department, would take the obstructive. Each appeared to be waiting for the first move.

However, all signs pointed to the parties getting around the table again before long. The question of who started things was regarded here as largely a technicality.

Labor Minister Gregg said in a statement he is advising the rail ways and unions that the conciliation services of his department are available "if and when required."

Hard Acres

by Harry Meldrum Moore

"Sorry to interrupt you, Curly", Bill said, and Curly put down his paper. "But is it so big-a-one that you have something that I need. I must have—"

"Now what could that be, Bill?" Curly asked.

"Oak—or cedar," Bill said, "ask to be cut into timbers for hoists, cedars for all sorts of things. They're a valuable asset to the mining company for a whole slew of stuff for the mines, as well as lumber and lath and shingles for buildings. But Gilroy tells me that you have some pretty fine oak and cedar in your bush at Hard Acres. If you let me have it, I'll pay you well for it."

"If what you need is in my bush," Curly said, "help yourself. Cut roads, if you have to. But how are you going to get the oak to the mill? It won't float, y'know."

"Yes, I know," Bill grinned. "We'll haul it with Gurney-Tracy bush ranger, ran it for him, gave him an estimate."

At home in the Depot during the day, Hazel prepared her household effects for the shift. It had been planned at first to go to Hard Acres on July first, Dominion Day, but Hugh Maitland said he would not have the upstairs ready until the third of the month. Hazel did not mind anyway. July first fell on a Saturday, and, according to the old saw "Saturday's fit is a short time to sit." And that's not what she wanted it to be.

Neighbor women, church women, flocked to Hazel's house to offer help. But there wasn't much that they could do, since no crating, no careful packing, was required to move her effects such a short distance. But they came anyway, and they sat over their cups of tea and spent some delightful afternoons together.

Mr. Butler was among the first to give Hazel a call; not so much to tender an offer to help her pack, but to promise her scrubbing more tangible.

"Miss your heart, Hazel," Mrs. Butler said with a hug, "the news that you were coming out on our line to live, to become one of my neighbors made me cry with joy. You'll like Mrs. McGowan, unfortunate as she is, and Mrs. Barrier, although an invalid, has a heart of gold. You'll be living among friends, Hazel. I suppose you intend to have some hens at Hard Acres?"

"Oh, yes," Hazel said, "we must have some hens."

"Then, don't fret any," Mrs. Butler warned, "I'll take you over a rooster and a dozen of my best layers when you get settled. But you should have a cow—"

"Thanks so much," said Hazel, "but no cow for us at present, Mrs. Butler. We have decided to wait a while, until we can afford to get a good cow. In the meantime, Peter can get all the milk we require from Mrs. Barrier."

Dominion Day came. The business places in the village were closed and the flags were up. But there was no holiday for the men in the bush at Hard Acres or at the sawmill where timbers were being hewed for the Lookout. Curly left Hazel at Hard Acres to putter around or to answer Hugh Maitland's questions, and daring flies, related the tiniest critters, were fought off the mosquitoes long enough to secure a string of fine speckled trout in Paterson Creek.

On Sunday morning — the Browns were at church, Hazel to preside at the organ for the last time as she had decided to resign so that Lottie Street might earn a few much needed dollars in the days to come. In the afternoon they were back at Hard Acres to pay a short visit to the Barrier's. Like a man of many opinions, hinted that there might be some good timber in the Hard Acres bush despite anything he had said to the contrary.

On Wednesday morning, the big log house at Hard Acres was ready for occupancy. At the Curly Brown home in the Depot, the household effects were being loaded into a wagon drawn up at the kitchen door. Hugh Maitland and George Olmstead came early to lend a helping hand. Hazel and Peter would go with the kitchen effects which would be set in place as unloaded, and they promised to have a hot dinner ready for the men at noon.

Curly was picking up the lines, preparatory to climbing into the wagon, when Father Finucane crossed the street from his residence.

"Curly, my son," the priest said, taking Curly by the hand, "it hurts me to think that after today I won't be seeing your pleasant face, your familiar figure around here any more, but I came to tell you that you'll look back to this day as the one day in your life when you set your best foot forward. Once you plant your feet on your own sod, Curly, my son, once you get the feel of it, nothing is ever going to stay you from time here. I've had a chance to study you a little more much since you left Toronto even before I came to the Depot, I feel that I should have you pretty well sized up by now. A kind Providence has blessed you Curly. He has given you much to lift you above the common herd. May He still guide you through the years to come."

"Thanks — thanks, father," Curly stammered. "I shall try to live up to your high opinion of me. And do come out to Hard Acres any time. This is an invitation you can't refuse, since there are lots of fine trout in the creek, and there's more you'll ever need. Remember now, we'll be expecting you."

"I shall accept your kind invitation, Curly," Father Finucane said, "but I think I better wait until you get settled."

At six o'clock that afternoon the Brown family sat down to their first supper in their own. their first home. As they sat near the kitchen window they saw, between the end of the stable and the hen-house, a doe and her two fawns enter the lower field. Hazel got up to have a better look. "And just to think that men kill such pretty creatures," she remarked.

"You heard what she said, Peter," Curly winked at his son. "from now on you better not be going around here with an itchy trigger finger."

Later that night Hazel and Peter were to be made acquainted with a new sound, that of a wolf pack that chased a deer into the garden between house and school, but lost it when the animal leaped the fence and crossed the road to find refuge in the swamp pond. For Hazel and Peter's edification, Curly explained that this was something that they must learn to expect at Hard Acres.

"Wolves will kill deer, and they are noisy," Curly said, "but they are harmless, if that were not so, they would have been exterminated long ago, for it's man's way to destroy any living thing that dares to challenge his vaunted supremacy on earth."

Curly left Hard Acres for the Depot at half past six o'clock next morning. He ate his dinner at the hotel and was home again shortly after lig. And that was to be his daily routine for a long, long time. That evening, Hazel informed him that the township assessor had called that afternoon.

"It didn't take him long to find us, did it?" Curly puzzled. "I was always under the impression that he starts out on his work first thing in the spring and that he is through long before now."

Night at Ulan Bator In Outer Mongolia An Enjoyable Experience

By Gerard Filion

I'll bet there aren't a hundred Canadians who know where the town of Ulan Bator is situated, yet Ulan Bator is the capital of a country which is more than 1,000,000 square miles in area.

Ulan Bator is the capital of Outer Mongolia. It is situated on a charming oasis on the northeast limits of the Gobi desert.

The Mongols have had an amazing history. During the Middle Ages they commanded one of the greatest empires of all times. Genghis Khan, the ruler of the world, was a Mongol. He lived a nomadic existence, somewhere at the south end of the great lake of Baikal, when he led his hordes, riding fantastic Mongol ponies, to begin his conquest of the world. At the time of his death, he was master of all of Central Asia.

His sons and his grandson, Kublai, conquered China and led his warrior hordes as far afield as Hungary and Poland. And where the Mongols passed, they left their mark on the populations of the conquered countries. The Tatar republic of the Soviet Union is made up of the remains of the hordes left behind by the conquering Mongols. In China, the Mongol dynasty remained on the throne until it was overthrown by the Manchu dynasty.

In 1921, Outer Mongolia took advantage of the confusion then reigning in China to separate from Peking and from an independent republic of the Soviet Union. The popular republic of Outer Mongolia thus became the first Soviet satellite state.

DELIGHTED AT DELAY

A delegation from the Peace Committee of Ulan Bator was waiting for us at the airport. We were only supposed to stop over for half-an-hour, just enough time for a snack and to drink a toast with our hosts. But the plane was delayed by bad weather. A message from Peking arrived, telling us that we were to spend the night in Ulan Bator. We were all delighted at the prospect. Imagine spending a night in the Gobi desert! It was a wonderful adventure.

Our Mongol hosts took us to a mountain-inn. In this part of the country, even Gobi desert winds burn up all the vegetation on the surface. But the mountains that run to the northwest slopes are heavily wooded. The inn was on the border between the desert and the forest. Two hundred feet to one side was naked earth and two hundred feet in the opposite direction lay a beautiful forest of pine and cypress trees.

We were warmly received. Mongol women hurried to prepare a meal. They were small and dainty and very clean. The Mongols have the same physical characteristics as the Eskimos, the same skin tones, the same bone structure and facial expression, the same general height and the same bearing. The resemblance is striking.

At Ulan Bator I ate the most amazing meal of my life. The table was spread with a dozen dishes, all Mongol specialties, all prepared from food grown in the country. Vegetables were few. Mutton and wild boar. At breakfast the next morning, we were given fermented mare's milk to drink. It had a bitter taste.

OPERA IN THE DESERT

After dinner we went into the town. Unluckily, it was very dark and we were only able to see the principal points of interest; the parliament and the offices of the government, the theatre, the opera. It's hard to believe but it's true. There is an opera house at Ulan Bator in the Gobi desert. And twice a week there are performances — sometimes western operas, sometimes Mongol compositions.

Phoned Threats Believed Linked With Election

RICHMOND HILL (CP)—Provincial police say they are seeking the person who caused an in-mentarian wreath to be sent to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fox.

The order for the wreath was placed by telephone with instructions to deliver it and charge the cost to Mrs. Fox.

Police said Tuesday night they believe the incident was the result of anonymous telephone calls to certain townspeople, threatening harm to their children if they voted the Dec. 1 election of members to the separate school board for this centre 15 miles north of Toronto.

Two of the three men elected to the board were supported by Mr. Fox among other residents.

LEAPS FOR LIFE

RAINNIA (CP) — Hector Belange of Cormorant lost control of his heavy dump truck approaching a level crossing at Thursday and leaped to safety seconds before the vehicle was torn to pieces by a locomotive. Belange escaped with only slight bruises while his truck broke into three pieces.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) —Synopsis— Generally cloudy skies with afternoon flurries or rain or snow today will overall over most of the province today. A new disturbance developing just east of the Rockies is beginning to move eastward towards the Great Lakes area this morning. Ahead of it pleasantly winds with bring mildly weather to all Ontario by Thursday, with the threat of light rain or snow in western sections by afternoon.

Second 'Pen' Term In Bullion Theft

SUDBURY, (CP)— A second man today received a penitentiary term for his part in the theft March May of 400 ounces of gold bullion from a baggage-car on the platform of the Sudbury railway station.

Jack Meldrum, 33, of London, Ontario, pleaded guilty in court today to charges of gold theft, carrying a concealed weapon, and of having possession of $3,800 in counterfeit money.

He received five years on each of the first charges and three years for the latter. Sentence of anonymous telephone calls to certain townspeople, threatening harm to their children if they voted the Dec. 1 election of members to the separate school board for this centre 15 miles north of Toronto.

Birth of Baby on Country-Wide Television Show Makes History

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—The baby boom has given a new twist to television witnesses is a boy—Gordon Campbell Corrington weighing 7½ pounds and seven ounces. Mother and son are "doing fine."

It was a history-making event, this first telecast of a human birth. The baby was born by cesarean section operation, taken by surgery from his mother. Mrs. Lillian Kerr, 36 from Ft. Morgan, Colo., the father and an army sergeant, was looking at a TV screen in the hospital, confessing he was "as nervous as my father would be." Gordon is the Kerrs' third child.

First, the TV audience saw doctors preparing for the operation. There came a loud rumbling sound. This was the heart beat of the yet-unborn Gordon, magnified through a stethoscope placed on his mother's abdomen.

Then, in another scene elsewhere, to show modern care of premature babies, a few minutes later, it brought watchers back to the delivery room.

Gordon set at that moment was lifting Gordon, backside view, was taken from his mother's womb, as another physician severed the umbilical cord which for months had been the baby's source of food.

Actually, the surgery had taken place a month earlier, but was timed swiftly to secure alive a baby by this method of surgery.

Gordon was carried to a nearby table, swathed in blankets, then given the ministrations customary for every baby.

Doctors' services drew mucous from his mouth and nose, and Gordon began to live in a new strange world of contemporary.

Then came his faint cries.

Air Force Has Largest Slice of Three Services

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Air Force pay was reported today to be getting a $17,500,000,000 slice of a total $40,700,000,000 appropriation budget requested for the defence department in the next fiscal year starting July 1, 1953.

That estimate came from a well-qualified official source.

The USAF will have the largest peacetime budget of the three services.

The new military budget is awaiting Congressional approval by the White House and budget bureau and final action by the next congress.

Defence Secretary Robert A. Lovett Tuesday disclosed that he has approved inclusion in the budget request of new funds to start work on a third supercarrier, a sister ship of the 60,000-ton Forrestal, now under construction, and the Saratoga, the keel of which was laid in 1946.

The Forrestal class carriers are expected to total more than $218,000,000 each, without their planes or armament.

First Patricias Homeward Bound With Battle Honors

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TOKYO (CP)—The last Patricias are homeward-bound, sailing back to Canada after a year-long tour in Korean hell.

The line didn't budge an inch during the whole time they manned it.

But it was subjected to an ever-increasing pasting from Chinese Communist mortar and artillery, which made "living and loving" a punishing way to earn a living.

The battalion's principal engagements during its 12 months here were the repelling of several enemy attacks and a number of first-rate patrols.

As an indication of the leadership troops get is the job done, related to economy in casualties. The last battalion, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, leaves in the United Nations' cemetery in Pusan 36 comrades killed in action. Other casualties listed are two missing, believed killed, and 106 wounded in action.

Brought over and led until May by Lt.-Col. Norman Wilson-Smith of Winnipeg, the battalion has been commanded since by Lt.-Col. John Cameron of Ottawa, who is 36 years old.

Among its awards for action in Korea are two distinguished Service Orders, two Military Crosses, one Distinguished Conduct Medal and one Military Medal.

KILLED IN COLLISION

CHATHAM (C)—Mrs. Richard Benoit, 57, of Comber was killed Tuesday night in a crash of a truck transport collided on Highway No. 2 four miles west of Chatham. Police blamed slippery conditions for the accident. Teresa McMahon of Tilbury, Mrs. Benoit's daughter, and Mr. McMahon were injured.

Commonwealth Premiers Move From Broad Generalities Into Realm of Policy Matters

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Delegates to the Commonwealth economic conference moved from broad generalities into policies—and simultaneously have drawn a veil over their activities.

All that could be learned on the fourth day of the conference was that the nine countries agreed to set up working groups to deal with specific subjects of a technical nature. A spokesman added that the meetings are continuing in a true "happy family" atmosphere.

The conference is divided into two committees, one on finance and trade and the other on commodities and development. The financial panel met all Monday afternoon and broke up late after a three-hour meeting marked by what a Canadian source called "real hard work."

The usual daily briefing on the conference by a British treasury spokesman was cut drastically Tuesday and from the evasive manner of delegates, it was surmised that the conference now has prickly policy matters, on which silence is considered golden.

The conditions for sterling convertibility have certainly been discussed. In the view of the press conference has before it a plan, prepared by Commonwealth officials in preliminary meetings, involving step-by-step approach to convertibility.

The first step would be to strengthen the sterling area through internal measures, such as the dollar-saving proposals on a list of selected commodities discussed at Monday's meetings. Then the conditions would be created for some degree of limited convertibility, involving an approach to the United States.

Whatever is decided there is unlikely to be any quick move toward what Canadians understand by convertibility—a free exchange of currencies without any restrictions on the amount of convertibility. some British sources say, that there might be a free market in gold and dollar reserves within a few weeks as it briefly did in 1947. It was learned Tuesday night that seven Commonwealth prime ministers — including Winston Churchill and Canada's Louis St. Laurent will discuss the Korean deadlock and other foreign issues Thursday at a British cabinet dinner.

CNR President Says Railways Have No Rolling Stock Reserve

OTTAWA (CP) — Donald Gordon, president of Canadian National Railways, said today the railways have no reserve of rolling stock and facilities to accommodate quickly the enormous expansion in traffic that would follow outbreak of war.

He addressed prepared for delivery before the Canadian Club here, Mr. Gordon said: realistic planning—beyond the comprehensive control or responsibility of railway management—must provide for land transportation as the backbone of a Canadian defence effort and give the railways the assurance of the courageous and sympathetic assistance as it strives to defence industry generally.

"To deny the railways the right to earn a satisfactory level of revenue would be foolish at any time," he said. "To do so in the present certain state of world affairs could well be fatal."

"The railways must be ready to demonstrate their unique capacity for efficient and responsible control the movement of troops and the evacuation of whole populations from a threatened area.

Time For Planning

"Now is the time to plan for mass movements on an emergency scale and to be in readiness against that disruption of essential services which will follow the first objectives of enemy action.

"I think it fair to say that the railways are ready and able to undertake and guarantee the transportation requirements of total emergency. This quality of being indispensable ought to ensure the railways a due consideration."

"Actually, rail transport tends to be regarded as a standby to be used in emergencies or when highways are blocked and planes are grounded. In this period of rail ways have a considerable number of unused facilities.

Reasons Given

Mr. Gordon said lack of traffic density is the principal reason why Canadian railways have not copied the streamlining of the United States in operating gleaming streamliners.

Reds Claim GI's Sought Asylum In Soviet Zone

BERLIN (AP) — The Communists say three American Sgmith and Carl Thomas Blake had decided to give up their American citizenship and live behind the iron Curtain. There was no indication of Smith's former military unit or his home town.

U. S. Army officials said today that Blake was a private from Covington, Ky., who had been missing from his military unit in Berlin for five months.

Reds Offer Special Service —For a Price

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Herald Tribune says today that army officials have disclosed that hundreds of U.S. servicemen now presumed to be in North Korean or Chinese prison camps have been deluged with Communist propaganda for months.

The whole variety of propaganda about the Korean war was reported and, in addition, offers to render special services to such prisoners—for a price.

The Tribune's dispatch to the newspaper by C. B. Allen says: "Army officials said that in some cases, the agencies or persons sending such propaganda to prisoners of war have included wives and sweethearts of servicemen missing in action in Korea who have written that their captured relatives are alive and well-treated in prison camps but have suggested that they would welcome a letter from the Communist 'rest camp.'

"This, such communications explained, could be arranged for a two-week period for matter of $1,000 or $2,000 for each prisoner to be so favored."

Report Attacks On 28 Women In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pepper and judo are suggested by worried Vancouver citizens as weapons against rapists and molesters.

Police, alarmed at the number of attacks on women, have told them to stay off the streets at night unless accompanied.

But a newspaper poll shows women think they should take a hand in combatting the street prowlers.

Says Mrs. Martha Severson, housewife: "I would blind him (the rapist) by throwing pepper in his face. Every woman can carry a little pepper in one of her pockets or bags. It's not a plastic bag her bed."

She said a wave of sex crimes in her native Norway was ended by this means.

"I'm going to begin taking 'a course in judo," said another woman. "I'm going to learn it."

In the last 16 days at least 28 cases of rape, molestings or attempted attacks on women have been reported to police.

BIG FAMILY

EDMONTON (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Guenette recently celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary and received many congratulatory messages. There were 17 children born to the union and they now have 44 grandchildren and 37 great-grandchildren.

SENATOR HAIG SAYS OCTOBER 12 ELECTION DAY

Predicts No One-Sided Govt. Will Result

OTTAWA (CP) —Senator John T. Haig, self-styled election star-gazer says the Liberal government will go to the country Monday, Oct. 12, 1953.

That was the word the 75-year-old Progressive Conservative Senator gave his colleagues on Tuesday. And he was right once before. Some months before the last election he picked the exact date—June 27, 1949.

Senator Haig admitted, however, he might be wrong this time. Many government supporters are talking a May election and one must be set by mid-August, 1954. But he said he believes Prime Minister St. Laurent too smart politically to plunge the country into election turmoil just prior to the Coronation.

He expressed assurance of one thing. The next election would not produce any one-sided government" as in the present House of Commons. The Liberals now have 171 of the 265 seats.

"It may be Liberal, it may be Progressive Conservative, it may be CCF, it may be Social Credit or Labor, but a majority one it all," said Senator Haig. "But it will be no one-sided government, and I'm glad of that for the country."

One-sided governments are no good for the country or the parliamentary system.

He also expressed doubt about the government spending millions for armaments which might be obsolete in five years. And he said he thinks Canadians should depend too much on the United Nations to save world problems.

His Senate speech was the highlight of a parliamentary day which found the Commons still engaged in the inaugural Throne speech debate on subjects ranging from Commonwealth trade to politics and the rail wage dispute.

Winning Seed Produced In Haldimand

CAYUGA (CP)—The alfalfa seed which made Murray W. Coverdale the alfalfa king of the Americas sits at the bay and grain show of the Canadian Seed Growers Association in a position is an Ontario product from Haldimand county.

It is called Ontario variegated. The seed was developed at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, and planted by Coverdale's father 35 years ago.

Coverdale, 65, decided to death that his sample won, said recently Monday, "It was necessary to many other parts of the province, is rarely necessary in Ontario. The variegated only reseeded four or five times in 25 years, he said.

FOUR NOMINATED

JERUSALEM. (AP) — Parliament will select Israel's second president next Monday from among four candidates nominated by the ruling Mapai party, named Dr. the Mapam, Dr. Peretz Bernstein, the Progressive party, Pinchas Rosenblatt, and Rabbi Mordecai Muruk, backed by all religious parties.

Eleven Red Leaders Convicted In Purge Hanged At Prague

All Were Once Trusted Servants of The Kremlin

VIENNA (CP)—Rudolph Slansky and 10 other Czechoslovak Communist leaders convicted less than a week ago were hanged in Prague today bringing to an end the biggest Red purge since the dread Moscow trials of 1936.

Prague radio announced the executions of the 11 Red leaders, once trusted servants of the Kremlin. They were sentenced Nov. 27 to die as confessed traitors who deliberately admitted they led a "Zionist, Trotskyite" plot to overthrow the pro-Moscow Czech government of they helped take over in the 1948 coup.

Those who died with Slansky, the Czech party's former secretary-general and kitchenman, were:

Vlado Clementis, former, Czech foreign minister.

Karel Svab, ousted last year as deputy minister of state security.

The other three defendants in the mass trial were given life sentences. The were Arthur London and Vavro Hajdu, both former deputy foreign ministers, and Evzen Loebl, former deputy foreign trade minister. The court said Loebl had implicated the rest of the ring although he denied it.

All the defendants except three—Clementis, Svab and Svab—were Jews. The trial was marked by virulent anti - semitism including charges that the plotting was "Zionist-inspired." The implication of the leader crackdown on Jews behind the iron curtain was obvious.

Radio Prague said the executions took place at Pankrac prison in the Czech capital after the state prosecutor had rejected all clemency appeals by the defence.

The 14 defendants confessed at length to charges of treason, sabotage and espionage, reciting sins against Stalinism and Western Element Gottwald in a pattern that became familiar to Western diplomats since the famous Moscow purge trials of 1936.

Confirm Second Kill

SEOUL (CP)—The U.S. Fifth Air Force confirmed a second kill for Sqdn. Ldr. James D. Lindsay of Armprior, Ont.

Lindsay, one of the RCAF fighter pilots serving with the United States Fifth Air Force, destroyed his second MiG while flying a Sabre jet in Korean combat.

He left for home Friday after completing his tour of duty.

Lindsay had one previous credit of a MiG destroyed.

Canada's Exports During Ten Months At All-Time High of $3,558,500,000

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's exports during the first 10 months of 1952 climbed to an all-time high of $3,558,500,000, the bureau of statistics reported today.

The total was a little more than $350,000,000 over last year's 10-month total of $3,193,900,000, with most of the gain resulting from increased shipments to overseas countries including the United Kingdom.

Federal trade officials predicted that at the current rate exports for the 12 months of 1952 will score a new high, surpassing last year's $4,000,000,000 total.

Shipments were higher than 1951 in every month with the exception of July and August, the bureau said. Exports during October increased slightly to $377,800,000 from $375,600,000 in October, last year.

The big 1952 jump in exports, one-said the bureau, resulted mostly from an increase in volume. Prices had been easing slightly for almost a year, during October the decline halted, partly because of higher prices for wheat and the value of the Canadian dollar.

Prices for the first 10 months of 1952 were about the same as last year, but volume jumped 13 per cent.

October's developments indicated that Britain, which had been buying heavily on the Canadian market earlier this year, was beginning to tighten her purse strings.

Exports to the United Kingdom for the 10-month period totalled $830,000,000 compared with $931,000,000 in the corresponding period of last year. Exports to the United States in the same period were $810,900,000 against $210,800,-

Show 6,000 Drop In Immigration For 10 Months

OTTAWA (CP) — A total of 146,238 immigrants reached Canada in the first 10 months of this year compared with 152,473 in the corresponding months of 1951, a drop of 6,235.

The figures were issued today, by the immigration department. It was the first time this year that the cumulative total dropped below the corresponding figure for 1951.

However, monthly totals have been dropping steadily since May and immigration department officials said it was certain that the total number of immigrants for this year would fall below last year's total of 195,000.

The total for 1951 was the largest for any year since 1913 when approximately 300,000 were admitted. The 1913 figure included the 10-month-period was a 46 per cent increase over the number of immigrants admitted from the United Kingdom. Admissions totalled 34,-000 compared with 25,058.

Entries from the United States were down 17 per cent, 19,000 compared with 8,737. North European entries were three per cent higher at 57,472 compared with 55,875.

A 33-per-cent decrease was shown for other countries at 44,823 compared with 64,883.

The number of immigrants admitted in October was 10,940 compared with 22,588 for the corresponding month of 1951.

Out of the total number admitted this year, 73,000 were women and 68,855 dependents.

Sterling Area Gold, Reserves Show Increase

LONDON (Reuters) — Sterling area gold and dollar reserves increased by $125,000,000 in November, continuing the recent improvement in the treasury account.

Officials said they are "rather optimistic" that the increase can be held near this new figure, which shows the biggest monthly increase since March last year.

The November figure follows increases of $62,500,000 in October and brings the total reserves on Nov. 30 to $1,985,000,000.

In addition to the improved reserve position Britain, as banker of the sterling area, holds $1,400,000,000 plus with the European payments union in addition to the gold subscription, the best figure since October, 1950.

EPU is a Western European currency pool designed to encourage trade by trading.

EPU will pay Britain $85,000,000 of her November surplus in gold during December. The remaining $40,000,000 will go towards settling Britain's debt of $300,000,000 to the union, under its rules.

HEALTH SUPERVISORS MAKE INSPECTION

Two officials from the Ontario Department of Health, Muriel V. Lowry, regional supervisor, Division of Public Health Nursing and Miss Leland Park, area nursing supervisor, did some complimentary work in my absence. Their records and services carried on by the local Health Department. Their supervisors are here on a regular visit. They arrived on Monday and will remain for a week or ten days.

"In general," Miss Lowry said, "the nursing in progress here is developing along lines most desirable for this area." Miss Carol B. Gealt is head of the local public health nurses in Belleville.

PRICES OF SPRINGER COWS INCREASE

The report that the embargo on Canadian cattle entering the United States would be lifted in March has sent with the approval of stockmen in the Bay of Quinte district. The date for lifting the embargo, however, is still not yet anticipated.

All trips by livestock sold considerably higher last during the past week, according to the weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Prices of springer cows have particularly strengthened.

SUPPLEMENTARY EXAMS FAVORED BY MEMBERS OF COUNTY COUNCIL

Upon school students in high schools should be allowed to write supplementary exams when they fail by one or two subjects. This is the opinion of members of county council who yesterday concurred in a resolution forwarded from Oshawa county.

Members pointed out that university students were permitted this privilege and grade XIII actually was first year university. The resolution asked that students be permitted to write supplementary exams in the fall of the same year if nine subjects had been written and they failed to receive sufficient marks in one or two subjects.

Panel of Speakers Replies to Criticism

The Rotary members presented individual six-minute talks at the Monday meeting in Bridge Street to all supervising their views on five phases of a recent speaker's talk. Malcolm Robb, city lawyer, addressed the club recently in which he criticized many business plans in force today.

His talk, "A Cavalcade of Problems," aroused so much interest among the members that program convener Stan Goodwin decided and this panel as a reply to Mr. Robb's address. The five members of the panel were: Canon J. R. Sweppard, Norman Dow, Fred Boodle, Art Young and Carl Crosby.

All the conclusion of his talk each member of the panel was presented with a hand-some-wrapped gift from Art Francis. The gifts turned out to be Snow White jig-saw puzzles. The speakers were introduced by Stan Goodwin and thanked by the president, George Campbell.

Engineers Hear Address On Public Relations

Good public relations is founded on good service rendered efficiently by courteous, friendly people, at reasonable cost, Hugh McIntosh, of Montreal, general information manager of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, told the Belleville branch of the Engineering Institute in Canada on Monday night.

Mr. McIntosh, who spoke on his company's public relations program, said that "even with this foundation for good public relations we may fail to achieve the goals if we do not understand the tudes of our customers. They are likely to take our good services and our efficient, courteous way of providing it, for granted. In other words, they may not consciously appreciate it."

Customers cannot appreciate these things unless they have knowledge and understanding of how good our service really is and how we strive in so many ways to improve on our service, and to do it more efficiently.

"It is commonly said that good works do not speak for themselves," he said, "but, having justified the approval of our customers, we owe it to ourselves to bring it to their attention—to make sure that our good works are appreciated, and thus make sure that they result in favorable attitudes."

In planning a program to accomplish these ends, it is necessary first to discover the present opinion of the customers. This is accomplished through surveys taken among a sample of the customers.

These surveys also show the type of information needed to tell the customers the company's story.

Mr. McIntosh used charts to illustrate the types of information provided to employees, shareholders and the public through the various media such as newspaper advertisements, "Telephone News," posters, street car and bus cards, feature articles for newspapers, radio, films, lecture-demonstrations, and displays at exhibitions and fairs, and so forth.

News of Trenton

James Whitley, 92, Father of New Mayor, First to Congratulate Son

TRENTON, (Special.)—One of the first admirers and staunchest supporters to congratulate Trenton's new Mayor R. E. "Roly" Whitley, on his election as a three-candidate race here Monday was his nonagenarian father, James Whitley, K.C., who is a great grandfather and the first of the line of five generations of the Whitley family. The incoming chief magistrate's wife who live worked at the Whitley campaign headquarters all day was at her husband's side when he received the gratifying news that he had been elected over Ross Burtt and Norman Banfield the other two contestants in the race. Whitley defeated 428 more votes than Burtt who finished in second place.

Many or Mr. Whitley's followers visited his home on Marmora street to offer their good wishes to their hero. His son, Douglas Whitley, himself elected to the Board of Education, was on hand with his eight brothers and sisters, Mrs. A. M. Cowan, Mrs. Ivor Gill, Ernest and Jo-laws also attended the jovial gathering.

Mayor Whitley will not take office until January 1. One of his first steps will be to set up a Trenton Industrial Survey and advisory committee. He plans to carry on where Mr. Couch left off as far as industrial accomplishments are concerned. He wants to work in unison with everybody.

Played at County Home

The Lions Club band comprising 25 boys and four girls presented a two hour concert at the Hastings County Home on the outskirts of Belleville last Sunday. The concert was well appreciated by inmates of the by the veteran and praise from the aged listeners. The superintendent of the institution was more than pleased. It was the first time a band has played for the aged pensioned home. Maurice Bell is the leader of the Trenton musicians.

Finally Get to Ill Husband

An airman's letter—a mercy flight to the bedside of her critically ill husband at Portage La Prairie, was aboard an R.C.A.F. twin-engined aircraft from Trenton, that was grounded in Stoughton, Michigan, Saturday, because a faulty engine forced the captain of the plane to abandon the rush trip. The Trenton woman, Mrs. R. A. McMahon, 97 Campbell Street, was fortunate enough to catch another Canadian air force transport that put her to her injured husband, unconscious in a hospital after a bad car accident. A telegram to a neighbor yesterday reported the airman still unconscious but improving.

By a strange coincidence the plane Mrs. McMahon was a passenger on limped into the same Michigan airbase that the four lost Edmonton football fans took off from a few hours earlier on Friday.

Saw Black Cat

Photographer Joe Nulty observed a black seagull among a flock of white ones feeding on the river behind his place of business on Monday. "I've seen black sheep but never black seagulls," he commented.

Back From Hospital

George LaBrash has returned from Sunnybrook Hospital after a long siege with recurrence of condition that caused leg amputation. He is at home on Trenton Street with his family. He was conveyed to Legion Hall last Saturday for distribution of mail on the occasion of the Trenton branch's silver jubilee celebration.

Canadian Legion Presents Portrait To County Council

Branch 98 of the Canadian Legion, through its president, Leroy Madden and vice president William Bailey, yesterday officially presented Hastings county council with a portrait of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II. Presentation was made by President Madden during a brief recess of council which is now sitting at its December session.

In making the presentation Mr. Madden brought greetings from the local branch of the Legion expressing his appreciation of the co-operation which his organization had received from County council, particularly Warden Les Grills.

"It is with great pleasure that the local Legion presents this picture of Her Majesty to the County of Hastings," Mr. Madden said.

Mr. Madden outlined the aims of the Legion and its interest in the veterans, asking that council members notify the Legion of any instance where they know of a veteran in need or who is not receiving the pension which is his due.

Warden Grills in expressing the appreciation of council members for the gift of the portrait, wished the Legion every success in its endeavors. "We certainly appreciate this beautiful picture of our beloved Queen," he said.

Name Officers Of Leaders' Corps At YMCA

Stan Creegan was elected president and Doug Soule as secretary-treasurer of the newly formed Senior Leaders' Corps at the Y.M.C.A. last night. Other members of the corps are Don Cherry, Jerry Cousins, Jack Campbell and Bob Pearce.

Di Diamantides, physical director, explained the purpose and objectives of the leaders corps. "It is a group of young men," he said, "gathered around a personality, attractive enough, and challenging enough to rally them in training and service for others. The leaders corps is the back bone of the physical education department in any Y.M.C.A."

The Y.M.C.A. leaders corps was first started by Robert J. Mackie, a pioneer physical director of the Boston Y.M.C.A. in 1886. Its stirring platform of "Exercise should be short, safe, safe, practical and pleasant" produced immediate increase in attendance in the Boston Y gymnasium and it is imperative that he should have a number of helpers and assistants to serve as leaders of squads, teams, etc. So began the first volunteers corps in the Y.M.C.A.

Leaders clubs in Canada started almost simultaneously with the inauguration of Y.M.C.A. physical education programs. The credit for the first leaders corps in Canada goes to the Montreal Y.M.C.A. organized in 1892 by William H. Ball, physical director. Toronto followed in 1900 and Winnipeg in 1904.

Leaders corps today are playing an important part in helping with the complex physical education programs in the Canadian Y.M.C.A's. They have been fostered as a nation-wide body, with standard uniforms, crests and training; certificates of merit are issued by the National Council to qualified leaders, and annual leaders conferences are held to further improve their training and service.

The local Y leaders corps will be meeting regularly every Monday night. Junior and Intermediate leaders corps are in the process of being formed soon.

First Gasoline Pumped Through New Pipe Line

The first gasoline to be pumped through the new Trans Northern pipe line which went under completion last spring was taken with at the Carnifton terminal Saturday night. Spokesman for the Shell Oil Company, Mr. A. Jeffery reported that 240,000 gallons of gasoline pumped from the Montreal terminal through the line was entered into the pipes at Montreal on Nov. 22 and took approximately five days to reach Carnifton.

Mr. Jeffery said also that the Carnifton terminal was the first point at which the gasoline was taken from the line. The remainder of the gasoline will continue on to be removed at different terminals along the route. The product will eventually reach Toronto, the end of the line.

According to the company official, once the line reaches full operation, probably some time in December, the time it takes the fluid to travel the distance will be almost cut in half.

TORONTO STOCKS

Volume for the first three hours totalled 869,000 shares.

Higher - priced base metals led the decline and Canada Asbestos, Normetal and United Asbestos slipped. Western Tungsten dropped $1.20 in the first hour but recovered later to a 30-cent loss. Barvue gained and East Rim traded actively for no change.

Western oils gains outnumbered losses about two to one but Central Explorers continued a recent sharp decline with a loss of 55 cents in a third - hour volume of 34,000 shares. Britalta also slipped but Giz Exploration, Pacific, Trans Empire and Calvan gained.

Financial institutions led the industrials decline as most issues were mixed. Utilities showed strength.

Senior golds and holding companies held firm but junior producers and prospects slipped. Cambell and San Antonio gained in juniors but most others slipped. Gunnar, a prospect, gained pennies in a turnover of 46,000 shares.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP)—The American dollar was at a discount of 2 11-16 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Tuesday's noon rate was 97 11-32 cents. The pound sterling was $2.73, against $2.73 3-16 on Tuesday.

New Marketing Plan Should Be Aim Dairy Director Tells Cheese Makers' Association

A new marketing program for Canadian cheddar cheese must be aimed at by Canadians, C. E. Lackner, director of dairying for Ontario, told the Ontario Cheese Makers' Association, Tuesday night at the Quinte Hotel. Last night's meeting marked the end of the first day of a two-day session being conducted in conjunction with the British Empire Dairy Show.

The loss of the British market has forced Canadian cheese manufacturers to look to the home front, Mr. Lackner pointed out. A single example of what could be accomplished along these lines occurred at the recent plowing match at Carp, Ontario. Cheese was attractively displayed at various refreshment booths and three tons were sold during the day. Ottawa Exhibition and other smaller fairs plan to feature cheese in their booths next year.

"Place more products at bazaars and other places of entertainment," Mr. Lackner said, "and I'm sure people will buy it. I believe there lies a great part of our new markets."

Not Balance Wheel

"In the past ten years," the speaker said, "the number of Ontario cheese factories had dropped from 607 to 290." With milk being diverted in other directions, he expressed doubt that cheese any longer was the balance wheel of the dairy industry. "No longer," he said, "is the cheese factory the dumping ground of surplus milk."

As for making cheese from pasteurized milk—a process now being carried out in some centres —the speaker urged extreme caution. The conversion period was great for this operation, but any manufacturer, who had sufficient patronage for this type of product would be wise to produce it.

More Easily Packaged

Mr. Lackner also suggested that the smaller sized cheese, five to 10 pounds, should be made available to bolster the home market. This type shows less shrinkage and is more easily packaged.

"But before we make any change in our cheddar cheese," he warned, "we must make certain that change is for the better."

J. F. Robinson, of Kemptville, chief cheese instructor for Eastern Ontario, complimented the local association on the fine display at the cheese show.

"It was remarkable to note the finish on the cheese at the exhibition," he said. "In the past two years, we have had to lower our judging standards to get enough contestants in the group to warrant the number of prizes available. This year we had to raise our standards to place competitors in the top group."

Similar Each Year Claim

Each year, Mr. Robinson continued, the cheese industry has been slipping. Dairying, split into multiple offshoots of which cheese making is a member, was well organized in such individual units. But, he wondered, would it not be better if the industry worked as a whole, rather than single component parts.

"Perhaps," he concluded, "the solution would be to select a board that could sit down and iron out all our major problems."

Clayton Scneider, of Kitchener, Western Ontario Representative of the Cheese Makers' Association and Bruce Shangraw, of Harrowsmith, eastern representative of the same group, both expressed brief greetings from their districts to the Central Ontario body.

The convention concludes this evening.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP) — Cattle prices were steady to a shade lower on a plain quality supply today at the Ontario stockyards. Receipts totalled 180; calves 110; hogs 390; sheep and lambs 130. The holdover from Tuesday was 200 cattle.

Common to medium steers and heifers sold at $14-$21 and good heifers at 22. Fed yearlings ranged from 20-25 and common to medium stockers from 16-20. Good cows brought 14-15 and canners and cutters 10-12. Good bulls were at 14.50-16.50.

Choice veal calves were steady at $26-29 with common to medium at 14-25.

All November cheese were offered on the Belleville Cheese Exchange on Tuesday evening as the board held its first meeting in two weeks. The volume of 2,271 cheese included 1,583 specials, 349 white and 434 colored. The trade purchased all the white at 30 cents and all the colored at 30¼ cents with the remainder going to the marketing board.

W. H. McCreary placed a motion on the floor to authorize the secretary to award $25 to the Cheesemakers' Association and $15 to the janitor. W. D. Cook seconded the motion and it was carried.

The next meeting of the exchange is scheduled for Tuesday, December 16. At this meeting it is planned to offer for sale cheese made during the first two weeks in December.

Cheese Maker Always Active In Research Field Says Speaker

A good cheese maker is continually active in the research field, W. H. Sproule, professor of dairying at the Ontario Agricultural College of Guelph, told the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association at this morning's session of the convention being held at the Quinte Hotel.

Mr. Sproule briefly explained the various research projects now under way at the Guelph institute.

"One of these," he said, "had to do with the development of cheese from pasteurized milk. Chief difficulty stems from the researchers' concern to combine the curing property of commercial cheese with the cheddar aroma. "This particular project will be conducted over a period of three years."

Extensive trials are continuing on paraffin as a coating for cheese, the speaker said. Various waxes and wax mixtures are being tried with a view to finding an ultimate solution.

Another important experiment deals with milk testing with respect to cheese making. This has long been a contentious question among authorities on cheese. Mr. Sproule said he was confident that the experiments being carried out would result in a speedy method of fairly testing milk as it arrived at the factory.

"The most important element in business today is public relations," Charles S. Watson, vice-president of O'Keefe's Brewing Company of Toronto, declared in his address to the convention.

"We're in a buyers' market," Mr. Watson said, "and the' business that have maintained good public relations are now in the driver's seat.

Urging individual cheese makers to build up good will for themselves and their product in their communities, he warned that "the public has a long memory, especially for a bad deal."

He inferred that, with the cheese industry forced to go, to the Canadian market, it was imperative that the public relations of the industry be kept at a high level.

Earlier in the morning program, J. M. Bain, chief dairy instructor for western and central Ontario, gave a brief outline of the year's activities from the manufacturer's point of view.

E. G. Hood, chief of the dairy research science service at the Ottawa Experimental Farms, delivered a technical paper on the effect of penicillin on mastitis in dairy herds. This concluded the morning session.

The two-day convention closes with a banquet tonight.

IS THERE ANY ANSWER?

It has become trite to refer to the shocking proportions of the relentless toll taken in lives on the streets and highways of this province. The truth is that the grim statistics have ceased to shock anyone.

Just released is a comprehensive study of all traffic accidents in Ontario during the first nine months of this year. In terms of death and personal injury, casualties suffered by Canadians in Korea are insignificant in comparison.

The average for each of those 10 months was 68 persons killed and 1,100 injured in a total of 40,000 accidents reported — an increase of 16,000 accidents over the five-year average for the same period from 1947-51.

Can there be any other phase of human activity in this province in which it can be said that the sense of the general good of the nation or of the public has been so callously abandoned? Can there be any other public problem which cries out so loudly for extraordinary measures? In a country where hundreds of millions of dollars are spent annually in the name of human welfare this incredible disregard for self-preservation in the ordinary pursuits of going about our normal affairs of every-day life is surely an incomprehensible paradox.

And it continues at an ever-increasing pace in spite of increasing appeals to common sense, wider safety education, stricter regulations for traffic and the spending of millions for safer highways and closer traffic control!

Obviously enough is not being done, but until very, recently at least it could be held that the Ontario Government has been more lax than authorities anywhere else in its efforts to cope with the problem. Within the last two months in Quebec, however, a new and comprehensive version of traffic control legislation has been underway.

The Duplessis Government is attempting to meet the situation in the first instance by increasing the severity of penalties for all forms of traffic law-breaking and is to establish corrective rather than punitive measures. In this phase of its program every applicant for a driving permit will be required to pass a qualifying test of skill. This includes an eye test, examination of ability to judge distances, testing of reflexes, demonstration of efficiency in night-driving, testing of the angle of vision, checking of hearing and a test of alertness, and finally a practical demonstration of driving competence in the presence of a licence bureau.

These experiments in Quebec will certainly be watched with interest. It may be that the natural driving capacities of motorists loom largely in safety studies, but we hear much of the element of liquor, and, of late, traffic safety officers have stressed the factor of fatigue as a major contribution to the traffic toll.

It seems to us significant, however, that the comprehensive 9-month survey for this year shows that the case is overwhelmingly against the driver who was in "normal" condition when the accident occurred.

There were over 69,000 drivers involved in the total of 41,000 accidents. Of these, 67,646 were placed in the "normal" category, as distinct from those under the headings, "intoxicated", "physical defect" and "extreme fatigue."

If the above figures suggest anything it seems to us that there is a challenge here to the skill and determinant in the traffic accident picture but rather a combination of factors which the experts are at a loss to define except in the general term of "carelessness."

Perhaps the time would appear that rigid psycho-physical tests will not be the answer. It would suggest rather that punitive action would probably do more to reduce carelessness than anything else, the most advanced means of safety education have achieved very little.

COULD BE A PIPE DREAM

The invasion of the Canadian market by a cheap brand of American cigarets leaves us unmoved. As a two-dock-a-day slave to the "lady" nothing we say (and through the years we have done) is the tune of roughly $300 a year for Abbott's special blends.

But, for our part, they could bring the choicest American tobacco blends to our shores in Canada and we wouldn't take them as a steady weed diet at half the price.

On the other hand we would be quite happy-go-lucky if it turned out that competition from across the border prompted Mr. Abbott to give the Canadian smoker a treat instead of a treatment, sent him slashing prices and taxes, and generally permitting us to relax on a chesterfield with a 33-cent cigaret.

Failing that, we will make one more firm resolution to swear-off completely — one of these days.

A Chicago brain surgeon says that frustrations, coupled with social maladjustments, cause more than 90 per cent of the headaches in the country. We suspect that the other 10 per cent are the headaches inflicted on ordinary normal folk by the antics of the frustrated and maladjusted.

JUST POLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST
(Copyright, 1952, Edgar A. Guest)

When as a child I caught a cold
My mother did as grandma told.
With flannel we were bound about the wound
And tied a shocking that around.
The "cold pack method" that was called
By which the croup might be forestalled.

She rubbed with camphorated oil
My chest—'twas love's devoted toil—
Until from coughing I was free
Because of camphor next with me.
But if the cold would not let loose
She smeared me with the grease of goose.

"Old-fashioned cures" the doctors say,
But I am still an earth today.
Regardless of the camphor smell
The fact is that I did get well.
What mother used to do for cold
Must many times have cured a cold.

The glory and reward of long experience are both doubly enhanced by the memories we have stored up and set aside to give us comfort and a treasure of contentment for the silver-headed years of our lives. How dull these years, would be without our blessed memories!

Even troubles are blotted out by the memories we treasure especially if we preserve only those that have meant happiness to us or to those whom we have tried to make happier. We can keep running back to the exciting days of youth in our mind and heart, whatever tasks remain to us. Along the way our failures fade out while our successes seem to achieve better ones.

The smile of every child, the kindness and appreciative word of a friend help to give you nouncement to memories that have for long been etched upon the mind or locked away within the heart. These memories of ours are secure from all theft or loss They are self-insured. The more of them we have the richer we are. They cost us inconvenience to today, but thank God we have a stream of yesterdays!

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 3rd., 1932.

Mr. Harry J. Clarke, B.A., has completed twenty-five years as public school inspector for South Hastings and last evening one hundred and fifty members of the teachers' Institute of South Hastings, assembled at Hotel Quinte to tender Mr. Clarke a complimentary banquet. The chair was occupied by Mr. L. A. Kells and the reading and presentation of an illuminated address was performed jointly by Mr. C. C. Wilkin and Mr. F. W. Mott.

Mrs. Clarke was presented a bouquet of beautiful deep red roses. It was a very enjoyable event and expressed in sincere terms the high esteem in which Mr. Clarke is held by the teachers in the district and in the teaching profession in general.

The members of the Wharf Street Debating Club entertained Mayor Geo. O. Tice, members of the present council and their candidates in municipal honors at their club house. There was a large attendance. It was a bright, breezy affair with brief speeches and a surplus of hot dogs, pop and pickles. The chair was occupied by Mr. Harold Wannamaker who boiled the hot dogs and was assisted by willing helpers Pat Boland took down the names of the members as they paid their fees and James Correll handled the money. Maurice Callaghan acted as assistant and found it easy it is to remove pop bottle caps with his teeth. Neri Valentine acted as inner and outdoor guard and tried to keep the kids from getting lost only.

30 YEARS AGO

To celebrate the entrance of Bridge Street Methodist Church Sunday School upon the second centenary of its history and to recognize the debt now on the church, a club has been formed to be known as the "Centenary Club". The aims of the club are to stimulate liberality, discussion and community service. Following are the officers: Hon. Presidents, Rev. F. K. Maloff and Fred S. Deacon; president, Dr. N. A. Nelson; vice president, Dr. Morley A. Day; secretary, W. H. Lee; treasurer, Douglas Reid; chairmen of committees, Music, Ernest A. Ridley; membership, Geo. Cook; social, B. Bruce; service, G. E. McKinnon. Next Sunday His Honor Judge Deroche will address the members of the club.

40 YEARS AGO

December 3rd., 1912.

The morning's fall of wet sleet sheaf of school crop oats was gathered in the yard at the rear of Rickard Bros. fine furniture store on Front Street. It is quite remarkable how late this season has been; if this continues Belleville will be placed among the semi-tropical centres in Canada.

An election was held by Mr. Daniel Coyle at Frankford was burned to the ground. There were about 5,000 barrels of apples in the building and the better part of them was destroyed.

December 3rd., 1902.

At a meeting held in the offices of the Bank of Montreal it was decided to form a Belleville hockey team and the following were elected: Patrons, the managers of the four banks, Mr. Stork of the Bank of Commerce; Mr. Murray of the Dominion Bank; Mr. Hamilton of the Merchants Bank and Mr. Parker of the Bank of Montreal; president, R. Tannahill, Jr.; vice president, A. E. Pringle; manager, W. S. Brymner; secretary - treasurer, Arthur P. Worthing; trainers, the fathers of the four banks, Bull, Walker, Whitney and White.

This is the dullest and poorest dramatic season this town has ever known.

Mr. George Austin, who has been the driver of the Belleville-Tweed stage for the past two years, has given up the job and he will be succeeded by Mr. Penny of Belleville.

The Queen's Hotel at Weymouth has changed hands; Mr. James Royce, who has been the proprietor for a couple of years has sold the business to Mr. J. Fitzgerald.

TODAY'S TALK

SETTING ASIDE AMUSING MEMORIES

The most important task in life is not the mere setting aside of money for the proverbial rainy day, but amusing memories to give us spiritual joy while the world around us is ready to fear and confusion. In my reading I came across a line said to have been uttered by a French king. He said: "The fate do ills world I have dined!"

Nothing has added more joy and security to my later years than the books and small works of art I purchased in the years now gone — many of these acquired by quite a deal of sacrifice. Now they give, not only memories but mental and spiritual nourishment. Even the physical body reacts to these and a sense of beauty and satisfaction blooms, like fresh flowers, all about us.

The glory and reward of long experience are both doubly enhanced by the memories we have stored up and set aside to give us comfort and a treasure of contentment for the silver-headed years of our lives. How dull these years, would be without our blessed memories!

Even troubles are blotted out by the memories we treasure especially if we preserve only those that have meant happiness to us or to those whom we have tried to make happier. We can

Checked Your Almanac?

(Gall Reporter)

The 1953 edition of The Old Farmer's Almanac, which was founded in New England in 1792 by Robert B. Thomas and still publishes his signature under an introductory "Yours (as I have lived New Englanders), arrived in this office the other day. As usual we looked up the weather for the coming year. Don't scoff; there's method in the madness of some remarkable predictions to the craft. For last February 15, for instance, The Almanac announced positively, "Now for a blizzard right up to your gizzard." Sure enough, it did.

Anyway, we can make a preliminary check on its reliability right away. Regarding November's weather The Almanac, whose predictions must have been prepared several months ago, foresaw: Starts off cold and rainy that's for 10 days. May snow some from the 10th to the 15th and all the rest of the month will bring an unusual number of storms—chiefly rain." How does that square with what has happened so far?

The Almanac also says that "the first two weeks of December will bring about as bad weather as we ever want to see for that time of year. But the last two weeks will moderate some and on Christmas Day there will be more bare than snowy ground."

Naturally The Almanac is predicting ahead for the whole year. But it offers "special corrections and indications" for each month for all the United States. "A seer making such grand claims surely should not overlook Belleville, Ontario, or even all Canada. We imagine he'd simply say, "Just read 'snow' for 'rain' sometimes, and make it a little colder."

Generally, there is quite a bit of flexibility in these long-range forecasts. But The Almanac pushes out on a limb when it says tween March 15 and 21. "Watch out!" it says, "for the year's most severe storm."

Paste that one in your hat and let's see if those New Englanders pass the test this year.

Durable Old Jokes

(Peterborough Examiner).

Having a good memory for jokes, we are well established by the chestnuts which pop up slightly altered in publications particularly we were amazed at the liberties taken from old British publications which appear from time to time in the magazines of the U. S. Apparently they are not alone in this, for the London Punch has recently presented this interesting comparison:

"Miss Priscilla, 'Yes it's a beautiful day, but the flowers are in the habit of bathing on Sunday and Monday and Saturday rather a drawback.'

Fair visitor. 'Dear me But at any rate they're thatsurely—'

Miss Priscilla, 'Ah, but with a telescope you know!'"

Punch, February, 1892

"A tight-lipped maiden lady complained to the constable one summer evening that some boys were bathing nude in a nearby stream, full view of her verandah. The constable told the boys to move upstream a bit. Next day the lady spoke to the P. C. again. 'Have you seen the boys?' he asked.

'They have,' snapped the lady, 'but I'd go upstairs I can see them from the window.' So the constable told the boys where to go still farther away. They told they would.

In a week the lady was back in the police-station. They've gone upstream,' she said, 'but I can still see them from the attic window with field-glasses'."

Reader's Digest, September 1953

A good joke should not be allowed to die. Many sometimes wonder why, if Punch is so lacking in fun as some American writers claim it is, so assiduously mined by industrious American jokesmiths.

To Leonard (The Lip) Moceri, the most wanted trigger-man in the United States, the lesson that crime doesn't pay came in an unexpected and humiliating manner.

Probably the most notable achievement of Mr. Moceri's life was that he had managed, capture from police for 20 years after being indicted on four mob killings in Toledo, Ohio, in the early thirties. This was undoubtedly a source of pride and satisfaction to him. Friends such as James (The Weasel) Fratianno and Charles (The Bat) Battaglia must have thought that he was — pretty wonderful guy.

Mr. Moceri was a man of some stature in the circles in which he revolved, and one can only assume that he fell from a high place in the estimation of his friends when he was apprehended in a Los Angeles hotel for the simple misdemeanor of using slugs in a pay telephone. He had accumulated, with his wife, $1,800 in his pocket, as a matter of principle.

Mr. Moceri's friends and business associates will soon forget the sheer stupidity which has reflected so badly upon the intelligence and tradition of the big-time gangster.

Mr. Jimmy Gardiner, in a political speech to Saskatchewan University students the other day, let loose into the Conservatives with his usual vigor, and among other things said they were going to the Republican party in the United States.

He hadn't better stress that point. The people of the United States, by a vote of three-to-two, have turned the Republican government, decided they'd like to go back to the Democrats.

If Canadians, after 18 years of Liberal government, decide they'd like to give the Republicans a chance, Mr. Gardiner is here, if they think that whatever he has done, he can do better. Mr. Gardiner will find himself out of a job.

Aga Khan is more than a rich man and a spiritual leader in the Moslem world. He is also a smart business man, as might be expected of one who has his weight in diamonds and platinum from religious followers.

Now he has signed a $250,000 for his war memoirs; or Prime Minister Churchill, who was paid $2,000,000 for his memoirs on his personal war history. But the Aga Khan has fair possibilities, with motion picture rights included.

Still, he had better not delay too long. Some day, his son, Aly Khan, may be a rich and American market with a burning narrative of personal disclosures. The doings of the Khans, in two volumes, would be too much to take at a time.

NINE-MONTH VACUUM

We train, study, pass examinations, or in some way qualify for almost any job in the country. But for the most important job in the country, parenthood, the only qualification is conception.

Prospective, young, first-time fathers allow their wives and themselves to sit out the nine months, planning nothing more than the correct name, the darlingest layette and the most convenient spot amidst the household jadgets for the baby's crib. No concern is felt, no trepidation either, on one's yearly contractual bases, for a goodly stipend, to care for all problems arising. Including, baby.

Until these youngsters, who it now appears are becoming statistically conscious, become conscious of an even more secret need than that of preparing themselves to be parents, woe betide the hope for peace even in the most genial homes.

Education is the basis for this hope for peace. But education begins at birth. Now which young parents are qualified by preparation and training for the position? (H.F.)

Expectant mothers sit endless hours at bridge parties, debating whether to give up smoking while pregnant, or to "let nature take its course" and let the nurse the baby; whether to repudiate the nursing test in near-certain confidence that they evaluate as "come-hither" the sag and pull of the essential function of motherhood which God intended. They debate whether to refrain from alcohol, or merely whether to limit it to "two highballs before dinner," or ale, beer or the like before for my "nerves" to relax and have a little "fun" weekends.

They write the editor of this health column asking if it is true that "baby" is born addicted to cigarets, testifying to the abysmal ignorance which is theirs. Biased as the instructive material can be had from the federal government printing office, from the public libraries, from institutions, such as the Child Study Association of America, they search for the tales of their equally uninformed neighbors.

Some of them work away from home to "supplement the inadequate income of their husbands." Translated, this means to acquire a better standard, interior-decoration according to the magazine ads, liquor on the "bar" in the "den," etc.

When the baby arrives, the mother is in an unhealthy physical condition, from lack of play and exercise in the open air, in a poorer mental condition, from excessive hours of strolling to keep up with the Joneses, plus the sudden realization that she is ignorant about babies.

The crib is ready, the house is as ready as the environment says, the T.V. set is polished; the parents know how to prepare the formula and think they know baby. They know the doctor's telephone number. But as outsiders and teachers of this citizen of 1973, they are a total loss.

MILK A Yes Like It

Taking treatment for peptic ulcer. Someone told me to take yogurt but I don't like it. Is it necessary? (H.F.)

Answer — Is someone's name Ben? Your physician's advice would be best, but in general yogurt or buttermilk or other such milk product for a healthy person or one with ulcer is helpful.

How Not To Get Gallstones

Please tell me what to do not to get gallstones.

Answer — Among other things, (1) roll 6 somersaults first thing tomorrow morning, (2) practice belly breathing last thing at night and on walking every other day, (3) write the staff of life (plain wheat) to your everyday diet in place of refined white flour and refined sugar.

What! No Breakfast?

Can you imagine that it is unhealthful for my tister (13) and me (14) to go to school mornings without breakfast. (G.K.)

Answer — It is. Why do you trifle with health like that? I hope not with the idea of going to Hollywood.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

There have been a couple of very distressing items in Canadian hospitals recently in which the wrong medicine or the wrong treatment was administered by nurses with fatal effect on patients. In both cases the nurses were to blame, the mistake having occurred in the labelling or filling of the bottle. The young unfortunate accidents serve to underline the great responsibility of such events, and to remind us of the extraordinary skill of the average professional. No schooling in our present educational system surpasses the training of the nurse in the majority of Canadian hospitals.

One of the elementary rules in the training of a student nurse is carefully to read the label "Look at everything twice!" This rule is dinged into them from the excellent days of training. In some hospitals, it is untied on the pain of death. The young student nurses are required to memorize the signs in the dispensary as they go about their work, until in time it becomes their second nature to look twice at every thing they touch. A nurse who distinguished herself in the surgery and operation theatre told me she had become so addicted to the habit of looking twice that she developed the trick of picking up everything with her left hand, looking at it; then transferring it to her right hand, and looking again, whether it was an instrument, bottle or a swab.

CAN MISTAKES BE REMEDIED?

A mother whose little four-year-old daughter had left the gas jet burning and gone upstairs, became suspicious over the prolonged silence and went to investigate. She found the young-ster in the bathroom squeezing the entire tube of toothpaste and viewing the results with fascination. When the poor mother, she tried hastily to push the toothpaste back into the tube.

Now the little girl was engaged in something we adults have been engaged in often—trying to undo the undoable. There are some things which can be put back into the receptacle in which it came, but toothpaste is not one of these. Likewise there are many things in life that once done can be undone. But there are some things in life which are irrevocable. They are mistakes and sins which can never be remedied.

Many times in our lives we sometimes haunt people throughout their lives. Decisions which mean the loss of wealth or the blasting of romance or the breaking up of a friendship have about them many aspects which are irrevocable.

But there are remedies. The fact "verses of God lifts the burden of guilt from every wrongdoer who is constrained to sur for mercy before the throne of grace. The natural kindliness of human nature is another. It is to be considerate and tolerant of one another's weakness.

There are remedies.

Question of New High School Tabled for Consideration Of Next Year's Council

A recommendation to express approval of the new High School after all municipalities had agreed to contribute to the debenture debt was tabled for a month by members of the city council, which met on Tuesday afternoon. There was only a short discussion on the matter but all agreed with the suggestion of Mayor Haig, that all legal procedure should be completed before the council asked permission of the Municipal Board to approve the debenture.

Alderman Argue argued that the debt was to be distributed on an assessment basis and therefore the Corporation would have to pay more per pupil than the outside municipalities but Mayor Haig disagreed with that point of view. Ald. Clarke stated that rural children would be interested in technical work and therefore the people of the city would have to be accommodated in the new school. Ald. Powell have further to go for their education

To Proclaim Boxing Day

The Mayor was authorized to proclaim Boxing Day a civic and public holiday after the Retail Merchants had requested a holiday for the day after Christmas. It was understood that many of the industries were working at extra Saturday over their week in order to make the day after Day of layoff. The Salvation Army was authorized to place their collection pots on the streets previous to Christmas and hoped that they received go-to help some who enjoy Christmas more merrily. A number of lots were sold on the recommendation of the Chairman of Property and one sale was referred to the next council.

A request for a grant of $1,000 from the Belleville Memorial Swimming Pool committee was referred to the budget committee with the members expressing the opinion that the Recreation Commission should handle this matter. A financial statement was given by the committee showing that it was impossible to give free instruction in swimming and also supervision out of revenue received. Aldermen Thomas and Hollins spoke on the question and Ald. Tice, a member of the Recreation Commission, stated that the commission was willing to handle the load but that the budget for that department would have to be increased that amount and that was the intention of the Commission to conduct the business next year on the budget that was received last year out of which $1,200 will be paid to the Parks Board for work done a year ago by that Board. All the members were agreeable to the opinion that the work had been worthwhile and that progress had been made.

Approve Booklet

It was also approved that the Hastings and City Boards would again be issued under the sponsorship of these two bodies and that the cost to the municipality would be $800 including postage. The same number of booklets will be issued as was issued last year. A recommendation to increase the market dues was well received, but the members the chairman explained that the comparison with other municipalities the cost of a stall on the local market was very low. The new scale was approved and the by-law respecting those charges was passed. Ald. Smith wanted to know if the producer wanted two stalls, one inside and one outside would he be charged for both stalls and the members thought this would be only fair.

The comptroller and the chairman of property were authorized to purchase lights and shelving for the new city engineer's office and the Imperial Oil Company was allowed to put in the installations outlined in their request to the council. Tenders were called for the gasoline and fuel oil to be used by the Public Works department next year and upon recommendation the city employees will be paid their wages till the end of the months on the pay of the middle of the month. The city will have extra money for the Christmas holiday.

Welfare Officer Commissioned

Welfare Officer George Whitman was complimented most highly by the chairman of welfare for the efficient work as welfare case for had the decision been made that the city would have cost approximately $15,000. A letter was read to the council outlining the case in concise manner, showing it was through the thorough investigation carried out by Mr. Whitman that the city was relieved of the cost.

Permission was given a local merchant to broadcast Christmas carols from his store during certain hours of the Christmas season.

Dr. J. Russell Scott, chairman of the Library Board appeared before council, to explain why an increased budget will be asked for next year by the Library Board. The chairman stated he was proud of the way the board had utilized the money of the budget last year and hoped that the same would be treated fairly by the new council. He stated that in 1939 $2,500 had been taken from the library while in 1953 that number had increased to 105,101 or an increase of approximately 40 per cent in five years. He was also pleased with the success of the travelling library. Steven Gilleath school, which was opened for the first time last week. In the library at the school they secured 776 new members and in September and the circulation of the books while in November it was 1,200. He claimed the staff had done a wonderful job and that another branch library should be established in the west side of the city.

Will Appoint Member

The Mayor stated he was very sorry that he had been unable to attend any of the Board's meetings but that he would appoint a member of council to the board and that the council could be kept informed. This he has worked out very well with the Board of Health" said the Mayor.

A delegation headed by Norman Keslar, a ratepayer of the city and a member of the Public Works staff, appeared before the council regarding two bodies and that the cost to the municipality would be $800 including postage. The same number of booklets will be issued as was issued last year. A recommendation to increase the market dues was well received, but the members the chairman explained that the comparison with other municipalities the cost of a stall on the local market was very low. The new scale was approved and the by-law respecting those charges was passed. Ald. Smith wanted

OPERATION MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN OUT OF FORMER MAN

Jorgensen, Jr., was Christine's son of a New York carpenter, served in the U.S. army for two years and was given an honorable discharge. The Jorgensens were informed, via a letter from Denmark, that their "son" is now a normal, happy, beautiful woman. All her records have been changed and the new woman has taken the name Christine. Not until last June, following the completion of the protracted treatment, did the Jorgensens learn that their son had ever contemplated the radical sex change.

POLICE COURT

Convicted on a charge of drunk driving and of purchasing liquor while a member of Tweed, Ferguson, 19, of Thurlow township was fined ten days in jail by Magistrate T. V. Wills in magistrate's police court Tuesday. On the charge of purchasing liquor he was assessed a fine of $13 not over.

Ronald Temple, charged with assault on a police officer and of resisting arrest was discharged.

Ronald J. P. Stephens, Albert Street, was given a year's suspended sentence on several charges of false pretences involving passing bad cheques. Restitution was made by Stephens.

Several Resolutions from Other Municipalities Considered At County Council Session

Hastings county council convened for the final session of the year on Tuesday when reeves representing the various municipalities met to wind up the county business for the year.

Warden Lee Gillis in welcoming members to the session pointed out that several important resolutions would be up for discussion during the session. He expressed congratulations to reeves who had received acclamations from their municipalities for another term in office, or who had been re-elected. "It shows the appreciation of ratepayers for your efforts," he said.

Several resolutions were read, among them one from Hungerford township council asking that the road from Hwy. No. 14 to the highway along the old railway line be taken over as a county road.

Refused Approved

Another resolution from Tudor township, presented by Reeve James Beckwith, asked that the municipality be relieved of county road rates as no county road passed through Tudor township. After some discussion the request was approved and the matter referred to by-laws.

However, before decision on the matter was reached, Reeve Tracey Adams of Dungannon pointed out that a resolution had been passed through Tudor township, residents of the municipality had the use of county roads in other sections of the county.

Reeve Beckwith of Madoc wanted to know where it would all end if municipalities continued to ask relief from county road rates because no county road passed through the municipality. "It will soon be quite a problem," he said, "and might mean the end of our county road system."

Clerk Points Out Law

Clerk Eric S. Denyes pointed out that by the terms of county road rates a municipality must not be "remotely" served by a county road.

The village of Bancroft had been granted relief from county road rates because of it not being served by a county road, it was pointed out.

Council took no immediate action on notification from the provincial-council a cost of living bonus for 1953 and the circulation to be sent to jail employees. At the present time the county is paying a $25 per month cost-of-living bonus. The matter was laid over to the January session.

The report of the agricultural committee was read. The following been forwarded by Oliver Dalrymple, agricultural representative for the district. Mr. Dalrymple reviewed the junior extension work carried on during 1952 the year by the 4-H Clubs and the junior farmer clubs. The county had attended the Royal Winter Fair, while one of its members, Ted Burnside had shown the Hereford steer. Ross Foster, a junior farmer club recognition night would be held at Bridge on January 16th, when trophies and prizes awarded for the year's work would be presented.

No Action Taken

No action was taken on an Essex county resolution asking that the provincial government be approached to increase its contribution to the county to an amount of $5 per capita.

Councillors took a rather dim view of the resolution with Warden Gillis noting it would mean more taxes which would principally to the larger centres of population.

"It would mean five dollars for every person in the province and the money would have to be raised somewhere," pointed out Reeve Tryon, who said "Let's be fair" by the fact that the province would be paying. I feel we are paying too much for social services, but I'm not sure this $5 per capita is the answer."

Leave It Alone Claim

Reeve Earl Sager of Madoc said the large centres of population already had the benefit of industrial taxes. "Leave it as it is," he urged.

Considerable discussion was heard on a resolution from Huron county asking to have the provincial government proclaim Remembrance Day as a statutory holiday. Councillors were generally of the opinion that Remembrance Day should be more fittingly observed, but Clerk Denyes pointed out that Nov. 11 was already a statutory holiday set by the Dominion government it remained only for the local municipalities to proclaim the day as such.

Warden Gillis noted that Nov. 11 saw a new holiday set at the ceremony at the Belleville Cenotaph. "More fitting observance of the day would be a source of satisfaction to parents and others, who had lost loved ones in the two world wars," he said.

Concurred in Resolution

Reeve Vincent Lynch said it was strange that schools were given a holiday on Remembrance Day ceremonies, while Reeve Tracey Adams said very few school children know what the holiday was all about.

Reeve Jack Kincaid of Madoc village said program for Remembrance Day was mostly a matter of local responsibility. Banks and government offices observed the day but there seemed to be no uniformity of action by business and industrial factions.

Reeve Lynch could not understand that other statutory holidays were accepted as such while Remembrance Day was not. Stores closed, and others stopped business only for 15 minutes.

Council concurred in the Huron county resolution.

Council also concurred in a Waterloo county resolution asking that maintenance of county agents be assumed immediately when an urban municipality annexed portions of an adjoining rural area. That liabilities as well as assets should be assumed immediately seemed to be the feeling.

No Action Taken

No action was taken on an Ontario county resolution asking for increased road grants on roads where traffic was principally provincial and not local.

Concurrence was given to a Peel county resolution calling for an investigation dealing with cost increases to packing house employees. It was pointed out that in such cases prices in the producer line invariably reduced rather than passed the added cost on to the consumer as is normally the case.

Council also concurred with a resolution from the Ontario Agricultural association calling for aid for food surpluses to be made available to needy countries. The resolution also asked that the floor price of pork be maintained at $25 a cwt.

Letter From Mayor Haig

A communication from Belleville's Mayor A. M. Haig expressing appreciation for the county council gesture or offering a grant on the basis of $1,000 per bed for a new wing at Belleville General Hospital. There was considerable discussion on the matter but no action was taken as it was felt the city was making no specific request at this time. Reeve Jack Kincaid as chairman of the county home board of management presented the county home report. The report showed there were 180 patients in the home at the present time, 96 male and 84 females. Of these 120 came from the county and 30 were from the city. He noted that the home expected was now reached four-page patient load while the infirmary was filled.

There was considerable discussion on whether "paying" patients should be accepted at the home as the intention of the welfare department was to accommodate needy patients only.

Should Accept Claim

The consensus of members seemed to be that as long as accommodation was available and the staff was able to look after them, acceptance of so-called "paying" patients was all right. However there was a feeling that the rate for such patients should be more than the actual cost for the county.

One councillor said "paying" patients should be taken in only as "out-patients" and that they should receive something for nothing.

Warden Gillis noted that two former members of county council—James Wickie of Sidney township and former warden of the county, and Joseph Davis of Monteagle and Herschel—had died during the year. Both men had been outstanding councillors and their good judgment had been valuable to the county council.

Deceased also included Mrs. Gillis' mother, Mrs. Annie Sager, sympathy of council members to the bereaved families.

FIND STOLEN CHEQUES

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP)—Half a million dollars in non-cashable cheques stolen from a railway express truck were found Tuesday by two young girls while playing in a backyard. The cheques in three canvas money bags were discovered by Geraldine and Beverley Nadeau. They were taken immediately to the locked truck while its driver was having a cup of coffee in a diner.

CZECH MINISTER OUSTED

VIENNA (AP)—Czechoslovak's foreign trade minister, Dr. Antonin Gregor, has been relieved of his post by President Klement Gottwald, Radio Prague announced Tuesday night. No reason was given. Vice of Gregor's deputies, Rudolf Margolius, was sentenced last spring with 13 other former Czech Communist leaders to hang as anti-Moscow conspirators.

Better Advertising Selling Job of Cheddar Cheese Needed Cheese Makers Told at Meeting

The finger-tip grasp that representatives of rural ridings in parliament have held in the past is becoming increasingly remote, M.P. for Prince Edward—Lennox told the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association Tuesday. The association is conducting its 55th anniversary session in Belleville for two days at the Quinte Hotel.

"The farm-and-power representatives of the Legislature have been deeply concerned with the present position of the cheese industry," he said, as he addressed yesterday's afternoon session. "A great deal of Eastern and Central Ontario farmland is grazing land. If dairying—and its offshoot—cheese making, are not made profitable a great many of our people are going to turn to other pursuits."

"Since only about one-third of the legislature is composed of predominantly farming representatives," he said, he felt that insufficient understanding had been given to the cheese manufacturing problems.

"When war comes along," he said, "no one thinks about it, but one, do not believe that the British market is lost to us. I think we have now to supply Britain with cheaper cheese, with government help, to find her own market."

"Farmers cannot exist," he concluded, "if the price of their products does not hold good. Among these products is cheese."

Need More Advertising

Canada's failure to do an adequate advertising and selling job of its cheddar cheese was one of the gravest mistakes of the industry D. M. Beattie, of Ottawa, dairy director of marketing services, declared.

"We mustn't be doing a very good selling deal," he said. "The only effective advertising is to take the show to the people. Unfortunately, in cheese advertising, a lobster is the only animal that has to be in the packaging of cheese."

Turning from the decrease in the revenue of the industry, Mr. Beattie urged cheese makers to take all precautions to keep the Canadian product at a high standard. "Cracked and grubby stuff is the first rejected in Britain," he said.

Christ Church Christmas Bazaar Vividly Picturesque, Successful

A great, big Christmas tree emblazoned with myriads of coloured globes, frosty with silver spiderweb, entwined with gleaming ropes of silver, and hung with dazzling silver icicles, was the spacious, yellow drawing room of the Bleecker Street home of Christ Church rectory, on Friday afternoon, when the annual Christmas bazaar, afternoon tea. Add to this the gaily decorated booths in their Christmas red and green garlands, which encircled the room; the tall pillars entwined with red and green spirals, and one of the loveliest of Christmas pictures is projected before the mind's eye.

Into this scene of festivity the throngs of shoppers were ushered by the receptionists, Mrs. E. Hickey and Mrs. C. Colt. Mrs. D. Stewart and Mrs. E. Ingram, of the W.A., looked after the fancy work, and Mrs. F. Welch, of St. George's Guild.

Mr. S. Galpin, assisted by Mrs. Wm. Harrington, had charge of the afternoon tea, while Mrs. L. Donnelly, Mrs. Ernest Ward, Mrs. W. Gander, Mrs. Simmons and Mrs. T. Dorey were in charge of the tickets at the door.

Rose Presented

At 2.30 p.m., the bazaar was officially opened by Ven. Archdeacon J. B. Creeggan, rector of the church, who expressed appreciation to the ladies for the fine work which showed the great amount of work that had been done by all; but especially by the convener, Mrs. H. B. Button, to whom he appropriately presented a lovely pink roses were presented.

Then, amid much fun and merriment, was gay with toys of all kinds, plastic and homemade; a delightful brown teddy bear; Christmas stockings, soldier hats, rag boat, aeroplane and train, doll carriage, red sleigh, story books and comic books, purses, a nursery and doctor's kit; and topping all this a realistic red brick chimney with Santa Claus himself half way down in it, wearing a most quizzical expression which made one wonder, if, perchance, he might just be stuck there.

Nearby in the corner, a flock of white reindeer and snowmen were seen to be erecting themselves under a pretty evergreen tree, which was bedecked with many coloured ornaments. In charge were Mrs. J. Cooke, assisted by Mrs. Gordon S. Fuzzen, W. Lancaster, Clair Hayes, C. Portlock and A. Cooper.

Dolls' Booths

The Dolls' Booth, convened by Mrs. A. Bongard, assisted by Mrs. Alexander W. Edwards, J. Spencer, J. Hibbard, J. Fleming, and W. McLaughlin, was a veritable fairy paradise for here was to be gotten with a lovely pink bassinette complete with pink satin coverlet as a valance and lined throughout with pink; complete with matching pillow and mattress of flaffette, cotton undies edged with embroidery.

Little dresses of all colors and materials; little cloaky with hoods and fancy sacques in blue; bonnets, crib quilts in pink and blue; bonnets and caps in pink and white; a walking doll dressed in blue figured dimity with matching hat, and her bridesmaid in blue in mauve and one in yellow, lovely as dreams with their matching hats, and tiny bouquets of flowers; cowboy dolls, complete with leather chaps; cute rag dolls with brown slacks; and then the darky dolls in their gay skirts, one needing only the long slices of red watermelon to complete the picture; lined and enamelled baskets making the prettiest of dolls' beds, one in blue and one in pink, and stocking dolls in both.

The parcel post office was soon well out of its tempting package which kept the postmistress, Mrs. Leonard Mason, busy sorting and delivering.

Housewife's Dream

The apron booth with its creation of red enlivened with evergreens and accented by silver Christmas bells, was the answer to the housewife's dream, for here were aprons to meet every requirement from the busy day ones to the afternoon variety, and all of pretty materials, and in many styles. One outstanding heavy duty apron was also quite pretty made from gingham in block design of mauve and white; green and white and blue; floral backgrounds predominated; white Swiss muslin with blue dot and trimmed with blue ric-rac braid; gypsy-like aprons in black with gay borders of the rainbow colors; broadcloth aprons and many of all sizes and one of this booth was a large autographed quilt in yellow which would be a prize for. Convening this booth was Mrs. W. C. Pepper, assisted by the ladies of St. George Guild.

The candy booth, convened by Mrs. W. Dawson, Mrs. W. Adams, Miss A. Adams, as candies; was centred by a tiny Christmas tree, around which were clustered boxes, red cups, cellophane boxes filled to overflowing with delicious confections and pink; chocolate nuts-topped; stuffed dates; divinity, fudge and many other kinds, all delectable and mouth-watering.

Delectable Fare

The Home-cooking booth was furnished in red, and centred by a glistening Christmas tree tinkling with bells.

Here, the convener, Mrs. G. Wright, assisted by Mrs. H. Thompson, Mrs. A. Wonnacott, Mrs. C. Ling, Mrs. E. Sherry and Mrs. W. Kempston, were the conveyors of the delectable apple, pumpkin, mince, fruit pies; raspberry and fudge chocolate cakes with soft chocolate icing; cup cakes, topped with date of pale green icing and centred by a whole nut meat; fragrant buns; one of the home-cooking school cakes with its ring of icing centred with cherries; and gay cakes; date loaves; lemon tarts; date squares, and cocoanut chews; and something remembered from childhood days, the delicious, tender caraway seed cookies, looking just the same and just as tempting.

The pantry shelf, was replete with everything a pantry should have; fresh eggs, canned vegetables of all kinds; jams and jellies, conserves; pickles from Mother's of honey and cake mix and Prem in tins, and many another staple so badly needed when unexpected company arrives. These "friends in need" were supervised by Mrs. W. Ashton, convener; assisted by Mrs. F. Cook, Mrs. E. Waterhouse, Mrs. H. Pitt, Miss Florence Ayling and a cute little Santa Claus with a red pack filled with other delightful articles.

Christmas Gifts

The linens and handkerchief booth was the answer to a Christmas puzzle, for here were fancy handkerchiefs edged with vast-colored crocheted edgings, just the gift for enclosure in a pretty card; dish cloths and bordered table runners; chair seats; initialled towels; aprons in dimity, and one lovely apron with a pocket in front, and one in straw and pockets; a cargo of lid lifters; a lovely white basket in crochet; its lining of pink satin with wide pink satin ribbon; knit sweaters in star pattern; guest towels; embroidered table cloths; piece in ecru linen edged with floral crocheted lace; crocheted edged pillow slips; doilies, and fluffy umbrellas fashioned from handkerchiefs. In charge or these were Mrs. Mark Vanner, and Mrs. Charles Hayes, Mrs. Chapman, assisted by Mrs. D. Row, Mrs. E. Vanner, and Mrs. R. Bartlett.

The children's booth was most outstanding with its excellent assortment of doll cradle, bootees, bibs, socks; pink sweaters, little sweaters and sets of jackets; bonnets and matching hood and mitts; tams; shirts in square checks or blocks of green and black; overalls; and humpty-dumpty sweaters. This booth was convenored by Miss Florence Fitzgerald assisted by Meadames S. Wade, F. Sherry, D. Hemmick, G. Brown, Miss B. Thomas and Miss E. Fitzgerald.

Knitting Jewellery

The jewellery table drew many interested customers with its enticing array of earrings in all designs and of gold, silver and pearl; necklaces in jade color; silver slave bracelets; circlet of pearls; floral-designed gold compact; bracelets; handmade leather change purses; and rhinestone necklaces. All in charge or Mrs. R. Botham, Mrs. G. Dimont and Mrs. W. Page.

The novelty booth, convened by Mrs. W. Day, and Mrs. A. W. Gordon, assisted by Mrs. L. Vaughan, Mrs. J. Noakes, Mrs St. Orne and Mrs. G. Fuzzen, had a generous assortment of what-have-you, from a basket of pot-holders; every-day pot holders; crochet dish cloths; chicken hot dish holders; satin pads and green cushion; pillow cases; shivered pine cones for decorating; dresser mats; purses purses in black-beaded; handbeaded figurines; dusting mitts in yellow string; cute little black squirrel teapot handle holders; knitting bags; shopping bags in black felt with flowers in color; little slippers in felt to a lovely blue; and a shopping bag in back felt with huge red poppy splashed across one side.

The tea room, with its window decorations of evergreens and candles; its little tables each with each with its white cloth, and unique centrepiece consisting of a red and Santa Claus surrounded by glistening globes and sprays of pine; or riding in a sleigh; while others again were centered with a tubby fat candle in green or white, or red, and still others had globes with tiny angels around whom baby's breath rioted, was most attractive.

Unique, Lovely Centrepiece

The tea table itself was lovely with its white damask linen cloth, and its unique centrepiece consisting of two silver cornucopias filled with pinecones and sprays of pine; or riding in a sleigh; while others again were centered with a tubby fat candle in green or white, or red, and still others had globes with tiny angels around whom baby's breath rioted, was most attractive.

The decorating committee looked after Meadames A. Halbert, L. Smith, D. Rosevear, J. Taylor, T. Saunders, W. Taylor and F. Lee, convener.

During the serving of the tea, soft organ music was provided by the church organist, Mr. Wilbert. The tea was sponsored by the Contact Club with Mrs. Florence Lepper as convener and Mrs. Dale Rosevear as co-convener.

Mrs. L. Baker was in charge of publicity and Mrs. C. Bleecker of decoration.

Appreciative thanks are tendered the convener in general, Mrs. M. B. Button; and to co-conveners of the tea, Mrs. J. Lennon and Mrs. D. Rosevear, and to all who gave of their time and talents to make this Christmas bazaar so outstandingly lovely and successful.

Harmony Studio Club Holds Promotion Night

Last evening the Harmony Studio Club met at the home of Mrs. A. E. Cornish, Bleecker Avenue, taking the form of a "Passing Night" when those who were being promoted displayed their harpsicordian skill.

The first portion of the program consisted of those beginner who were promoted to grade 1, with the following taking part: Jeannette Morton, "Love Is a Song" and "Singing Gally," Marilyn Huntley, "Summer Frolics," and "London Bridge"; Patricia Children, "The Busy Bee," and "Fussy Cat".

Grade 2

From grade 2 to grade 3: Sharon MacDonald, "Pretty Polly Oliver" by Dr. William, and "Romance," by Haydn and study 4; Lois Bailey, "Chorale," by Bach, "Scherzo," by Ranson, also study No. 5; Lana Lockyer, "The Yellow Rose," by Weiss, Lachlan, "Intrata," by Bach, and study 1.

Other selections were rendered by the following more advanced pupils: Gordon Hall, piano duet solo, "Two Folk Songs," by Schumann Carroll Halbert, violin, "Sonatina," by Kuhlaw; Carol Stewart and Mrs. Veley, piano duet, "Les Se Veteis," by Shubert; Miss Grace Veley, vocal appreciation number, "A Concerto."

Following the musical portion, Joan Chamberlain led the group in games, which in turn were followed by refreshments served by Mrs. Donald Leeming of Belleville.

Mr. Bill Fitzgerald thanked the artists for their fine entertainment, and also the women of the three congregations for the refreshments. The successful affair was closed with refreshments, supplied by the three congregations, served by the Ladies Guild of St. John's, Point Anne. Rev. Ivo A. Page, rector of the Parish, was chairman for the evening.

100 Persons Enjoy Social Evening

One hundred persons gathered together in the parish hall on Friday at Point Anne for a social evening sponsored by the three congregations which form the Parish of Shannonville: Holy Trinity, Shannonville; St. John's, Point Anne and St. Margaret's, Belleville.

Pleasing Renditions

The crowd mingled at the beginning of the evening when taking part in a game under the leadership of Mrs. H. M. Putman, of Herchimer Ave. This was followed by community singing, lead by Mr. Alfred Evans, with Mrs. Hazel Lloyd at the piano. The Quintones (Messrs D. Kaye A. Evans, J. Todd and R. L. Brettingham), pleased the gathering with two renditions. This was followed by a reading by Miss J. Redner and a solo by Mrs. G. W. Cortry.

Mrs. A. S. McConnell, rector of St. George's, Tweiion, graciously showed Kodachrome slides on his travels through England, Ireland, Scotland and the continent. Last summer. These pictures were superb and many were the words of commendation by those who saw them.

Welcomed by Wardens

The Quintones entertained the gathering again. There were words of welcome from the three wardens present, Mr. Arthur Long of Shannonville; Mr. Stan Lafferty of Point Anne, and Mr. Donald Leeming of Belleville.

Mr. Bill Fitzgerald thanked the artists for their fine entertainment, and also the women of the

Hair Styling Evolution, Topic At Alpha Lambda

The regular meeting of the Alpa Lambda Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi was held at the home of Mrs. Austin Wales, Bridge Street East, on Monday evening.

After a short business meeting, Mrs. J. Lennon introduced Mrs. John Lennox, who spoke to the group on "Hints to Ease of Hair Styling".

Miss Merle Ray introduced the guest speaker for the evening, Mrs. Anna Ray, of the Brenmore Beauty Salon, who outlined in a very informative and enlightening manner, the evolution of hair styling and discussed individual coiffures.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Robert Boyce, and co-hostess, Mrs. Bruce Miller.

Arts, Crafts Display Interesting Oils

The Arts and Crafts Club of the city had some interesting and colorful oils on view at the McCarthy Theatre, the result of leisure hours, both in summer and in fall.

Among those shown were scenic vistas of undulating country side, with island streams, and fall and colorful, by Goblet, as well as "Gladioli" and "Fruit" by the lovely flowers and fruits.

"The Lobster Cove" and "The Cross of Mistake," by Mrs. Lorraine depicted the artist's love of the sea, with care of detail, as shown by the ship, the rocky coast line, the calm of the sailing vessels hovering the coastal line, with shaded plane, and glowing mists.

Nostalgic Scenes

"Saskatchewan Church," Bellmerville "country store" with its eye-catching sign, "Eskimo Head Dress" were both nostalgic and nostalgic, caught in a fleeting moment. Other sketches by the same artist included "Shadows," showing a leafless tree silhouetted against a clapboard house; "Boat House," highlighted by carmine leaves—rich bit of color; "City Hall," strong piece of painting, and "Sketch Book Study;" "The Maple," a lovely piece of color, rich and lovely; and the "Miniature" series, all by Philippa Faulkner.

"The Basket of Fruit," and "The Birches," by Moult, depicted love of color, and appreciation of nature's home pictures with their detailed interest. Moorman showed a well balanced piece of work, a collection of building, with shaded roofs, and winding road, and distant hillside, pleasing in color content, realistic and true.

Mont Marire

A pretty piece of work was that by Jean Riggs, showing a scene in Mont Marire, Paris, France," entitled "The Portrait Teller," depicting absorbed interest of the poet, the background aid by soft tones of the buildings, with emphasis on the quietness.

Another nice piece of painting was seen in the alcove, "Morning Glow," by Gladys Jones, who was trying a quaint red cottage beside Weller's Bay—a home scene —nestling in the hill, with blue trees and autumn shrubbery, the foreground brownish, autumn grass.

"St. Andrew's Church," "The Wedding" at Christ Church, and "An Island Bridge," by C. P. Sone, all showed a fine and accurate careful execution of the subject, delicate coloring and sensitivity.

Helen Keeler's composite sketch of flowers and fruit, showing pale apples, purplish-red Savoy cabbage, contrasted with the yellow squash, made an interesting bit of color, nicely assembled, and carefully drawn.

A worthwhile and interesting collection of native artists, deserving of commendation.

Special-Purpose Menu

By Mary Moore

Being a carnivorous animal I am a little hard put to follow my own advice of last week and serve vegetable plates very often. But I was goaded into it again by a stifling little cup of ground ham. How was I going to put it to good use with my vegetable-loving sister coming to dinner?

I am reluctant about pushing vegetable plates on you because I believe that meat and plenty of other good protein foods are essential to good health.

A few weeks ago a reader wrote to me saying that her mother firmly was convinced that doctor bills were in reverse ratio to the amount of money spent on good food in their home, so she accumulated a good nutritious food.

If your doctor bills are too high possibly that principle.

Meanwhile here is a vegetable plate calling for a little meat, and a cheese sauce which partially make up for its protein deficiencies. You will notice there are two eggs in the corn pudding, which are all to the good.

VEGETABLE PLATE (hearty)

Corn Pudding
Whole Spanish Onions with Cheese Sauce
Grated Steamed Carrots
Broccoli (or Spinach)
Orange Custard Meringue
Coffee

DIRECTIONS:

CORN PUDDING:

One cup of ham in bottom of buttered baking dish is not necessary but nice, that is what I happened to do this time. One No. 2 can kernel corn, 2 tablespoons each butter and flour, 1 cup mixed cream and liquid from can of corn, 1 chopped green pepper, 1 chopped canned pimento, 2 eggs, yolks and whites separated, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1-4 teaspoon dill. Melt butter, stir in flour, then stir in the cream and corn liquid mixture, until thick. Now stir in the drained corn, chopped pepper and pimento. Stir until it boils gently. Beat yolks and pour part of hot mixture over them, stirring, then turn them into the hot mixture, and cook stirring over boiling water for 2 minutes. Add salt and paprika. Beat whites with salt until stiff and fold into hot mixture. Turn into buttered baking dish, with or without layer of chopped meat in bottom, and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 10 minutes, then increase heat to 350 deg. Fahr. until corn custard is firm. (This dish is especially good with roast beef.)

CHEESE SAUCE

Here is a plain all-purpose cheese sauce, that you can use for cauliflower or any vegetables. It may be made richer or less rich by additional or less cheese. Heat 1 1-2 cups milk. Melt 2 tablespoons butter, stir in 2 tablespoons flour, then the hot milk until thick. Add 1 cup or less of grated cheddar cheese or cubed process cheese, and 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1-4 teaspoon paprika. Place over double boiler until cheese is melted.

ORANGE CUSTARD MERINGUE

Mix together the grated rind of 2 oranges and 1-3 cup white sugar. Pare or peel 6 oranges and separate the sections and remove the thin membrane. Place these sections in bottom of buttered baking dish. Heat 2 cups milk. Beat 3 egg yolks and pour the hot milk over them stirring. Mix the rind-sugar mixture with 2 tablespoons cornstarch and 1-4 teaspoon salt and stir them into the custard and stir over boiling water until thick—about 7 minutes. Cool custard, then pour it slowly over the oranges so you do not disturb them. Top with meringue, made by beating 3 egg whites with 1-3 teaspoon salt until stiff, and slowly beating in 6 tablespoons sugar, and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for about 15 minutes to bake meringue. No longer. Chill 3 or 4 hours. This is a delicious dessert—how will adopt it and use it often for your guest dinners.

I forgot to mention the carrots: Shred them, place in top of double boiler, add 1 tablespoon butter, 1-4 teaspoon salt and steam them over the boiling onions until tender.

Fashion Flashes

SET TO STAR for resort or cruise wear is a handsome ensemble. It consists of a beautifully cut loose, wrappy coat of light blue wool fleece and a halter sheath dress of white wool jersey, the bodice and halter thickly embroidered with turquoise blue beads, crystals, rhinestones and silver bugle beads.

A BOON for the travel-light contingent, as well as for busy women, is the dress with detachable or removable extras. One such is a slim dress of gray flannel flannel with peg-top skirt and rounded neckline into which is tucked a removable bib of tucked linen done in soft cocoa brown. Long cuffs to match may be tucked into the sleeves.

NOVELTIES, handsome and wearable, abound in the new costume jewelry line. Something different is a single-strand necklace of tiny, many-sided nuggets or polished brown wood, each separated by a tiny gold bead.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wants a Fearless Fur Trimming Coat Like Girl

A young man of 23 writes to ask for suggestions on how to go about courting a girl. Not just any girl, of course, but a very special one.

"She's a girl I've been out with just a few times," he says, "and with whom I always had a wonderful time. I have told her my love for her, but she tells me that she isn't in love with me or anybody else, and she says that I shouldn't be in love with her, because she doesn't want me to get hurt. I am very jealous, and it does hurt me to know that she goes out with other fellows."

And then he puts the important question: "Can you tell me how a man wins a girl? I certainly don't seem to be much good at it, even though I have had other girls tell me that they were fond of me."

Over-Hasty

Now what happened here, very likely, was that this young man made the mistake so many overhasty lovers make, and tried to get the girl to say yes to him before giving her any real chance to know him well enough to be able to tell whether she really wanted him or not. His way he has been out with her only a few times—and it's pretty hazardous to rush a girl into an engagement that fast. Wise girls want time to make up their minds—and especially to make sure they know just exactly what kind of man it is who wants to marry them. What the chap of the letter should have done, would have been to map out his campaign and then carry it out for a reasonable length of time before asking the fatal question.

Instead of being upset because this young woman is level-headed enough to want to make haste slowly, as the saying goes, our lad should be very well pleased to find her so poised and sensible. Moreover, he has no right to be hurt because she goes out with other men. She has made it clear to him that she isn't in love with anybody at the moment, which is equivalent to pointing out that she is therefore entitled to date as many men as she chooses. She has, even, been good of him to try to warn him off, in an effort to keep him from being tripped up now and then, to get her on his side and to show the girl he's thoughtful. Such things make his feelings perfectly evident without his saying a word about them until the right moment comes.

Not Show Jealousy

Above all, he shouldn't show jealousy of her other suitors. That gives a girl a bad impression of a man, and makes her wonder if he would be the kind of person whose jealousy would carry over into, say, married life. Let him be sportsmanlike about other men, realizing that they have just the same right as he has to try to win the girl of their choice. Moreover, it not infrequently happens that the man who is smart enough to make no objections to his girl going out with others piques her curiosity and heightens her interest in him and causes her to make an effort to win greater attention from him, which is all to the good.

What our young man should have forgotten about other men in his same position—is that a player in the game of love should ward. The eggs are taken from follow the same rules he'd observe in playing any other fish caught by commercial fishermen, and the young fry will be game: Try as hard as you can to win, but always play fair, and, planted in southern Lake Huron if you lose, take it with the best next spring. possible grace.

PICTON

Grand Master For Ontario East Guest Speaker

PICTON — R. W. Bro. Fred Bateman, Sipling, G.M. of the Loyal Orange Order for Ontario East and Rev. F. C. Beazer, Carrying Place, Grand Chepiain for Ontario East, were guest speakers at the annual banquet of Brother L.O.L. 486 and L.O.B.A. 487. A crowd of 180 enjoyed a delectable chicken dinner at the Presbyterian Church hall with Brother Charles Howard, W. M. of L.O.L. 486 making an able chairman. Silence was observed in memory of departed members. In extending the town's welcome, Mayor H. J. McFarland recalled some Orange celebrations at Rollin and Napanee when he was a boy.

Spoke of Good Work

Grand Master Bateman spoke of the good work being done by Prince Edward lodges and the instituting of 4 new lodge at Bloomfield. He stressed that an Orangeman's first duty is to his church and stressed the importance of the church to the life of the nation. The Order's beliefs are exemplified in the open Bible and the Union Jack, as a religious and patriotic organization dedicated to the defence of the civil liberties of those of Protestant faith and the British connection, he said. Pointing out that the Order has no quarrel with those of other faiths, he stressed their objective "equal rights and special privileges to none."

Lieut. G. Heron, S. A., with his accordion, led in a sing-song. Much applauded musical numbers included violin selections by Bert Ingles, Picton, and Cecil Marthen, Trenton, music by Marion Dunlop and Raymond Dunlop and selections on the bagpipes by C. Marthen.

W.M., L.O.B.A. 487, Mrs. Buchanan extended greetings, Mrs. Grace May, Picton, Grand Lodge officer for Ontario East; Ralph Gibson, Grand Lecturer of the Royal Black Preceptory for Ontario East; Miss V. Rykolt, Senior Preceptress of Crystal Chapter No. 63; Cecil Rykolt, Wor. Preceptor of Royal Black Preceptory; Ed. Rolston, Past County Master; Mrs. E. Rolston, Past Mistress L.O.B.A.; Reeve H. S. Collver; Rev. W. McClean, Past W. M. Nesbitt McGibbon; Phil Dodds, a guest, spoke briefly. Warden C. Hughes was a guest.

Expressed Thanks

Leonard MacDonald, D.M. L.O.L. 486, who with Fred Brooker and Pete Hunt composed the committee in charge of the banquet, expressed thanks to the church ladies and to those who assisted with the program.

Regret was expressed that the Grand Mistress of Ontario East, who visited the L.O.B.A. the previous evening, was unable to attend.

Grand speaker, Rev. Mr. Beazer, spoke on the great contribution the Orange Order has made, and declared that it is increasing in numbers. "If the principles for which the Orange Order stands were more widely known hundreds more would join. We must not judge the Order by the mistakes some members may make. Come into the Order and the cause of Protestantism will advance," he declared.

The Union Jack as the symbol of religious freedom and liberty was upheld by the speaker who referred to the Order's efforts to have it retained as the national flag..

10,000 Are Homeless $10,000,00 0 Damage In Philippines Fire

MANILA (AP) — Damage in a fire which razed seven city blocks of Davao, a large southern port, was estimated Tues. at $10,000,000 —with 10 000 homeless.

Fire fighters dynamited buildings to check Monday's raging fire. No casualties were reported.

FRANKFORD

PRESENTATIONS

FRANKFORD — The Lions Club of Frankford held an executive meeting in the community hall Tuesday evening.

A number of important items of business were dealt with. The planned "Ladies' Night" held each December 1 celebration of charter night will be held on Dec. 15, rather than Dec. 3 as planned.

It is planned to present the $1,000 bill to the winner of the current contest which the Lions Club is conducting, at the Ladies' Night.

Hockey

The hockey situation for the coming season was dealt with in detail, and the committee outlined their plans for the winter. A practice is to be held in Belleville this week, and all persons interested are urged to contact Vince Macauley, Ray Moran, Bay Scott or Adrian Babcock, for details of time.

The Frankford Club regrets the loss of two of their most popular and hardest working members, Messrs. Bob Cage, who has taken up new duties in Newmarket, and Ralph Bell, who has moved to Brighton. Both these Lions were presented with wallets from the Lions Club as parting gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Slingerland spent the week-end in Toronto.

Wednesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Lohnes and Darlene were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith, Mr. Clayton Smith, Mr. Vernon Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Post, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes and Mr. Gene Lohnes.

Rev. and Mrs. R. Black and family, Mr. and Mrs. John N. Reid, of Stockdale, were Tuesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Slingerland.

The members of Frankford United Church Sunday School enjoyed a family night in the Church, Wednesday. Mrs. Frank Rabel entertained by showing moving pictures he had taken last summer at the annual picnic, around the Sunday School itself, and other activities around Frankford. Filmed in beautiful color, the pictures brought many a laugh, and recalled pleasant memories of many. Highlight of the film was the potato roll at the picnic, in which the Men's Bible Class had to roll potatoes along the ground with their noses.

Following the moving pictures, Mr. Sid Martin showed a number of colored "stills" taken by himself, and by Dr. and Mrs. Jack Beach. They too were greatly enjoyed.

Following the entertainment, Rev. W. MacEachern told an interesting story to the children about "Willingness to Work, and Do One's Best."

Mr. Martin spoke on the evangellst convention which he attended in Whitby recently, and states that plans were under way for a special evangellstlcl week at the United Church in January.

Mr. Rabel was warmly thanked for his contribution to the evening. It is hoped that the pictures may be shown again soon, as there are still many who missed them, due to school examinations.

The Frankford Scouts held their regular meeting Friday evening in the Scout club rooms on Mill Street. The evening was spent in learning tenderfoot tests. Cyril and Thorburt Smith completed their Scout Law.

The four patrols worked in their patrol corners. A council fire proved successful, during which time various projects were discussed. The four patrols are to have separate meetings once a week at the club rooms. Monday night, Wolf Patrol; Tuesday night, Eagle; Wednesday night, Beaver, and Thursday night, Fox.

Useful Knots and Lashings

The Scouts were shown how useful knots and lashings can be in a model, in scale of a watch tower, constructed by the Scoutmaster. The Scouts hope to make a full sized tower soon, the completed tower to be between 15 and 20 feet in height.

The Scouts are grateful to Mr. Wilmott Rose, for a log which he presented to the troop. The log has been chewed by beavers and Mrs. Rose found it while deer hunting.

The paper drive is going ahead fairly well, but perhaps not as rapidly as possible due to school examinations. There have been so many calls for paper that the boys just haven't been able to contact everyone. Monday evening, the boys were collecting, and report a most successful night of it.

If the Scouts have not yet called at your house, please contact a Scout as they wish to complete the drive by Saturday.

After four o'clock on Tuesday evening the boys fitrned out well to help load the truck from Glen Miller paper mill. The Scouts are grateful to Miller Brothers to the good price they are giving the boys on the paper, and particularly to Mr. Hugh Miller for making arrangements.

The Scout meeting this week is on Friday night, with Saturday being devoted to disposing of the balance of the paper.

New Beauty For Ceiling Fixtures

. . . and the soft flattering glow of indirect lighting

Here's How It Works

Light is directed upward from ceiling through inside frosted portion of the bulb. Enamelled "built-in shade" on lower portion of bulb softens downward light. Unshaded spot at bottom of bulb adds attractive sparkle. Available in 50 and 100 watt sizes.

GENERAL ELECTRIC

LUMI-BOWL LAMP

The distinctively different shape of G-E Lumi-Bowl Lamps lends modern beauty to ceiling fixtures, old or new. Lighted or unlighted, they banish that "bare bulb look"—give a redecorated touch to living room or dining room, bedroom or hall. You'll find, too, that their mellowed downward light adds new beauty to furnishings and surroundings.

The Lumi-Bowl Lamp is but one example of this Company's constant striving to provide "Better Light For Better Sight." Behind each G-E Lamp you buy are years of scientific leadership, research and development. It pays to ask for G-E Lamps by name . . . they stay brighter, longer.

White Lamp . . . reduces reflected glare . . . softens shadows . . . spreads light evenly over bulb's entire surface.

Rose Lamp . . . to help soothe muscular aches and pains . . . for quick-drying hair, clothes and paint.

Sun Lamp . . . Tans like the sun! Have that "Sun-tan" look the whole year 'round. 60-cycle only.

Green Lamp . . . Removes odor and freshens air in bathrooms, sickrooms and kitchens.

Gardiner Refuses Inquiry Into Oleo Production

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Gardiner Tuesday rejected a proposal that the Canadian government create a royal commission to investigate margarine production and its impact on the dairy industry.

The royal commission would take too long to do its work and would accomplish nothing, Mr. Gardiner told the 16th annual federal-provincial agricultural conference.

He was replying to Alex Mercer of Vancouver, president of the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture, who appealed for some federal action against the import of low-priced vegetable oils, which he said, was threatening to destroy Canada's multi-million-dollar dairy industry.

Soon, he said, there would be nothing but synthetic cream, synthetic butter, and even synthetic milk on the Canadian market. And the entire agricultural industry would suffer from deterioration in dairy production.

Says Previous Could Act

Mr. Gardiner said that the real power to deal with margarine and production now was in the hands of the provinces.

He was surprised that though many provinces had expressed concern with the problem, only two provinces—Prince Edward Island and Quebec—had taken action to ban dairy substitutes.

The minister added that he had tried to take some action to deal with interprovincial and export trade in dairy products in Parliament last year "and got only 'shucks' for his efforts."

He had attempted to insert in the federal Dairy Products Act a regulation under which the federal government would have control over this trade and so strong was opposition that he was finally forced to withdraw the section.

"We ought to discuss the matter fully if we want to get the matter back into the statutes again," he said, and added he had he did so hoped to reinsert the regulation "It would have to have a lot more support from the agricultural industry than he got the last time."

Will Continue Support

Turning to other problems discussed at the two-day conference, Mr. Gardiner said the Canadian government plans to continue a support price for hogs even after the United States lifts its embargo against Canadian livestock and meats next March.

But he gave no encouragement to appeals that the government drop its plan to reduce the hog floor by three cents a pound on Jan. 1.

This would cut the support price to 23 cents a pound, basis Montreal and Toronto, and confugence delegates said the price was so low that many producers would be forced out of business.

Earlier, a federal tobacco expert said Britain plans a drastic reduction in imports of Canadian tobacco in 1963 and rigid controls may have to be exercised to reduce Canada's crop next spring unless new markets can be found.

DIES IN CHAIR

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP)—Alias Paris, 60-year-old Negro father of 13 children, died Tuesday in the electric chair for the slaying of a state wildlife biologist who had caught him hunting on a game preserve.

OTTAWA LAWYER HEADS NATIONAL LIBERAL PARTY

A lawyer, a father of four, and a man of many other activities besides, has undertaken one more responsibility, the tremendous one of heading the National Liberal Federation. At 32, Duncan MacTavish of Ottawa, is looking forward to his task with enthusiasm. A young friend of the late statesman and Liberal, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. MacTavish began his political activities in the 1920's, helping in the election campaigns of among others, Mackenzie King, and who, in 1939, became the first president of the 30th Century Liberal Association, a national body of young Liberals. Already a busy man, not only with his extensive law practice, but with numerous other positions he fills, Mr. MacTavish, seen above with his son, Duncan, will be busier still in future, as the federation post calls for him to travel from coast-to-coast to organize the party for the coming election some time next year. (Central Press Canadian).

Commercial Use Of Atomic Energy Within 5 Years

—Howe

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is preparing for commercial use of atomic energy in Canada within the next five years, says Trade Minister Howe.

He said in an interview Tuesday that atomic power will be available in that time and that government officials already are considering how best to provide outlets for its services to the public.

The cabinet's atomic expert said the atom will be providing power in much the same way and for the same purposes as electricity. Central power plants would generate it.

A year ago a special crown company, Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., was established to direct Canada's effort in this field and to run the Chalk River project. It was stated then that the reason for the move was that the prospects for use of this energy have brightened considerably and that it should be available well within 10 years.

FIRST ISSUE OF STAMPS TO BEAR SIGNATURE OF QUEEN ELIZABETH II

Two postage stamps of the new reign of Queen Elizabeth II, are now on sale at most post offices in the United Kingdom and Great Britain. The 2½ penny stamp (top) shows the Queen's head surrounded by an ornamental oval. It is printed in magenta-red. The 1½ penny stamp, bottom, which will be green, floral emblems encircle the head. They embody heraldic representations of the rose of England, the thistle of Scotland, the daffodil of Wales and the shamrock of Northern Ireland.

Acquitted on Charge

GODERICH (CP)—A jury acquitted Gordon A. Bryce of Wingham on a charge of perjury, but recommended that he attend church regularly for one year.

The verdict and the rider were written by the jury Tuesday after it had obtained permission to give its decision in writing. The judge said it was unusual, except in murder cases, but agreed to the request.

The perjury charge arose as a result of Bryce's testimony at the hearing of Henry Galbraith, charged under the Canada Temperance Act. Galbraith, who lives near Wingham, was convicted.

NAMED CANDIDATE

PORT ELGIN (CP) — Andrew E. Robinson, Kincardine insurance agent and former M.P., was the choice of Bruce Progressive Conservatives as candidate in the forthcoming federal election. He was chosen on the first ballot over Mayor J. Ralph Hunter of Wiarton by 400 delegates at Tuesday's convention.

Hoodlums Used In Election Says Duplessis

QUEBEC (CP)—Charges that gangs of hoodlums and gangsters were used in the last Quebec general election were made in the legislative assembly.

The House Tuesday night discussed a bill providing new formalities for the swearing-in of special constables by mayors.

Existing regulations provide that a mayor, with authority of the council and at a salary fixed by it, may affix special constables to deal with emergencies. The new bill requires the mayor to have any special constables sworn in by judges of the court of sessions, district magistrates, prudhommes or the superior court or peace clerk.

The bill says any special constable appointed must not have a criminal record. On a vote, the bill was adopted in principle 53-18. Final reading of the measure was subjected.

Liberal opposition speakers charged the bill was aimed directly at Mayor J. A. Mongrain of Three Rivers, Liberal candidate against Premier Duplessis in Quebec's election July 16 last.

Mr. Duplessis denied this. He said the bill was designed to regulate powers of mayors in cities and towns in the province.

It was a tumultuous sitting.

Liberal legislative members were ordered to withdraw words to the effect the new bill was designed to help the government win elections.

Mr. Duplessis charged Mayor Mongrain hired 100 special constables for election day duty in Three Rivers. He said about half of these were never sworn in.

They committed "banditry of the worst sort" and some of them stood around polls "cursing" in the presence of nuns who were voting.

Mr. Duplessis said most of the constables hired were either "gangsters" or people "with little to recommend them."

Will Ask Recount

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Alderman William C. Riggs, defeated by seven votes in the board of control election, says he does, nit want city council to apply for a recount but may take such action himself.

Mr. Riggs, who resigned from council to seek one of the two open seats on board of control, said Tuesday night he is "looking into the situation" and hopes to petition for a recount.

ATTACKS ON WOMEN

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police are alarmed at the growing number of night attacks on women on Vancouver streets. At least 29 cases of rape, molestings or attempted attacks have been reported during the last 14 days. Police Chief Walter Mulligan warned women to stay off the streets at night unless escorted.

BELIEVED HEAD OF TERRORIST CAMPAIGN IN SOUTH AFRICA

Jomo Kenyatta, accused by the British leader of the Mau Mau terrorist organization in Kenya colony, South Africa, is shown in Kapenguria, where he was brought to be arraigned. Armed with pledges to drive the white man from their land, terrorists have murdered scores of both whites and blacks and damaged property and equipment worth thousands of dollars. — (Central Press Canadian.)

Little Benny's Note Book

Mary Watkins came out of her house even more beery looking than ever in her new red hat to match her new red coat, and I walked over to talk to her, saying, G, you sure look swell.

Oh, dont talk so funny, Mary Watkins said starting to giggel, and I said, Well, its true.

Goodness you sound as if I was the most wonderful looking girl ever born in the world, she said, and I said, Well, maybe you are.

Being a compliment, and she said, Dont talk silly, how can anybody be perfect without any faults?

I bet you are the only one, I said, and Mary Watkins said, Oh dont watch talk, there must be at least one little tiny thing wrong with me.

No sir, nothing, I said, and she said, Oh, there must be, there's no one being as purfect.

Maybe not, but there's some use looking like one, I said.

Making her look kind of a little dissppointed, and I quick said, But anyways, even if you did have 3 or 3 leak freckels on your nose, it wouldn't keep you fromb looking just as swell.

Why Benny Futh, I know what you mean, you mean my face is a mass of freckels, Mary Watkins said, and I said, Hay, I do not, I did not, I mean you're crazy.

Oh, now, you're making it werse by saying I'm crazy, I was never so insulted in my life and I'm going rite in the house, she said.

Which she quick did, and I chawt, Aw heck, gosh shang the chuck, aw cranberries.

Proving by the time you learn all about girls, you will probably be too old for it to do you any good.

BUS PLUNGES INTO LAKE

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — Two women were killed and nine other passengers were injured Tuesday when an Alberta-bound bus left a highway slicked with snow and somersailed into Kootenay Lake. The Greyhound bus sank eight feet from the shoreline after turning over three times in a 100-foot plunge. Killed were Mrs. F. A. Whitfield of Nelson and an unidentified woman believed to have boarded the bus at Vancouver.

SENATOR HAIG

John Simmitt, Liberal member for the Manitoba constituency of Springfield, criticized the non-operating rail unions for not accepting a 16-cent-an-hour pay increase recommended by a federal conciliation board in the present wage dispute. The railways have accepted the recommendation.

Mr. Sinnott said he intends to introduce a private bill asking the government to ban labor strikes for a two-year period. With both the cost of living and farm prices dropping, it was time labor unions realized "they have to be honest and fair with the rest of the country."

Dr. Pierre Gauthier (L—Portneuf) said the Progressive Conservatives have one policy for Quebec and one for other parts of the country. He said he saw George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, applaud speakers in Quebec province who opposed immigration, favored a national flag without the union jack and who demanded withdrawal of Canadian troops from Europe.

Mr. Drew promptly denied the charges. There was not "a word of truth" in them, he said.

Leon Balcer (PC-Trois Rivieres) said if the tendency toward centralization of government were not checked Quebec might cease to be a legislative power within 10 or 15 years. The Liberals were trying to make Mr. Drew a scapegoat in Quebec.

Jean Lesage, parliamentary assistant to External Affairs Minister Pearson, answered Mr. Balcer. He said the sudden Progressive Conservative interest in Quebec "comes more from a lust for power than from the heart." He denied the federal government has invaded provincial fax fields, except for agreement. Quebec, which had do agreement, could levy any taxes it wished.

Michael Starr (PC-Ontario), former mayor of Oshawa, said the federal government is grabbing most of the taxation dollar. There should be a new tax deal between the federal, provincial and municipal authorities. Municipalities were particularly hard pressed for funds.

George T. Fulford (L—Leeds), said that with Canadian farm prices as they are, he doubted whether farmers would be satisfied to rely on contracts with the United Kingdom. There should be a United Kingdom market but this was no time to try to get it when Britain was buying cheaper elsewhere.

Canadian farm prices in many lines had gone beyond those Britain was paying other countries and "it certainly wouldn't be to Canada's advantage at this time to try to insert her way into the British market."

Howard Green (PC—Vancouver-Quadra), accused the government of "smugness" about Commonwealth trade. Something would have to be done to save such industries as salmon, lumber and apples on the Pacific coast. He said Trade Minister Howe should have gone to the Commonwealth conference in London. He hoped that meeting would come up with some solution.

Carl Nickle (PC—Calgary West), an Alberta oil expert, gave the house a stirring picture on western oil development. He believed Canada would be self-sufficient in oil production within three years.

FINAL VOTE FIGURE

TORONTO (CP) —Completa returns Tuesday showed Mayor Allan Lamport returned for a second consecutive term with 81,448 votes compared with 41,323 votes for challenger Nathan Phillips in Monday's civic election.

India's Korea Plan Heads For UN Approval in Assembly

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—India's plan for bringing peace to Korea heads the final United Nations approval today by the full General Assembly. Once approved it will be sent on for an already-promised rejection by the Chinese and North Korean Reds.

The assembly at its plenary session this afternoon was expected to give the Indian resolution the same overwhelming endorsement it received Monday over bitter Soviet-bloc opposition in the political committee.

The committee, exhausted by more than a month of heated argument on Korea, brought 38 Western and neutral countries together in a solid bloc to approve India's own promise prisoner-of-war plan over five negative Soviet-bloc votes and an abstention by Nationalist China.

Delegates expected the vote to be identical in the assembly following a brief debate. Further fireworks were not expected, since the assembly action is merely a formality and speakers usually are required to limit their arguments to from five to seven minutes.

The amended Indian resolution calls for a four-power commission and a fifth-power umpire to handle the repatriation of all prisoners on the Western principle that they will not be forced to return home if they don't want to, and provides for the UN to take over all those who remain behind if their fate hasn't been settled in four months.

Once passed, U. NN. President, L. B. Pearson of Canada sends it to the Red Chinese and North Korean commanders and urges them to accept it as quickly as possible so an armistice can be effected. Even the author of the plan, V. K. Krishna Menon, expressed doubt that the Reds would accept it, but he said India would continue to keep in contact with Peiping in an effort to find a way to bring the warring East and West together in an agreement.

There was some speculation that Pearson might ask the Indians to transmit the UN resolution through their envoy in Peiping. But some delegates did not think this would be necessary and said the resolution probably would be sent directly to Peiping and Pyongyang by cable.

Despite the gloomy prospects for any success, the Western allies said the plan still must be put formally in the Reds. They reason that since only the Communist members oppose the plan the blame for its failure will fall squarely on Russia and her allies.

Federal Spending Criticized In Radio Speeches

OTTAWA.-(CP)—Federal government spending was criticized by Progressive Conservative members of Parliament in radio speeches.

J. A. MacLean (Queens), Douglas Harkness (Calgary East) and C. M. Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre) spoke in addresses prepared for delivery Tuesday night in the CBC's political free-time series.

Mr. MacLean said the government is taking from Canadians "a great deal more of our money than they need." Since 1947, Canadians had been over-taxed at the rate of $1,000,000 a day.

Mr. Harkness, one of his party's military critics, said he would not criticize large expenditures for defence if the money were being spent "without waste and extravagance." But Liberal policies had made it difficult to produce the defence force Canada should have.

Mr. Churchill said the Liberal "record of faulty administration and of disregard for the people stems from the fact that a party long in power tends to become complacent, arbitrary and autocratic."

BRIDGE STILL USEFUL

Forest Fire Losses in Ont. Lowest in Years

TORONTO (CP)—Forest fire losses in Ontario this year were a record low for burned over areas and timber damage.

Figures released by the lands and forest department show a total of 1,047 fires reported, 365 below the average for the last 20 years. The burned over-area of 13,036 acres is 230,000 acres below average. These figures do not include bush and range fires in southern Ontario unprotected by the Forest Fire Prevention Act.

NIGHT AT ULAN

Ulan Bator must be very lovely in daytime. It's a white city and a bird's eye view or it would make you think you were looking at an African city with its shining white buildings. Perhaps the white protects the buildings from the heat of the summer sun. In any case it made me think of the strange resemblance between the habits of men separated by the seas and by continents and of man's marvellous adaptability to his surroundings.

No visit to Mongolia would be complete without a look at a yourte. The yourte is the Mongol's home. It's a tent, made of a felt material which the nomad shepherds of the steppes move each time the flock moves to another pasture.

The yourte is built like an Eskimo igloo. It's shaped exactly the same but it is much larger. In the suburbs of Ulan Bator, the yourtes are even equipped with electricity and running water. They are surprisingly well furnished and in very good taste. The floor is covered with rich carpets, the work of Mongol women. Lining the wall are couches which serve as seats and beds. The well-to-do yourtes even had a library. But all the same, a yourte is a yourte.

Outer Mongolia is suffering the usual fate of a small nation squeezed in between two powerful neighbors. While China was being destroyed by civil war, Outer Mongolia remained peacefully under the wing of the neighboring Soviet Union. It is officially a communist republic but it is doubtful if Marxist doctrines have made a very deep impression on a population which has been nomadic for 19 generations.

Rivalry Exists

But since Mao Tse-tung came to power, China seems to have remembered that Mongolia was for many years one of the provinces of the Middle Empire. And although things are outwardly calm, you feel that in Mongolia there is a certain amount of lockeying between Moscow and Peking. Undeniably, Mongolia's prime minister is never at home. He spends his time travelling between Moscow and Peking. He was in Moscow in September while the Chinese premier Chou En-lai was negotiating for the return to his country of the Manchurian railway and Port Arthur. And he didn't even have time to stop in Ulan Bator before rushing from Moscow to Peking where he spent several weeks. Peking, of course, is generally increasing the number of economic and cultural missions of Ulan Bator.

These signs point to the fact that China has not given up hope for regaining her hold over Outer Mongolia and elimination Russian influence in the area.

This same sort of thing is happening in all the outlying provinces of China. Mao-tse-tung has occupied Tibet and Sinkiang in order to weaken and eliminate Russian influence there. The Chinese government also is speeding construction of the central Chinese railroad for the same reason. This railroad, built over the old silk caravan route, will carry freight from Tibet and Sinkiang to Shanghai.

Ulan Mator is a capital which is probably known to less than a hundred Canadians. But they will certainly be so if it is the next 10 or 20 years. For it is not impossible that Russo-Chinese rivalry may break out again and this part of the world will be in the thick of things.

Large Contingents from Overseas Will Join in Coronation Procession

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Large contingents from the overseas Commonwealth "jobs regular and auxiliary forces in the United Kingdom to form a procession of nearly two miles preceding the Queen when she drives through the streets of London after the Coronation next June 2.

Final decision on the precise make-up of the colorful parade will not be reached for some time yet. The details are being worked out by an inter-service committee in co-operation with the Earl Marshal the Duke of Norfolk and the College of Heralds.

Civilians To Be Represented

Preliminary plans, however, call for representatives from all three branches of the regular services, detachments from the territorial forces, the Home Guard, civil defence units and women's services.

Prime Minister Churchill has also given assurance that consideration will be given the suggestion that the country's civilian population be represented in the marchpast. At present the only civilians provided for are members of the Royal Family, representatives of Commonwealth countries and foreign states.

The procession will extend from Westminster Abbey to Stanhope Gate in Hyde Park before moving off along the 5½-mile route. It will be considerably longer than the procession following the coronation of the late George VI in May, 1937. Then it took nearly 50 minutes for the marchers to pass any given point.

Meanwhile, grandstands are being made in setting up the spectator stands lining the route ... ing from Admiralty Arch at Trafalgar Square to Buckingham Palace.

London County Council also is proceeding with its floodlighting and decoration plans. Expenditure of approximately $40,000 has already been approved for this phase of the lighting scheme which includes proposals for permanent illuminations.

Fixed Light "Shot Tower"

The "Shot Tower," on the south bank of the Thames is to be floodlit from the top while a brilliant pattern of lighting will be designed for the former site of the Festival of Britain, illuminated water lilies will float along the banks of the river.

Plans still in the developing stage provide for a chain of colored lamps between the light standards on both sides of Westminster and Waterloo bridges as well as along the parapets linking the two bridges on either bank of the river.

Massive County Council Hall and Cleopatra's Needle, the 3,500-year-old Egyptian obelisk on Victoria embankment, will be floodlit. And plans are being worked out for the illumination of groups of trees and individual flower beds in the embankment gardens.

Jewels Worth Millions For Indian Bride

MADRAS, India (AP) — The second son of the fabulously wealthy Nizam of Hyderbad soon will marry for the second time, close associates of the Indian prince disclosed Tuesday.

The son is Prince Muazzam Jah. His bride-to-be is the daughter of a Hyderabad nobleman. She will receive several million dollars worth of gold and jewels as gifts.

Muazzam Jah recently divorced Turkish Princess Niloufer whom he married in Nice, France, in 1931. He paid her a lump sum of 1,000,000 rupees ($210,500).

FIVE ROSES
ALL-PURPOSE
FLOUR

"One of the many things I owe mother is the teaching she gave me in her own kitchen when I was growing up. She taught me how to bake cakes, pies, cookies and bread with FIVE ROSES ALL PURPOSE FLOUR...taught me so well that I never have a failure in my own home. Both our families are FIVE ROSES families."

MRS. JAMES MAY,
Box 276, Lunenburg,
Nova Scotia

Feather-light cakes, real melt-in-your-mouth pastries and cookies so temptingly tasty that the children make them disappear almost before they're cool... I make them all with FIVE ROSES all purpose flour. I first learned the secret from Mother, who used to say again and again, "no matter what the recipe is, if it calls for flour, you'll make it better with FIVE ROSES!" Believe me, my own daughter will get the same precious advice...and at an early age, too. Ask for FIVE ROSES all purpose flour—the flour that is making better cooks out of good cooks all across Canada.

Glen Roys Topple Oshawa Truckers 7-4 In Clean Hard-Fought Struggle

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

CHANGE OF TACTICS

The least you can say about the Glen Roys senior "B" hockey squad is they are adaptable. They can play it rough, tough and nasty, or they can take the chips off their shoulders and play it nice, cozy, close to the vest, and with halos adorning their noggins. It all depends on how the opposition desires its ball of fare.

It was that way last night against the powerful Oshawa Truckers. (Master Robert Rife, Oshawa sports writer, gently corrected us last night on that moniker. They're Truckers, not Transporters. Seems we've been giving the wrong guy a plug, as if it matters.)

The Glens were a vastly different team to that gang of tiro-practicers that defiated the Kingston Goodyears the other night. Different in the sense that they played the game the way it should be played, not perhaps as eye-pleasing as some would have it, but clean, fast hockey that satisfied the 900 fans that witnessed the struggle.

And the Glens are just as effective the "nice" way as they are in the "no-holds-and-All-ship-ree" method. In fact there were only seven penalties dished out all night by Referee Louis Lecompte and all of a minor variety. It was fast, clever hockey with the Glens' checking again standing out between goal-getting forays.

The Truckers "trucked on down" on a series of brilliant passing plays, but the Glens again coming up with a standout both-way checking effort thwarted the majority of the goal-seeking expeditions.

It was old home night for Ted DeGray. The former Oshawa junior "B" star forged nostalgia, the General Motors, and the old home atmosphere as he raced in to score one of the Glens' seven goals. Edward did an all-round swell job even if it had to be against a team wearing the colors of the former home town.

And in passing it should be mentioned that big Vern Geyer was back in harness last night and also back on the old "goal-a-game" beam. Geyer came through with a fine effort and his stout checking stopped many an Oshawa goal-ward dash. He starred in the first penalty shot seen here in a long time and his low hard drive for the corner had Pallister, the Oshawa goalie, beaten all the way.

The Glens have shown brilliant form in their last two starts, defeating Kingston and Oshawa in turn, and these reputed to be two of the strongest teams in the group. Not being too boastful, the postgame dressing room cry last night was "Bring on Stouffville." But a few fingers were crossed, in fact "Red" Dorrah had his fist clenched.

* * * *

WELL! WELL!

Oshawa representatives of the junior "B" group meeting last night were the age, where they with Cobourg were seeking entry into the charmed circle, knew whereof they spoke when they told the meeting that their teams would be "no pushovers" for the rest of the group.

Apparently that swelling in their faces was not a noble chew of Cie Belchnut or Philadelphia Scrapple or whatever cud it was Lefty Whitman made famous during his baseball days. And possibly a close observer might have noted satisfied smiles on their faces as they left the arena.

The answer was obvious on Monday night when the Oshawa junior "B" entry hoglted, shellacked and thumped the Peterborough Typhie Lizzs by a score of 8-4 on the Motor City ice in their first appearance in junior company. And any team that can sink the Petes' Links hook, line, sinker and boat with a score like that, are not fresh from Podunk Center, or Lonesome Corners.

What this department would like to know is, why was the Oshawa team not entered at the beginning of the season? They were supposed to attend the meeting held in Port Hope, and OHA executive member Frank Buckland stated there that Oshawa and Cobourg had been given invitations. It could be a case of sponsorship, and again it could not.

However with an apparently powerful outfit under wraps and the benefit of junior "A" castoffs come December available, the Oshawa entry might make things mighty interesting for the rest of the loop. And perhaps it's better that way. And as Dick Beare, Hawk secretary, puts it, "the entry of these boys will guarantee or help sustain the group in future years."

And lookit here. This morning's scores bring the news that Cobourg defeated the Lindsay Warriors 5-4 last night in the lakeside village crew's junior "B" debut. Well, well, ain't we going to have fun. Another loop kids fair to resolve itself into a slam-bang bust-'em-wide-open affair, something like the senior "B" loop. Looks like it's every man for himself from here in, and the divil take the blindmost.

Windsor Spits Finally Catch Fire Snatch 2-1 Victory from Teepees

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Windsor Spitfires, the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A collar-dwellers, have acquired a winning complex.

The Windsor entry outplayed St. Catharines Teepees most of the way Tuesday night and snatched a 2-1 victory on an overtime goal. The win gave them 12 points.

In Call the Black Hawks consolidated fourth place by trouncing Oshawa Generals 8-3. The Hawks scored four goals in the third period.

Kitchener - Waterloo Greenshirts are having a rough time on their interlocking schedule tour in Quebec. The Kitchs dropped their second game in three starts to Montreal Canadiens 6-2. Previously they lost to Three Rivers Reds and tied the Intelligencer Montreal Royals.

Quebec Citadelles and Montreal Royals staged a first-class donnybrook. They collected eight majors and six match misconducts in Montreal before the battered Cits emerged with an 8-3 win.

Archie Burton's goal-mouth pass bounced off a stick into the St. Kitt's net to decide the issue in Windsor. Ted Reid scored the first goal for Windsor and Allan Kellogg notched the St. Catharines marker. Mary Edwards was outstanding in the Teepee net.

Oshawa set a fast pace in Call before the Hawks started shoveling them into the Generals' net. Roger Maisonneuve, Fred Etcher, and Phil Chapman each scored for Generals before Gig Gall's Long John Slesser-replied. Ken Wharram had two for the winners, Jim McBurney scored three and Neil McDonald and John Muckler singled.

The Kitchener-Canadiens game was fast, clean and wide-open in Montreal. Rennie Pilot hit for three and Phil Goyette scored twice for Canadiens. Yvan Cheles notched a single. Real Morgenstern and Cev Tessier divided the Kitch-

Two Quick 1st Period Goals Pave Way to Clean-Cut Win; Ted DeGray Slings Home Three

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

It is definitely not all knock-em-down and drag-em-out hockey in this senior "B" group. The Glen Roys and Oshawa Truckers demonstrated that last night in a clean hard-fought struggle that netted the Glens their second victory in last two starts. The score was 7-4.

The victory hoisted the Glens to third position in the group standing while the defeat stopped the Oshawans from vaulting into top slot over the Stouffville Clippers.

It was fast clean hockey all the way with referee Louis Lecompte having a comparatively easy time of it. Only seven penalties were handed out all night, all minors, with four going to the Glens.

Scores With Penalty Shot

The Glens' goal featured by the first penalty shot seen on Belleville ice in years. Ron Beach, Oshawa defenceman, took the speeding Brian Scholfield to the deck beneath the ice when he was in the clear and referee Lecompte awarded the free shot. Geyer protested but with safety to no effect.

Big Vern Geyer, on his return to the hockey wars, took the shot, drove in fast on Pallister, Oshawa goalie, and made no mistake with a low hard drive to the left-hand corner.

The Glens practically won the game in the first few minutes of play. They ripped in two goals in eleven seconds, and never looked back. They increased the count to three with a lone Oshawa return before the period ended. Geyer once scored the Truckers 3-2 in the second period and shared a brace with the visitors in the third heat.

It was 'old home night' for Ted DeGray, speedy Glen centre and former Oshawa junior "B" player. Ted played a brilliant game all night and flung home three of the Glens' seven markers.

Vern Geyer, almost recovered from his baseball injury has returned to the team and turned in an outstanding effort on the defence. His checking and general performance stood out in what has been one of the Glens weakest departments despite the fine efforts of Tommy Schnieder, Jud Semark, Reeves and Bastedo. The big fellow scored a goal and assisted in another.

Scott for Oshawa paced the Truckers attack with a brace of tallies and an assist. Samolenko and Taylor got the others.

The Truckers tested Tony Parisi in the Glen nets to get the feel of things early in the first period as play opened at top speed. Brian Mulvihill ripped down the left boards after five minutes of play with Keith MacDonald and the duo swept in on the Oshawa goal with Mul making no mistake. Eleven seconds later Ted DeGray drove in with the "Mother" and his high shot caught the corner to give the Glens a two-goal lead.

Goalies Brilliant

Bastedo drew a holding penalty and the Truckers roared in to the attack. The Glens hard checking held them off the score sheet and five minutes later Wilson of Oshawa got the gate. Pallister and Parisi respective goalies were turning in brilliant efforts at this time as play swept up and down the ice. The Oshawa passing plays were a "sight to see" but the Glens both-way checking broke them up consistently.

Peter Jones engineered one of the best payoff passing plays of the night with four minutes to go as he swept in with Sammy Mulholland and Tom Schnieder. The sorrel-top climaxed the effort with a drive that Pallister hasn't seen yet.

DeGray scored his second goal at the start of the second period but Oshawa's Samolenko cut the margin on a neat effort with Scott. Came the penalty shot and the Glens had a five-two margin.

DeGray's solo effort netted the Glens' counter for his third goal of the night but Oshawa got that one back in the closing minutes when Ernie Dickens fed Scott a pass with the latter slinging home the rubber.

The third - heat was another penalty-slip-and-slide affair with the Oshawans uncorking all their moves and pandling plays in an effort to cut the margin. Brian Mulvihill whirled and dipsy-doodled along the rail and Jack Wardhaugh, swung over and fired home the Glens' seventh goal after three minutes of play.

TED DEGRAY
Hearts Home Three

Taylor combined with Tindall and Hooper in one of the prettiest combo plays of the night with the former parking the rubber behind Parisi with seven minute to go. From there in it was fast-hard-checking hockey with the Oshawans having the edge but met with the hard both-way checking of the Glens that paid off.

If you count the results of exhibition games, the Redskins have lost 14 of their last 16 starts. But the fans have continued to come out in droves.

Even though the 1952 team seemed likely to wind up with the worst record of any Redskin team in history, it never has had less than 21,175 fans at any game this season. The crowds have ranged up over the 30,000 mark.

In professional sports it's a well-known rule that the crowds won't keep coming back unless you come up with an occasional winner, or at least a promise of one.

The Redskin fan is the exception that not only disproves—but also flouts—the rule.

Why do the fans keep coming back for more

For one thing, Washington is made up of people from everywhere. On any Sunday a sizable portion of the crowd is happily rooting against, not for, the Redskins.

Again, the Redskins have a fairly interesting team. Quarterback Eddie LeBaron is a slick little operator. He doesn't fool the opposition often enough but when he does fool 'em, it's a beauty.

The Redskins still put on a first-class show. Big marching band with head feathers, small size band in tepee, ball-line high junks, including such stunts as Santa Claus coming by helicopter.

Hawks Shoot for 8th Home Win Against N.Y. Rangers Tonight; Fading Leafs Have Injury Woes

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago Black Hawks, the wonder team of the National Hockey League this season; will be shooting for their eighth home victory tonight.

So far, Chicago fans have seen their team drop only one game at home this season. They have scored seven victories and three ties for 17 tot~ of a possible 22 points at Chicago.

Chicago, who has finished at the bottom of the league for the last three out of six years, is still leading the NHL with 28 points, three more than second-place Detroit.

In the only league game tonight, Chicago is host to the cellar-dwelling New York Rangers. The two teams played to a 2-1 tie Sunday.

The Rangers, 16 points behind the Hawks, have almost no confidence since their battle-scarred regular goalie, Gump Worsley, returned recently to his regular place in the nets. He has allowed two goals a game in the last five. The return of defenceman Leo Reise to the ranks strengthened the Rangers' rearguard.

The Rangers, trimming Toronto Maple Leafs, who lost their last three tet of four games and slipped into a fourth-place tie with Boston, are having injury troubles.

Max Bentley, Ted Kenar, Harry Watson and Gordie Haunigan are all on the sidelines. Bentley, suffering from a back injury, and Hanigan, out with a twisted knee, probably will see action before the week-end. Kenar, who suffered a bruised foot at Detroit Sunday, may be able to play Thursday night in Montreal. Watson, out with a back injury for more than two weeks, may be in the line-up by the week-end.

Cougars Dump Vancouver 2-1

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Victoria Cougars have pulled out of the Western Hockey League cellar and dropped Edmonton Flyers into it.

The Cougars quit the bottom spot by edging Vancouver Canucks 2-1 Tuesday night. Stan Hilfen was both goals for Victoria after Les Hickey tallied for Vancouver.

Calgary Stampeders and Toronto Rockets played to a 4-4 tie. Steve Kraftcik; Archie Scott, Art Michalsky and Roy Kelly divided the Calgary scoring. Doug Adam tallied two for Toronto, Bill Matthews and Mark Marquess one apiece.

Sport in Brief

TORONTO (CP)—Captain Cash, owned by Gadoury and Lachapelle of Joliette, Que., and the Saleslady owned by Lady of Lake of Gueldo, shared Tuesday's featured AA pace when they each won a heat in the seventh race at Dufferin Park.

Demolished Bomber, owned by J. Smith of Ottawa and driven by Wilmer Hillock, was a handy winner of Monday's heat in the sixth and secondary feature.

OTTAWA (CP)—Bobby Robertson, captain of defencemen with Ottawa Senators of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, has been suspended for two games following a fracas at Shawinigan Falls Sunday night which he drew a match penalty. The Senators were informed of the suspension by Martin Cowney of Montreal, president of the Quebec branch of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

SMITHS FALLS (CP) — Jerry Plamondon scored the first three goals for Montreal Canadiens here last night as the Quebec Senior Hockey League team defeated Smiths Falls Hillcrest 7-5 in an exhibition game. The same teams play again tonight in Kingston.

Orville Gravelle scored twice for Smiths Falls and singles went to Stu Smillie, Archdie Richardson and Ray Trainor.

KINGSTON (CP)—Pauzer College of Orange, N.J., Tuesday night trounced Queen's University Senior Hockey Club of Kingston 6-3 in a ball game. Pauzer led 36-34 at half time.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Lucien Dechene, goalkeeper for New Westminster Royals of the Western Hockey League, was suspended Tuesday without pay by club owner Kenny MacKenzie. Dechene has been with the Royals for the last four seasons and was considered one of the best in the loop. MacKenzie said Dechene has had 23 goals scored on him in three games.

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Johnny Lattner, Notre Dame's brilliant offensive and defensive halfback, Tuesday was named the outstanding football player of 1952 by the Maxwell memorial football club. The Maxwell award was established in 1937 in honor of Robert Maxwell, a football official killed while attending a football contest. Lattner, six feet one and 190 pounds, passed and punted, ran, caught passes and backed up the line to spell splendid 1952 Irish football team.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds said Tuesday they have acquired righthander Howie Judson from Chicago White Sox as part of the deal that sent outfielder Hank Edwards to the Sox last Sept. 15. Judson was 1-1 with a 5.11 earned run average in 1952, when he won five games and lost six.

Brantford Trims Mercurys 7-2 To Grab 4th Spot

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brantford Redmen replaced Chatham Maroons in fourth place in the Canadian Senior Association. Senior A series by downing Owen Sound Mercurys 7-2.

In Tuesday night's game, Owen Sound blew a chance to move within a single point of the league leading Stratford Indians. Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen are third.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior southern group action was of an executive nature.

Andy Mitke, who combines with Gord Heska and Mick Tomiuk to form the Wolves' most potent scoring combination, was suspended indefinitely by coach Max Silverman of Sudbury Wolves for missing practice Saturday night. Mitke has gone to Toronto to see the Grey Cup football game.

Wally Hnatiuk scored three goals against Owen Sound to set the pace in the Brantford attack, a home defeat of the season. Art Dugan notched two goals and Allan and Sam Kennedy singled. Doug Gillespie and Art Hayward came through with goals for Owen Sound.

Tonight the Mercurys travel to Kitchener Dutchmen. Chatham Maroons are at Sarnia and Stratford Indians entertain Galt to increase their lead against Hamilton Tigers.

In the NOHA, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Greyhounds defeated their neighbors, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Indians.

Cleveland Barons Win 8th in Row

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons won their sixth straight and their eighth in a row at home by defeating Syracuse Warriors 3-1 in an American Hockey League game.

The victory Tuesday night gave Barons a four-point lead over the league.

John Bower, the league's leading goaltender, kept up his goal-a-game streak. Wingman Ike Hildebrand potted his 10th goal of the season to tie for the league lead in points.

LOSES BOTH FEET

CHATHAM (CP)—A 55-year-old transient, who slipped while trying to get off a Canadian National Railways train here, lost both feet Tuesday night when he fell partially under a moving car. Police identified him as James Wilshire of Toronto. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, where his condition was reported critical. Attendants said the feet were severed at the ankles.

Football May be a Funny Pastime But How Can Pros be Beaten 63-7

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—It has been common knowledge for some time that football is a funny game, but the more last still does not entirely explain how a team of professionals, coached by an acknowledged master of defence, can on a given afternoon be completely outclassed and outscored by a team of collegians.

That was the galling experience which befell Steve Owen and his New York Giants in the cold and snow at Pittsburgh last week-end. It was a nightmare the famous mentor from Oklahoma will never forget, starting from the moment Lyon Candinas ran the first kick-off back the length of the field for a touchdown and lasting until the inevitable Steeler had pounded across their final three scores in the closing period.

A Shambles

There had been nothing to resemble the shambles made of the Giants' defence since 1940, when the mighty Chicago Bears smashed the Washington Redskins 73-0. This was considered a freak of a game at the time, and we had been assured by learned football men that it could never happen again, professional coaches having since made sure that it would not by their defensive formations.

Owen probably came as close to explaining the debacle as possible when he said: "If you are fast enough, you can do something like that is bound to happen to you."

The point which seems to our mind is whether such a disorganized team as that at Pittsburgh might not point up an essential difference between professional football clubs and the best of the collegians. If Michigan State and Georgia Tech players each drew 20 times over a number of seasons, would either of them ever suffer such a humiliating defeat of that which was inflicted upon the Giants?

We doubt it, and this isn't meant as a knock at the money players. They put up a whale of a show week after week and play the best football that is to be seen. But, as we watched the Giants get their lumps the thought occurred that they risked their necks less and their dignity more than the kind of thing was happening to them. They seemed to realize there was no percentage in dying for dear old Mom's pie. And that there would be another game next Sunday. The collegians haven't enough time left to play it that way.

Another point is that, on a given day when fit plays are clicking, any professional club can have a more devastating offence than the best college team which ever existed. The Steelers were such an outfit last Sunday. Their passer, Jim Finks, the former Tulsa star, had one of those days when he could have thrown the ball into a bucket at 40 yards, and his receivers could have caught a saucer if water were frozen in it.

A college team will not have the distressing experience of running into such an attack, and so will never know how a club of calculating professionals could curl up and die before it.

Latest news from the tennis front is that Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor have agreed to turn professional Dec. 31, immediately after the conclusion of the Davis cup challenge round at Adelaide, Australia.

'Peahead' Walker To Coach Larks Next Year

MONTREAL (CP) — Douglas (Peahead) Walker, whose first year as a coach in Canadian football didn't prove a bowling success, will be back with Montreal Alouettes next season.

The 49-year-old coach wired Tuesday from his Birmingham, Ala., home that he will take the job again and hoped for a successful season.

The management of the Big Four club said Walker's salary will be the same. The amount wasn't elected.

Walker's acceptance put to rest rumors that several other well-known coaches were after the job. These included Vic Obeck, athletics director and football coach at McGill university; Frankie Filchock, who coached Montreal Alouettes to the Grey cup in 1948 and as Edmonton Eskimos' coach lost in the annual game Saturday to Toronto Argos; Les Lazar, Calgary Stampeders coach, and Annis Stukus, Toronto newspaper man who formerly coached the Alouettes.

Alouettes came through the 1952 Big Four season with only two wins in 12 starts.

Gad, Fellows, but No Sprinters

NEWMARKET, England (AP)—British bloodstock breeders are warned they are endangering horse racing by their current breeding of sprinters instead of stayers.

In a prepared speech to the annual general meeting of the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association Tuesday Lord Rosebery, the society president, said breeders were not on the right line in catering to the public demand for short-running, quick-maturing horses.

Lord Rosebery is one of Britain's top breeders and owners, and is a member of the Jockey Club, ruling body of horse racing.

'Ole Case' Tells How to Beat Yanks, All You Do, Get Some of His Players

BY JOE REICHLER

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Zip to Hank Greenberg, general manager of Cleveland Indians:

Wanna beat the Yankees for the pennant next year? Let Casey Stengel, the guy who stopped you four years in a row, tell you how.

"Nothing to it," says the cagy skipper of New York's world champions. "If you want to beat 'em, just mak a trade 'th us. No fooling. Look at all the good players we gave away to other clubs in trades in recent years—Bob Porf field, Jackie Jensen, Frank Shea, Tommy Byrne, Duane Pillette.

"That Greenberg pops off how he hates the Yankees and wants his players to do likewise. Does he think his Indians can win the pennant in batting us? No sir.

It's Simple

"Know how Cleveland can win the pennant? By getting some of our players. That's how simple it is. If you can't beat 'em, get 'em on your side."

While Stengel was having some fun at the expense of his friendly rival, Chuck Dressen, the Brooklyn Dodgers boxed to Stengel's Yankees in the last world series, was accepting congratulations for having been rehired for another season as manager of the Brooks for a salary ranging from $35,000 to $40,000.

The Dressen signing along with the announcement that Joe Black, the Dodger hurler who pitched the Brooks to the championship and won rookie-of-the-year honors, also had signed his contract for 1953 came as the baseball convention here wound up its three-day player draft and prepared to delve into a heavy legislative agenda.

Dressen said "the Dodgers are elated to meet with the Braves "in a day or two" in an effort to transact a deal. He did not identify the players he intended to let go but made it plain he is anxious to land Warren Spahn, Braves' star southpaw.

Asked whether he would be willing to give first baseman Gil Hodges and outfielder Carl Furillo for Spahn, Dressen smiled and said:

"All I can say is I'd be willing to break up my infield and outfield to get a good starting pitcher, preferably a lefthander."

It's the 'KNOW HOW' that Counts!

HANDBALL THE FULL-ARM UNDERHAND STROKE

2 Arm swings in front of body and forward, right foot takes short step forward as ball is hit. Elbow remains bent and ball is hit near knee height. As left foot moves, the body weight shifts forward. Eye must never leave ball.

3 Follow-through is important for control of the shot. Shoulders and arm swing about naturally as upper body rotates. Extra speed and control on this stroke comes when wrist is flexible, ball is struck firmly with either cupped or flat hand.

Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in handball as in every sport—"know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form — the "know-how" — then practise until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and games.

The Kibitzer

Every so often an enterprising player puts new life into your bridge game. He does it by overbidding his hands. Then he starts to pay by playing way over his head to make his contracts.

Came the deal shown here:

	NORTH
	♠K 6 4 3
	♥10 9 5 3
	♦K 10 4
WEST		EAST
♠A 10		♠J 9
♥8 7		♥K Q 7 6 4
♦Q J 8 7		♦9 5 3 2
♣A Q 8 7 4		♣7 10 3
	SOUTH
	♠Q J 8 7 5 2
	♥A 2
	♣K 9 2

The players bid it like this:

South	West	North	East
1 S	Dbl	2 S	3 H
3 S	Pass	4 S	All Pass
4 S	Dbl	All Pass

The east bid of four hearts was a trick more than warranted by his hand but he preferred to take a possible sacrifice if opponents were willing to let him have it there.

South could see no profit in doubling the four heart bid. So, he preferred to try it at a game in spades, which was a trick more than warranted by his holding. The west double was for penalty.

West led a heart and declarer played it low from dummy in such manner that he was defeated one trick. He lost four tricks; which included a heart, a trump, and two club tricks.

South seemed to take it for granted that four tricks must be lost. It did not seem to occur to him that he played it wrong and gave away one trick more than he should have done.

After taking the [illegible] with heart ace, south immediately led a trump that went was with spade ace. Another heart lead from west was taken by east who returned a club to beat him.

This is the way the play should have been handled. If it is plagued correctly, nothing that opponents can do will prevent south from taking his needed ten tricks.

Work it out along those lines.

Schools Will Have to Register Canadian Pupils

MONTREAL (CP)—United States schools accepting Canadian students will have to register their arrivals and departures with American immigration authorities and copies of students' border crossing permits will be revised after Dec. 26, it was learned.

J. R. Bourque, officer in charge of U.S. immigration services here, said Thursday the change will come into force after Dec. 24 when the McCarran-Walter immigration Act becomes effective.

He said the situation in elementary schools, where there are no restrictions, remains unchanged but that children of non-resident immigrants living in Canadian border areas where it is more convenient to attend an American school, must apply for entry permits at the nearest American consulate.

He said high school and college students will no longer be allowed to take partial courses and must attend a full course to obtain border crossing permits.

Mr. Bourke also said students attending night classes in the Windsor-Detroit area have been warned that their permits may be cancelled.

PRINCIPALS AT COMMONWEALTH CONFAB

Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent is seen discussing agenda with host, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, right, at the Commonwealth economic conference, in which nine Commonwealth countries are taking part, opened in London. It is the fourth meeting of empire premiers since the war ended. The conference will consider ambitious plans for economic expansion, and is probably a prelude to talks with European countries and the new U.S. administration. Matters to be discussed include the balance of payments situation and a review of interna[illegible] measures taken by each country, also review of plans to develop Commonwealth resources which will increase the power to earn foreign currencies and of resources for financing the developme[illegible] (C.P. Canadian).

AT THE CAPITOL — Star Leo Gorcey and teamate Huntz Hall are surprised and so is Myrna Dell as the lads try to sneak her into barracks in "Here Come the Marines," new Monogram comedy at the Capitol Theatre starting Thursday. On the same program Wild Bill Elliott in "Kansas Territory."

AT THE McCARTHY—Popular Tony Curtis and Piper Laurie return to the screen in their second co-starring Technicolor adventure-film, Universal-International's "Son of Ali Baba." The young star combination appeared together first in "The Prince Who Was a Thief" and made such a hit with their fans that they were re-teamed in "Son of Ali Baba." Opens today at the Odeon and McCarthy Theatre.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Truman Tuesday accepted the resignation of Philip C. Jessup as ambassador-at-large effective Jan. 19—his day before President-elect Eisenhower takes office. Jessup, long a controversial figure in the state department, had submitted it Oct. 16, to become effective when Truman desired.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — You'd think that a towering young man with acting ability, a handsome face and blonde hair would be a cinch for film success.

"It's not as easy as all that," comments Jim Arness, who has all those qualifications. There's one difficulty: He is too tall for most Hollywood leading men.

Jim, a good-looking boy from Minneapolis, is a shade over six feet, six inches. He's considerably taller than most leading men, and two inches taller than the biggest one (Dan Dailey).

"I wouldn't be bad-it I played leads myself," he explained. "Then it wouldn't matter how tall I was. But a lot of leading men don't like to have actors taller than them spoiling their pictures."

Gets Same Good Parts

Jim's career is finally hitting on all cylinders after some lean days. After appearing in stage work here, he landed a movie job as one of Loretta Young's brothers in "The Farmer's Daughter."

"They wanted a guy who looked like a big Swede," Jim recalled. "So I had no trouble getting cast. But when I tried to get an acting job after that, I realized what I was up against. The studios told me I was too big to appear with their male stars.

Then Dore Schary, who had hired him for "The Farmer's Daughter," gave him a job in "Battleground." He followed that by playing the title role in "The Thing."

"But I only lasted six months," he said. Again he enrolled in a stage play, it paid off. Robert Fellows and John Wayne signed him to a contract and put him in a leading film "Big Jim McLain."

"Even though I was a few inches taller than Wayne, he didn't mind standing next to me in scenes."

AT THE NEW HELLE—Audrey Totter and John Hodiak take the romantic principals of M-G-M's exciting drama, "The Saxon Charm," which Robert Montgomery and Paul Raymond also starred. Both Totter and Hodiak have been featured recently in "Battle Circus" and "Any Number Can Play"—gripping M-G-M. And feature attraction at the Belle.

Crown Attorney At Kitchener Goes on Strike

KITCHENER (CP)—A $6,000 annual post paid will caused crown attorney Harold Daufman to go on strike.

The crown attorney gave warning Nov. 7 that unless the bill were paid by Nov. 15 he would not prosecute summary convictions. He claims the city owes his department $4,000 payable under the Liquor Control Act.

A city council committee has asked Mr. Daufman to postpone his action for two weeks o allow civic general's department.

UNWISE SALE

WINNIPEG (CP)—An employee of a hardware store here was fined $10 for selling an airgun to a boy under 16 years of age. Testimony was that the gun had been used to break 11 windows in a Fort Rouge school.

Reporter Had Hard Time Giving Away Dollar Bills

VANCOUVER (CP) — It took Paddy Sherman, Vancouver Province reporter, 25 minutes to give away five $1 bills in rush-hour crowds.

But one hand Paddy held the five bucks and a big sign reading "please take one." Hundreds chose not to.

One little old woman looked Paddy in the eye and said: "It's your counterfeit, of course. It's stolen."

"No, ma'am," Paddy said. "I just want to give it away."

She took one of the bills, fingered it. "Everybody else away good money for nothing," she said. Then she put it back.

A scruffy little man studied Paddy's sign, asked him to move, and then picked up a cigaret butt behind him. He looked at the notice again, put the butt in his pocket and walked off.

One of the takers was a fashionably dressed woman who parked a limousine in front of Paddy.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR THURSDAY, DEC. 4, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Most unscheduled or unusual matters get more care, perservance. Stick close to your trade, duties and don't take foolish chances, especially with money.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Curb quick decisions, going into agreements without accurate research and proper soundings for safety of the proposition. P.M. promotes better personal affairs.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Better outlook for all sensible aims. Co-operate, let airings to know what others and you can really explore in good results.

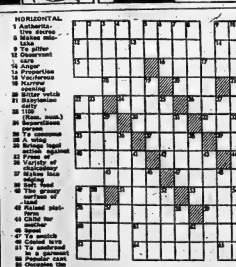
June 22 to July 21 (Cancer)—Difficult day for snap judgment. Don't force issues, go along in smooth, systematic manner. In construction work, machinery, transportation, be careful.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—Some unexpected reactions could upset plans, make things rather rough. Be on guard, don't take success for granted.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Review past performances, future prospects. Be especially kind to health, nerves. Seek to improve status by study; heed sound advice.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Check requests. Should your aims be pointed towards another direction? Strike out the unessential. Keep smiling.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—We urge extra care in acting until you have studied prospects, tasks. Need no undue fear, however.



November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Caution in finances, business, investments, budgeting. Look ahead; don't wait for someone to prod you.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Thumbs down on all useless risky or questionable propositions, business. Give urgent matters, those you feel you can handle, sufficient attention.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Matters should be decided calmly. Your perceptive senses can lead to top gains. Cut non-essentials, attend important items promptly.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—May be tendency to put off matters, to allow social affairs, the upper hand. Don't do this today! Get work done, then have fun.

YOU BORN TODAY can become able business executive, doctor, teacher, broker. Curb tendency toward arguments or abruptness. In business, real estate, investment brokerage, you can go far. But master impatience. Birthdate of Thos. Carlyle, famous essayist, historian; Edith Cavell, Brit. heroine-nurse.

News of Trenton

Thirty Members Canadian Legion Receive Badges

Trenton (Special) — Presentation of quarter-century badges to 30 members of Trenton Branch 110 of the Canadian Legion and the initiation of 12 new members climaxed the branch's silver jubilee anniversary celebrated here on Saturday. Most of the silver badge members were on hand to receive their pins.

Those receiving 25-year pins included F. Ainsey, O. G. Ayres, Paul Anderson, Chas. Baker, A. L. Beal, Ross Burtt, W. H. Colterjohn, Vic. Cousins, E. R. Cunnell, W. L. Davidson, A. E. DeLong, L. G. Devenshire, W. V. Donaldson, F. Fairman, Geo. Foggo, C. H. Ford, D. T. Fraser, Mal. Gen. D. G. Graham, W. G. Hamilton, R. F. Joyce, Wm. Keating, Geo. Leibrand, M. J. LaFrance, Robert LaMorre, Fred Logue, Alex. Rattray, J. A. Silver, J. R. Shannon, C. E. Thurston, E. P. Wallace.

Retiring Mayor Kenneth J. Couch was on the platform and received a big hand from the ball full of legion men. He officiated at the draw for the lucky coupons for draw prizes. Bank manager N. Bingeman assisted.

MUTUAL INTEREST MAKES FRIENDS OF ENEMIES

Traditional enmity between Greece and Turkey appears at an end as Athens crowds applaud balding, bespectacled Turkish President Djelal Bayar as he arrived in the Greek capital. Next to Bayar is Greece's King Paul. Bayar is the first Turkish ruler in modern Greece's 130-year history to set foot on Greek soil in any other role than that of a conqueror. His visit follows King Paul's visit to Turkey early this year and is considered to be inaugurating a new era of close co-operation between Greece and Turkey. Ancient hatreds seem to be forgotten as both nations, mutually opposed to Russian communism, work together within the NATO framework. (Central Press Canadian.)

RAWDON
SPECIAL LODGE MEETING
RAWDON, No. 382, Fred Bateman, Grand Master of Ontario East, attended a special meeting in Ottawa when 11 counties were represented at a monster meeting of "The County of the City of Ottawa L.O.L." Eight candidates received the third degree and two the first degree. Following the lodge meeting, refreshments were served by members of the L.O.B.A. Several Grand Lodge and County officers spoke, including Mr. Bateman, during the program which followed.
Mrs. and Mrs. Bateman were overnight guests at the home of their cousins, County Master and Mrs. W. H. Allen.
Just recently Mr. Bateman attended a special lodge meeting at West Huntingdon when a new candidate was received.
On a recent Sunday evening he and Mrs. Bateman attended a "Remembrance Service" in Tudor-boro Presbyterian Church, and on Thursday evening Mr. Bateman attended lodge at Marmora.
Mrs. R. R. Bonisteel was guest speaker at Wellman's Women's Institute recently at the home of Mrs. Frederick Beckett. Mrs. Bonisteel told of "Work Camps in Asia."
Misses Marilyn and Nancy Rose Hoards, visited their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Blake Sharpe, over the week-end.
The Christmas meeting of River Valley Women's Institute will be held at the home of Mrs. Bob Philp on Thursday, December 4th, at 2 p.m. There will be an exchange of Christmas gifts for adults and children at a price range of 50 cents and 25 cents. The program will be conveyed by Mrs. Percy Ulman and Mrs. Earl Morrow, and all the members will provide refreshments.
Rev. R. R. Bonisteel chose "Stewardship and Its Meaning" for his theme on Sunday. He emphasized the need of contributing to all worthwhile charities and missions as the various needs arise.
Mr. and Mrs. Martin Rivers and children of Trenton, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Pritchard, Fourth Concession, attended the wedding of their son, Morley, and Miss Monica Ellen Culley, in St. Andrew's United Church, Oshawa, on Saturday.
Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Heasman, Mr. Harry Heasman, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Heasman were among the River Valley folk who attended the funeral of the late Mr. Kenneth Sca in Belleville.
Mrs. Thomas Andrews spent a day recently with Mrs. John Ryan.
Mr. and Mrs. Merle Spencer and Mrs. G. F. Spencer visited Mr. and Mrs. Don Robert and family, Moira, on Wednesday.
Mrs. Paul Shaver and Jack, Wellman, attended the morning service at Mount Pleasant and were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher.
Mr. and Mrs. George McKeithron, Hermon, spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. James Menzies and Mr. Jack McEathron.
Miss Shirley Douglas, White Lake, visited Mr. and Mrs. Blake Sharpe and Bert on Sunday evening.
Several Mount Pleasant ladies journeyed to the Hoards Live-stock Sale, on short notice last Monday evening and served light refreshments. The group cleared over $80 for their efforts. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Williams appreciated the effort made by the local group to substitute at the last minute. Through mix-up of dates the organization scheduled for this evening failed to put in their appearance.
Messrs. Norman McConnell and Carl Dunham attended The Royal Winter Fair in Toronto on Friday.
Ladies from all over Rawdon township attended Laurel Rebekah afternoon tea and bazaar on Thursday afternoon, despite the inclement weather.
Mr. Frank Smith spent several days in Toronto with Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Curry and other relatives.
Mr. R. C. Tucker, Bethel, is ill in Belleville General Hospital.

BURR'S
Burr's — Mr. and Mrs. Don Parks, Donna and Lynn, and Mr. and Mrs. Eric Edwards were guests at a reception for Mr. and Mrs. ene Maxwell, a recent bride and groom, Bowerman's, at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claud Maxwell.
Mr. and Mrs. W. Noble entertained at a birthday dinner Friday evening for their daughter, Elda, and for Mr. Val Squire. Other guests included Mrs. Val Squire, Lois and Paul Squire.
Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Burr, Miss Bobie and baby Terry Dempsey, were Saturday noon-hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr.
Mr. and Mrs. Roy Anderson, of Belleville, were Saturday tea hour and evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr.
Mr. and Mrs. W. Dempsey, in company with Mr. Rodney Burr, were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. Greulet and Mr. and Mrs. P. Dempsey, at Gilbert's.

Several from this way attended a shower and presentation for recent newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burkitt, at Wesley's at Mountain View church on Friday evening.
Mr. and Mrs. Val Squire, Lois and Paul, Mrs. Al Purtelle, Rev. and Mrs. Squire and Philip were Saturday dinner and evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Valleau, Marlbe.
Mr. and Mrs. Ewart Harns entertained Mr. and Mrs. W. Burkitt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burkitt, Mr. and Mrs. G. Minaker and Lora, to dinner Sunday evening.
Mr. and Mrs. W. Fox, Centre, were Saturday tea and evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Burr.
Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Werden were Sunday tea and evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Montgomery and Bob, Victoria.
Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Moran, Larry and Sharon, Gordon and Mrs. J. E. Moran, of Crofton, were recent Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Smith, Arlington, when they entertained for Mr. W. Conroy of Ailin, B.C., who is visiting the east for the first time in 40 years. Mrs. Moran saw her father for the first time in nine years.
The dime cards and penny-a-day collection by the local W.A. amounted to over $123, $100 was realized from catering for the Federation of Agriculture banquet.

FRANKFORD
SIDNEY - TRENTON C.C.E.
Frankford — A meeting of the executive of the Sidney and Trenton Council of Christian Education was held in Frankford United Church hall. President, Mrs. Warren Harlowe of Eggleton Church, opened the meeting by reading an inspirational poem. The Scripture, passage, taken from Matthew 5, was read. Rev. G. A. Puttenham, of Grace United Church, Trenton, led in prayer.
The next convention of the S. & T. C.C.E. was discussed at length and it was decided that if possible, the convention would be held the last Wednesday in April. Arrangements are under way with one church of the Council, and it is hoped that the convention can be held there. The council has already received an invitation from Eggleton Church to hold the convention there, but one of the other churches which has not as yet had a convention is first in line for it.
Resolution
A resolution is to be sent from the S. & T. C.C.E. with the hope of getting more good religious films before the public, also on Canadian television.
The next important item of business was the coming Leadership Training Course which will be held about the end of January in the Frankford Church hall. Two courses were selected, and further information will be sent to each of the Sunday Schools in the council, as well as invitations to Sunday Schools who have not as yet joined the council to participate.
Refreshments were served by the Frankford members of the council, with the benediction being pronounced by Rev. W. McEachern.

Hard Acres

Harry Meldrum Moore

But, then, how was Curly Brown to know what was going on where men meet to lay plans for chaos to unlaw.

Friday night came. Curly found his gaiters, his favorite chair, his newspaper, waiting for him in front of the unlighted fireplace. And thanking Hazel for her thoughtfulness, he sat down for an evening. In the kitchen Peter helped Hazel with the dishes. After a while Hazel came into the parlor with a pillow cover and sat nearby to put a hem on it. Peter came in from the wood-shed with a copy of the Weird Tales he had found stuck in the wall, and sprawled on the floor at Curly's feet to have a look at it. The hands on the fireplace clock pointed to eight. Curly raised his eyes from his paper and ill-whined: "Buzzy Hall's should be here. The sounds grew louder, stopped. A hand fumbled at the door. Hazel asked, "Who's there?" And Curly got up to see. Hugh Maitland stuck his head in the door. "Hello, everybody," he said. Then to Curly, "I can't come in. I've got to run up to Foster's. Will you be home tonight?" Curly said he thought so. Then Hugh was gone, with "then I'll be back later."

After he was gone, Hazel said, "Hugh's dressed to kill tonight. I wonder what he's up to now?"

Curly came back to his chair and picked up his paper.

"Maybe he's done the impossible—found himself a girl."

The family returned to its occupations. After a while a buggy passed the house going eastward. The minutes passed, the hands on the clock were racing toward nine.

"Now, what did Hugh Maitland mean when he asked if we were going to be home tonight?" Hazel broke the silence.

"I've been wondering that, too," Curly said, "I believe there's something in the wind, but what is it?"

At that moment there was another noise outside, and Curly decided to find out what was making it. He opened the door, and he couldn't believe his eyes. Before him was a sea of faces, a sea of happy smiling faces, and he sensed what brought them there. This was to be a surprise party, a house-warming. So he waved a hand in welcome, opened wide the door. Hazel, who had left the room to put her sewing away, was back in stand beside him when they filed in, Hugh Maitland in the lead to say with a laugh, "well, we sure fooled you that time!"

The crowd filled the parlor, spread out to the kitchen, up the stairs, filled the doorways. It seemed that every man, woman and child in the district had moved out to Hard Acres. They brought with them refreshment and drink, a purse of money for Curly, a Methodist hymnal for Hazel, a new suit for Peter, Father Finucane, Rev. Salter, Matt Hawkins, Bill McTaggert—everybody, and his wife was there. There were farmers from different parts of the district, Mrs. Butler, George Riley, Billy Tough, Fiddler Bill Thompson with his fiddle in a grain bag—Curly could think of no one but Mrs. Barrier and the McGowans who were not present.

There were brief speeches by the priest and the Methodist minister. A suitable reply by the host, and preparations were made for an old-fashioned get-to-gether hoe-down.

Hugh Maitland proposed that he would do the calling for the dancing until midnight, when they would stop for lunch. Then Curly could take charge from then on. It was a real hoe-down, with men pounding the floor with their feet, women's skirts flying, everybody laughing and having fun. Between sets the dancers were outside under the moon to cool off before returning for the next dance. At midnight, lunch was served, and then the dancing was resumed. Curly had just called for the first set when George Olmstead came in from outside and caught him by the arm.

"Trouble, outside," Olmstead said. "Bill Frost's here, and he hit Hugh Maitland."

Curly lifted his hand. "Hold everything," he shouted. "I'll be back in a few minutes."

He was striding hurriedly towards the door, a number of the guests one at his heels, when Father Finucane caught him by the arm.

"Be careful, Curly," the priest advised, "take it easy."

"But Hugh Maitland is one of my best friends," Curly growled.

"I know," Father Finucane agreed, "But, I still ask you to be careful."

As Curly stepped out the front door, he met Hugh Maitland with a hand over his eye coming in. Frost and two companions, and he recognized them as the Newton twins, were grouped inside the gate. Like Frost, the twins had the reputation of being tough fighters of his type, but they had not been seen in the Depot for some time.

One at a time, Curly knew he could well handle these trouble-makers, but he was not sure how he would fare if they were all to jump on his at once. And anyway his was neither the time nor the place to start a fight that might involve his guests, and so his best plan was to parley with Bill Frost, since Frost was undoubtedly the ring-leader, and that he wanted to, but it was the only thing to do under the circumstances.

Delegates at Peace Parley In Peking Smothered With Chinese Hospitality

By Gerard Filion

Picasso's dove has become the symbol of the pilgrims of peace.

When we arrived at Peking, on September 25, the city was literally covered with doves. All the big buildings and many of the business establishments were adorned with banners displaying Picasso's dove. And a dove with an olive branch was the central decoration on a huge number of clocks in government and private shops.

We were given rooms at the Peace Hotel, which also sported the dove motif. This hotel, a seven-storey affair, was built in 75 days for the Peace Congress. We were the first guests and we gave it a housewarming. The hotel was modern, but not luxurious, although the decorations were remarkable. The lobby was furnished with carpets of oriental splendor. The atmosphere of peace was matched with a dove. We slept in peace. If there were differences of opinion during the Congress, it was not because our hosts had failed to create the proper atmosphere for a Peace Congress.

It wasn't long before we discovered that the Peace Hotel, so charmingly decorated, had indeed been built in 75 days. By the time we left, the walls were beginning to crack and the plaster on some of the ceilings was giving way badly.

CHINESE HOSPITALITY

I can't say enough about Chinese hospitality. It smothers you. Everything was ready every moment and provided for all your needs.

We were met at the airport by a delegation of the Peking Peace Committee. Young girls presented us with bunches of gladioli and then escorted us. Tea was served at the airport and we drank it slowly while we got to know our hosts.

It was like that for 30 days. They did everything possible to be nice to us and to satisfy our every wish. We were continually in their debt.

Each group of three or four delegates was given an interpreter who stayed on duty 24 hours a day.

Buses, which were free to all guests, wait while you had your shoes shined, follow you anywhere you wished to go. On each floor of the hotel a Peace Committee official, usually a university professor, who, besides his help during the day, remained on night duty.

Of course, we had been guests of the Chinese ever since Prague. From the moment of our arrival in that city, representatives of the Chinese Embassy looked after our every need. They had collected our suitcases after our leisure time and paid our expenses. It was the same in Moscow. So was the same during our entire stay in China until it was the end on the road.

I know some delegates who left home with a $50 bill in their pockets and a return ticket to Prague. They counted on the providence of Saint Marx for the rest — helping, however, by his providence, their first love, the kingdom of Marx and its peace, and the rest will follow accordingly.

During the whole Congress, our Chinese hosts offered to take us to the theatre, on trips, give us presents and paid us a thousand other attentions. Each delegate received a million yen, or about $50, an abundant supply of cigarets, stamps, Chinese vases, records, a woollen waistcoat and a suit. I wish I could say that this gift was done deliberately, simply to impress us westerners. But it is only in China that you would receive such thoughtful attention, even if it were calculated.

Court Reserves Judgment On Murder Appeal

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada reserved judgment on an appeal from a death sentence by Mrs. Arthur Pitre of Quebec, one of three persons convicted of murder following the ring-bombing of an airliner Sept. 9, 1949.

Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret, who questioned the court's right to hear the appeal, said Monday that judgment will be given "as soon as possible." It was made the statement after being told that Mrs. Pitre is scheduled to be hanged Jan. 9.

Two others already have been hanged for their part in the plot which sent 23 persons to their deaths. J. Albert Guay, Quebec jeweler, was hanged Jan. 12, 1951, for the murder of his 25-year-old wife, Rita, a passenger on the plane. Motive was $25,000 insurance money and the love of a pretty waitress.

Generoux Rozet, 34-year-old crippled watchmaker, was hanged Jan. 22 last for manufacturing the time bomb that destroyed the plane in flight.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: The trend towards mild weather is expected to continue in Ontario as afternoon temperatures are expected to reach the high thirties in southern Ontario and are scattered in the forties over the north, or than that during the night. However, in northern and eastern sections temperatures tonight may fall a little below freezing.

Rain is spreading northeastward from the Mississippi valley and appears likely to affect most of the province by tonight. In northern and eastern sections this rain carries with it a risk of low snow or freezing rain and sleet.

Hauled to Safety

OTTAWA (CP)—Three construction workers hauled a nine-months-old baby to safety through a window of a burning barpaper shack while his mother rescued his two-year-old sister.

Linda Burns, 2, was critically burned Wednesday when her mother, Mrs. Annette Boyer, 19, carried her from their burning home in Ottawa West.

The three construction workers worked in relays to haul the baby, Oscar, through a window of the flaming, one-storey shack. Roy Joly, 27, suffered painful burns.

Thousands Have Quebec Eel Instead Of Turkey for Christmas Dinner

By KEN STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—Thousands of Americans in the New England states have Quebec eel instead of turkey for their Christmas dinner.

More than 1,000,000 pounds of eel, caught in the St. Lawrence river near the island of Orleans and in the Saguenay river, were shipped to the United States this fall to meet the annual Christmas season demand. Some were also shipped to Europe.

The eels were shipped frozen in boxes of 125 or more, or in trucks packed with seaweed, in tanks, instead of by boat. In past years the fish were transported live in a specially-constructed barge with a perforated bottom to maintain a fresh water supply.

The eels are sent to the U.S., Germany and other provinces of Canada by the Fishermen's Cooperative of the island of Orleans, one of the largest shippers of this product in the country. In recent years eel fishing has become recognized as a maritime industry in Quebec.

They don't sell too well in Canada, where housewives apparently won't cook a fish that resembles a snake and has a reputation for strange gymnastics in the frying pan. But in Boston, New York and other American cities they sell like hot cakes.

To people of Italian, German, and Jewish descent, eels are great delicacies and are served up in various forms during the Yuletide season. Jellied and potted, eels are in great demand, and smoked eel, used for hors d'oeuvres, can bring as much as $1.25 a pound.

The eel fishing centres along the St. Lawrence starts about the end of September and runs until early November.

The weirs or traps, which look like slender willow baskets and have a small entrance at one end, are filled with fish waste as bait. Sometimes they are placed as far as 300 feet out in the river.

The Quebec fishing service authority and president of the Fishermen's Protective Society of the province of Quebec, said the catch this season was one of the best in years.

The average weight of eels caught in the Island of Orleans district was between one and seven pounds, and they measure from two to five feet in length.

Board Chairman Protests Action, Resigns Position

Truman Grants Full Wage Boost to Miners

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Truman's wage board chairman quit his job today in protest over the President's approval of a wage boost for 1,000,000 soft coal miners because, he said, he does not want President - elect Eisenhower to have a record to criticize on his hands when he takes office. The board chairman, a veteran certain strike, but it opened the door to a boost in coal prices to consumers.

Also, one member of the wage board said Truman's approval of the decision would have a "terrific and disappointing effect" on negotiations which in the past have accepted board-ordered reductions and now will expect a reversal from both the board.

Lewis himself, whose basic minimum daily wage is boosted $18.25, were reported jubilant.

Lewis had negotiated the $1.90 a day increase with industry. The board had cut this to $1.50 on the grounds that any more would be inflationary. However, the stabilization program.

Lewis and Harry M. Moses, president of the bituminous coal operators' association, appealed the decision to Economic Stabilizer Roger Putnam.

Putnam declined to overrule his board. Defence Mobilizer Henry A. Dewey also refused to change the decision. That left it up to Truman and his advisers.

Truman's decision said the "probable consequences" of a failure to grant the increase "would be a disastrous coal strike which would create a national emergency."

The decision indicates that a similar contract signed by Lewis and the hard coal industry now is pending before the board, will also be approved. It provides for a 10 per cent increase of between 80 cents and $1 a ton on hard coal, the type used by home owners for heating.

Requested to Help

OTTAWA (CP)—Federal and provincial governments were asked today to help Canada's blind by getting rid of one cause of the ailment—spread leaf tobacco noxious weed.

Delegates to the seventh federal provincial conference on welfare Wednesday unanimously adopted a resolution urging the governments to take whatever measures can be designed to free Canada of these weeds.

The conference at its closing session agreed that the resolution would benefit the tourist industry.

Truman Govt. Apparently Plans No Further Efforts To Solve Korean Situation

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Truman administration apparently will make no further policy moves to solve the Korean situation. The next step, officials said today, will be up to President-elect Eisenhower.

Officials said it will be up to the incoming regime to make any fundamental changes such as prosecuting the war beyond its present limits or putting additional economic or military pressure on Communist China.

The Truman administration is said to feel no new policy moves are advisable before Eisenhower's inauguration, seven weeks away. Two reasons are advanced:

1. Any large undertaking could hardly be completed before Jan. 20, thus committing the new administration to deal with a program it may not approve.

2. The United Nations fight in Korea is an Allied fight, requiring Allied consultation on any policy development. Before agreeing to a new project, it is said, the UN Allied would want to know how the Eisenhower administration feels about it.

Korean issues are regarded by authorities here as topping the list of foreign policy problems prepared for study by John Foster Dulles, Eisenhower's secretary of state.

On the military side, some high American officers in the Far East are reported to have advised Washington that the best hope of ending the war lies in launching a major offensive. Destruction of the Communist forces, rather than the gaining of territory, would be the primary objective.

Military men who hold that view are expected to make firm recommendations to Eisenhower during his Korean trip.

Such an offensive would require several more divisions of American troops. It would also mean abandoning attempts to make peace along the present stalemated line.

On the diplomatic side, after the Indian resolution has been boiled down, Truman administration policy-makers see a possibility that the UN general assembly demanding that the Communists agree to an armistice that included voluntary prisoner repatriation.

The general assembly Wednesday adopted an Indian resolution serving that purpose. Russia and the Reds have already denounced this plan. It is expected, therefore, that the resolution will be rejected when officially forwarded to Peiping.

That will raise another big policy question: What steps should the United Nations and the United States has discussed with other countries fighting in Korea the possibility of imposing an economic boycott or naval blocade on Red China.

Both proposals, highly controversial among the free world members of the U. S. to long-range courses posing difficult problems for the Eisenhower administration.

United Church Official Says Militancy Instead of Education Needed to Fight Liquor Trade

OTTAWA (CP) — An official of the United Church of Canada said temperance forces should rely on "militancy" rather than education in combatting the use of liquor.

"It will be 100 years before we get anywhere if we rely on education, "Rev. W. G. Berry, of Toronto, associate secretary of the church's board of evangelism and social service, said Wednesday.

Mr. Berry was speaking at the annual convention of the Canadian Temperance Federation.

"It is a dangerous assumption to believe that if people know what is right they will do right, now will do it," Mr. Berry said. "... There isn't enough militancy. People ought to do is to launch an aggressive campaign to urge people to refrain from the use of alcoholic beverages."

An issue raised Wednesday was the availability of dry canteens to Canadian troops — some six months today when resolutions are presented to the 50 delegates, representing 18 temperance societies from the YMCA, WCTU and Salvation Army.

Dry Canteens Not Available

In a letter read to the convention, Rev. Fred W. Gordon of Kingston, Ont., said: "Some canteens are available where Canadian troops are stationed at home and overseas.

A defence department spokesman later denied that there was any sense."

"Anyone who has been on a service station knows there are dry canteens where you can get soft drinks and refreshments," the spokesman said. "That is true of them all at the present time."

Rev. John Linton, federation secretary who read Mr. Gordon's letter, said: "This is a matter of formation" that at many army canteens one can't buy soft drinks.

Different With Secretary

Mr. Berry differed with Rev. Albert Johnson, secretary of the Ontario Temperance Federation, over the amount of church backing needed by the temperance movement.

Mr. Johnson said some denominations aren't as enthusiastic about the temperance program, and proposed meetings among church groups to create stronger common action.

Mr. Berry felt this was impractical. "If we wait for unanimous agreement among the churches, we will wait a long time," he said.

BODY RECOVERED

WALLACEBURG (CP) — The body of Fred Johnson, 28, who was drowned with three other Indians when their canoe upset on the St. Clair river Nov. 28 was recovered Wednesday on the shoreline at nearby Walpole Island. Bodies of the other three, Marvin Wrightman, 40, Fred Sands, 30, and Howard Greenbird, 30, were recovered previously.

Child Kidnapped, Returned Dies of Wasting Illness

MONTREAL (CP)—Four-year-old Barbara Nemeroff, who was kidnapped for 12 hours less than a week ago, died in hospital of a wasting illness.

Little Barbara disappeared from her home Feb. 22 last. The parents received a ransom note demanding $50,000 and the incoherent story of a 19-year-old maid about a youth making off with the child.

Next morning Barbara was found, with her 16-year-old abductor by the police, being returned. After the case was cleared up, and her younger sister sent to a mental institution, Barbara fell ill.

How to Substitute Trade for Aid Greatest Problem

—Wrong

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (CP)—Hume Wrong, Canada's ambassador to the United States, says the greatest international economic problem of the day is how to substitute trade for aid.

Speaking Wednesday before the annual convention of the Investment Bankers of America, Wrong said, however, that some form of military aid to the Western world by the U.S. and Canada should continue until it is help to underdeveloped countries.

Primary purpose of the Western world, he said, is to bring economies of its member countries into such a balance that government trade restrictions can be removed. Private investment and payment restrictions as "wasteful and inefficient international trade." He said restoration of convertibility of currencies and unrestricted trading is essential.

He said the present Commonwealth economic conference in London is wrestling with these problems and added that when the new American administration takes office Jan. 20 "the problems certainly will be discussed in broader firm."

He contended that Canada's economic well-being has been stimulated by the admission of government controls.

British W.I. Suggested as 11th Province

Would be Beneficial With Respect to Trade

OTTAWA (CP)—A New Brunswick member suggested in the Commons Wednesday that the tropically-rich British West Indies should become Canada's 11th province.

A. J. Brooks Progressive Conservative member for the constituency of Royal, said the islands seem "at loose ends" these days. Canada could offer security and such a move would be beneficial both because their products were complementary.

"I believe the United States has her eyes on the West Indies at the present time," Mr. Brooks said.

Britain was pulling out her troops. The U.S. was moving in with bases and there was every reason to believe that the West Indies today are looking for some other country with which they might join."

The logical country, to my mind, is our own country of Canada."

Need For Trade

He made the suggestion while speaking of the need for more Commonwealth trade. The islands wanted millions worth of the ladies' products and the Canadian grapefruit, sugar cane and rum. The Indies needed Canada's fish, lumber and many manufactured products.

"It is a tropical country and we are a northern country . . . It would be a great advantage to have a northern country like this if we had a tropical province such as the West Indies would be, in order to round out our country."

The Commons also heard health insurance, wheat and television debated in the rambling throne speech debate which opens the way to discussion of almost any subject.

Dr. R. E. Wodehouse, Conservative member for Kootenay East, said he had been informed by parliamentary assistant to Health Minister Martin and himself by Regina physicians, a 44 federal health grants of more than $100,000,000 will be made for the "best national health plan in the world."

But there is much left to be done yet. There were not yet sufficient facilities.

Critical of C.C.F.

He criticized the CCF which now is circulating a national petition on health insurance. Health insurance, he said, could be achieved through a half-naked plan."

Percy Vivian (Conservative-Herbert) replied. He said steps should be taken to increase the plan now the facilities now available. The fact half the recruits for the services were rejected for health reasons showed Canadian health was not up to par.

Doing Job, He Claims

Andrew Gauthier (L—Lake St. John) said unless there was some action by the federal government to control Canadian television Canada faces the danger of "cultural annexation" by the United States. The CBC was not perfect but it was doing a good job. It had made radio and television were thrown open to private interests the present railway wage issue will probably be settled soon.

Attlee Refutes Author's Claim George VI Asked 1951 Dissolution

LONDON (Reuters) — Clement Attlee, leader of Britain's Labor party and former prime minister, today denied that the late King George VI urged him to call the 1951 election which brought the Conservatives to power.

The denial was made by Allan A. Michie in his recently-published book "The Crown and the People." Michie said that in September, 1951, the ailing king told Attlee he would like to see a more stable administration in case his death brought Princess Elizabeth to the throne.

Attlee then had a majority of only six seats in the House of Commons. An election was held in October and brought Winston Churchill into office. The King died the following February.

Today in a letter to the London press Attlee said his attention had been called to Michie's account purporting "to relate to a private conversation which took place last year with myself when I was prime minister."

"It is suggested that King George VI urged me to ask for the dissolution of Parliament (which automatically calls for an election)," Attlee wrote.

"There is no truth whatever in this statement. In justice to His late Majesty, who was a very strict observer of constitutional principles, I think it right to issue this contradiction."

Traditionally, British monarchs permit former prime in the affairs of government.

Coroner Proposes Faith Healing Ban After Girl's Death

Diabetic Gave Up Insulin After Hearing Evangelist

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Smirle Lawson, provincial coroner of Ontario, said today he expects a jury inquiring into the death of diabetic Mary Taylor of Barrie will suggest that faith healers be banned by law.

Dr. Lawson has taken charge of an investigation into the death of the 19-year-old girl. Her relatives said she died after discontinuing insulin treatments. She and her family had attended religious meetings held by a travelling evangelist.

"It is hard to legislate against religion," Dr. Lawson said today. "But I have every confidence the jury will give great consideration to the necessity of having such law to ban faith healers."

Illness Responsible

He said there seems no doubt Miss Taylor died as a direct result of her illness. "She could no longer needed the insulin which had kept her alive for the last 3 years.

"I think one of the main points the jury must decide is whether this preacher was responsible for the girl's death."

If the jury fixed responsibility in that way, it would be the job of the attorney-general to make recommendations they saw fit to prevent the barrie sects and possible restrictive legislation.

Attorney-General Dana Porter said the coroner's findings will be considered carefully.

"If the coroner sees out of it request, we will have to act," he said.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Ralph S. Miller president of the diabetic Association, said today it is the ef fective treatment for diabetic insulin to the diabetic is like a crutch to the person with a fo ot," she said in a statement. "I have seen the case made, person grow another leg and I have seen proof that they have to make this girl believe.

"Her parents had a right of taking that daily needle that some of them will grasp at anything to relieve their loved ones."

SALVATION ARMY ROBBED

TORONTO (CP)—About $2,008 cheques and cash were stolen Wednesday from a Salvation Army collection kettle in Toronto. Police said the money was taken from the box left unguarded in the office.

CHAPLAINS ATTEND DAY, CONFERENCE

Brig.-Major Archdeacon Arthur Smith, chaplain of the 9th Anti Tank Regiment, RCA (AL) and Capt. Ralph D. McConnell, of Trenton, chaplain of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, attended the two-day conference of Protestant army chaplains held in Kingston Monday and Tuesday.

Fifteen chaplains of the army's Protestant denominations were present at the conference.

MINISTER ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF DANGEROUS DRIVING

Rev. E. Rendell, Napanee, was acquitted on 4 charge of dangerous driving in Lindsay yesterday. The charge was laid after the clergyman's car was struck by a train in his wife's absence last June.

Mr. Rendell said he was returning from a Middle Church conference in Lindsay at the time, and had been watching the school children near a school on No. 7 highway. He said he did not see the railway crossing signs and that he was unable to stop after seeing the train.

PICTON WOMAN GIVEN SEVEN DAYS FOR DRUNK DRIVING

Pleading guilty to driving an automobile while intoxicated, Mrs. Mildred Warner, of Picton, today was sentenced to seven days in jail when she appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in that town.

The accused was arrested on the Bay Bridge Road at 4 p.m. on November 22. She had been in custody since that time. Her driver's will run from the date she was arrested.

Male Members Of Church Enjoy Social Evening

Seventy-three men from the Rolloway Street United Church congregation met on Wednesday for an evening of "fun for men within the church." The executive of the Women's Association, under the leadership of the president, Mrs. Len VanOsten, prepared a buffet style supper in the church Sunday School auditorium, before and after which Mr. C. E. "Pomp" Moynes led in community singing, with Miss Dorothy Dobbs at the piano.

After supper, quizmaster, Dr. Harold Craig, and his panel of experts, were introduced. Panel members Lyle Twidby, James Scriven, Elgin Moynes and Kenneth Wart, confounded the men with their knowledge in "Twenty Questions" and created many a laugh.

The guest speaker, Brigadier Jack Grant, was introduced by Fred Wilson, and his address entitled "Personalities" gave personal glimpses of Winston Churchill and General Montgomery. Members found to be very timely and full of interesting information about the lives of two of our greatest men of today. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the speaker by Mr. Garnet Dobbs.

The chairman, Mr. James Robertson, presided and entertained a motion that each congregation of this kind be part of the life of our church and that an organization — a Men's Club — was desirable. This was supported unanimously and a committee appointed to call the next meeting for the purpose of organization.

During the program, Mr. George Pound, new church officer, was introduced and welcomed by all.

The evening was closed by the minister, Rev. Sidney E. Larman, who gave a brief address and pronounced the benediction.

Two Escapees Given 5 Months By Magistrate

Four hours of brief freedom today meant five months more in jail for two teen-age jailbreakers.

The two youths, John Van Dusen, 18, of Madoc and Harold Grey, 17, of Marmora, were given five months to run consecutively with previous sentences by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in police court today.

Van Dusen was already under sentence for one year for car theft while Grey had been given six months indeterminated for attempted holdup.

The pair effected their escape from the county jail on Tuesday morning when they were being removed from their cells to the corridor to the jail building. They pushed Thomas Price, turnkey, into a small room in the basement of the jail door, and made their getaway.

Price sustained a bruised eye and gave the alarm

City and provincial police were quickly on the job and four hours after the break city officers picked up the escapees while they were walking along No. 37 highway north of College Street.

Charles Thorne, city poundkeeper, who was in the vicinity at the time recognized the youths when they were in Roper's Services Station. Roper immediately called police and the escapees were apprehended shortly afterwards.

Closer Association Between Canada, Commonwealth Urged By Mrs. Fairclough, Hamilton

Closer association between Canada and other peoples of the British Commonwealth of Nations is the greatest method for peace in the world, Mrs. Ellen L. Fairclough, M. P. for Hamilton West, declared last night at Picton Rotary Guild.

The only woman member of the Canadian legislature, Mrs. Fairclough was the featured speaker at the annual banquet closing the two-day convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association.

"Empire," Mrs. Fairclough said, "is a word that has probably fallen into disuse. If the people of Canada could have their way, they would like to call the people or the empire—of different color and creed but every bit as much a part—a partnership in share in the great potential of Commonwealth and in which population expansion would be solved."

In this respect, she continued, it is as necessary for Canadians to forget their prejudices on color or religion.

Mrs. Fairclough described her tour across Canada last year along with members from every province in the Commonwealth. These people, she pointed out, had come to this country to discuss individual and commonwealth problems. They were of all colors, all creeds.

"I had travelled across this country before," she said, "but when Canada was doing I hadn't seen before. I saw it through the eyes of people from foreign lands. The rivers, lakes, mountains and prairies had a special and new significance for me."

The visitors, Mrs. Fairclough continued, were overwhelmed by what they saw on the journey. One member asked her one day when Canada was going to open its doors to other peoples. Another remarked: "I'd like my sons to live in this country." Still another said: "Freely you have received, freely give."

"I'm afraid," Mrs. Fairclough concluded, "we have a tendency to hide ourselves from such problems. We shows them aside. But such problems could play a great role in Canada's potential. We should think then and plan for beauty, power and wealth which is ours."

George White, M. P. for Peterborough, introduced the speaker. W. E. Sandercock, M. P. for West Hastings, thanked Mrs. Fairclough.

Professor W. H. Sproule, of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, was chairman at the banquet.

Sylvia Motley entertained those present with her highly stylized singing.

Over-All Assessment of 12 Municipalities Shows Increase County Council Members Told

Re-assessment of 12 municipalities in the Central Hastings district has been completed members of the Hastings county council were told Wednesday afternoon by county assessor Cecil J. Geen, Belleville, in the report which was given five incorporating villages and seven township municipalities.

Ten of the municipalities reassessed showed assessment increases ranging from 25 per cent for the township of Huntingdon to an increase of 146 per cent for the village of Deloro. In two instances over-all assessments showed a slight decrease. These were Hungerford with a 6.5 per cent decrease and Rawdon with a decrease of 4.5 per cent.

In both instances where decreases in the assessment were shown, the townships had previously been highly assessed it was stated.

Equalization Aim

Equalization of assessments were the aim, he said. The assessment rather than any attempt to increase assessments.

Under the county assessorship system assessments were arrived at by the same process of calculations rather than with assessors working individually.

"The local assessors have worked hard and they have done a good job" Mr. Geen said. "There has been a general agreement on assessments and I think conditions are better than before. It is an improvement over the old system.

In citing the percentage increases in assessment in the various municipalities, Mr. Geen said this did not necessarily reflect a true picture. In many of the municipalities a great deal of the increase in assessment was due to new property or new buildings and was not particularly due to increases on present property.

New Properties Cause

This was particularly true of Marmora village which showed an increase in assessment of 131 per cent. Here new property or recent renovations had gone to increase the total.

At Deloro, the increase had been due to a big jump in industrial assessment. Business assessment of the plant alone jumped from $30,000 to $125,000. Following the reassessment, assessments in Tweed had jumped 95 per cent; Madoc, 103 per cent and Stirling, 78 per cent.

Elsewhere and Grimsthorpe assessments had jumped 27 per cent, a great deal of this being the result of increases in wild land assessments which were almost doubled. This was also true in Tudor and Cashel which had jumped 78 per cent.

In Marmora and Lake townships where the increase had been 30 per cent, the jump was due principally to increase for summer cottage property and for property at Bellehaven Steel Some of the last named property, however, was exempt from taxation, it was pointed out.

The increase in Madoc township had been 39.5 per cent.

Appeals Relatively Few

Reeve George Spencer of Frankford wanted to know if many of the assessments had been appealed and what was the result. Mr. Geen replied the appeals had been relatively few and were not very important. They had mostly been the result of the owners failing to completely understand what was trying to be done. In all cases except three or four, the appeals had been settled in court of revision.

Warden Robert of Madoc township said some of his taxpayers appear dissatisfied that the assessment rate being charged for arable land. However, when it was learned that this rate was actually a much lower rental rate, they seemed more satisfied.

"I am satisfied with the way things have worked out," he said.

Hid to be Increased

Reeve Elmer Wood wanted to know if it was compulsory for assessors to increase the amount they had hydro, a furnace in the farm home, or a silo had been erected. He was told that according to the assessment act land was to be assessed at value with buildings to be assessed at the amount which they would add to the value of land.

It was meant that assessments had to be increased where hydro was installed, or where a furnace was put in.

Reeve T. C. Rollins of Wollaston asked if certain assessments could not be assessed in a lump sum rather than have them broken down, in such a manner which often antagonized the taxpayer. He was told that even when such services were listed on the appraisal card many arguments were given and numerous visits to the property were made unnecessarily when assessments were questioned.

No One to Get Hurt Claim

Reeve Irwin Motley of Marmora township said there was no reason to get hysterical about the re-assessment. What was in a true picture of the thing it is better to have it that come along" he said. "No one is going to get too badly hurt unless there is a change in the municipal equalization system."

Warden Grills summed up the discussion by pointing out the idea of the assessment was not to hurt anybody but to effect an equalization of assessments which in many instances had been out of line.

Mr. Geen said that a start had been made on re-assessing Thurlow township while during the winter months it was thought work could be done in the remaining villages and hamlets before taking on any of the other townships.

Wilbert Jones Shoots Wolf Weighing 52 Lbs.

MARMORA — Considered to be the largest to be shot in that particular area, a wolf weighing fifty two pounds and measuring 5 feet 4 inches from nose to tip of tail, fell a victim to the rifle of Wilbert Jones of Marmora township early Saturday last eight on Sunday. This farmer was returning to the house from the barn after doing morning chores when he heard his dog barking and noticed the canine to be playing with the wolf in the barnyard about a hundred yards from the house.

The dog running around the wolf held him there until Mr. Jones could take aim. He wounded the wolf with the second shot but took another twelve to end its life because it ran to and fro on a flat field before it finally died in what attracted the wolf to the near vicinity of the house nothing more than a dead hen which Jones saw was mentioned as having any possible connection.

That evening wolves were heard for the first time for some months, almost indicating that the unfortunate member of their pack had been murdered.

Mr. Jones has the pelt ready for later claiming the bounty.

NEW TB TREATMENT

DURBAN, South Africa (CP)— Dr. J. J. Le Roux, health secretary, says a new treatment developed in hospitals shows more promising results for tuberculosis cases where both lungs are affected. Affected cavities are filled with hydrogenated fats to which an antibiotic is added.

Trenton Delegates Request County Grant to Assist In Paying Deficit at Hospital

A request for a grant to assist in paying off a deficit in the first year of operation for the Trenton Memorial Hospital was heard in Hastings county council Wednesday, Mayor Kenneth Couch and Ald. Claude Graham, members of the hospital board addressed council seeking the grant.

The request was laid over for consideration later in the session.

The Trenton mayor told county councillors that the hospital in that town was this year about paying its way but noted it had run up a $35,000 deficit during its ten months operation in 1951. Roughly half of this amount was an actual cash deficit, the balance being in depreciation.

Mr. Couch told that in 1951 there had been 258 paying patients from the county of Hastings and 15 indigents, while so far this year 222 county patients had numbered 256 with 13 indigents. With an average cost of $13.54 per patient day, it was noted the hospital was living heavily on public ward beds and on indigents.

Loss Figured at $12,000

The public ward rate at the hospital was $6.35 per day while it received $3 per day from the county. This left a grant of $6 was received from the province for the indigent beds. It was felt that the loss to the hospital on public ward and indigent beds would be $12,000 had been about $3,000.

A letter from Welland county was read asking the provincial government to assume full costs of administration of justice. The brief held that the present system is unfair in that costs are unfair to the municipalities.

A request from the Bay of Quinte High School Area Board asked Council to give consideration to changing the assessment of the dangerous for school bus travel during the icy weather.

Tyendinaga Reeve Moore agreed that this was a bad hill and that it was dangerous during icy weather. He noted, however, that it would cost considerable to make a change in the road.

Deputy-Reeve Graham, of Tweed, as chairman of finance and public property, presented his committee's report. He noted that a grant of $1,200 had been made to the recently established Belleville Community Chest. The allocations were $450 to C.A.S., $150 to the Y.M.C.A., $150 to the V.O.N., and $50 each to the Boy Scout Association and to St. John Ambulance. No allocation had been given to the Navy League as the council had already given this organization $150 in 1952.

Grants Awarded

Grants of $200 each to the Madoc and Marmora high schools were ordered paid for the fall term of 1952 as each of these schools was now authorized to teach agricultural subjects. He noted that grants of $500 each must be paid to high schools authorized to teach agriculture.

New chairs had been authorized for the law library and judge's office. These had been ordered.

So far this year indigent accounts totalling $21,988.66 had been paid with Children's Aid costs amounting to $23,331.34. In each instance November and December accounts are still to be paid.

Boiler repairs at the court house had been completed at a cost $587 and the resulting plant was now working satisfactorily.

Mr. Graham noted that the new arrangements with regard to administration of justice comes into effect on Jan. 1, 1953. For 1952, Trenton is paying the county $1500 over the former agreement which ended June 30. The $1500 additional covers the last six months of the current year.

Three Wildlife Movies Enjoyed By Club Members

Jack Martin gave members and friends of the Quinte Field Naturalists' Club meeting at the Parasite Laboratory on Monday evening an interesting overview of three wildlife movies being sponsored by the club early in 1953 at the Collegiate Auditorium.

Mr. Martin who has seen some of the films in other cities described the scenic beauty, colored photography and fascinating subject material as presented personally by the cameramen who themselves professional naturalist and photographers.

The Club president showed several color transparencies illustrating his work on the control of a serious weed pest St. John's-wort, by means of beetles which he collected in large numbers in California and Idaho and released in southern British Columbia. These colorful, metallic-green -and-blue beetles have destroyed hundreds of thousands of acres of this weed in California and have perished following the disappearance of the weed rather than feed on other plants.

Their survival during one winter in B.C. provides optimism for satisfactory control of the weed. The large transitions of the yellow-flowered weed photographed in B.C. and the western States were interesting to the club as plants occur fairly commonly in southern Ontario.

Cookies and coffee were enjoyed during the informal discussion which followed.

IN MEMORIAM

CHAMBERS. — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Gordon, who passed away December 4th, 1951.
Sad was the day and we will not say
How much we miss you dear
With a silent smile and a tear of life
You are always near.
Time has wandered into an unknown land
And left us dreaming how very sad it is Nothing must be since the hours flew by
And you — oh, you, who the wildest years,
For the old-time step and glad appearance
Think of her fating as one, so dear,
Who left us all with aching hearts of love
Think of her still as the same, I say—
This is not dead — she is just away.
—Sadly missed and ever remembered by Mother, Son and Daughter. D4

VANDOME. — In loving memory of William J. Vandome, who passed away December 4th, 1950.
You left us quietly,
Your thoughts unknown,
We never said goodbye,
We are proud to own,
A memory remembered by Dessye and Mother. D4

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Industrials and base metals continued to lead a general decline today in a fairly active afternoon stock market trading.

Volume for the first three hours totalled 621,000 shares.

Acrot traded most actively in the base metals list, losing 15 cents to a turnover of 34,000 shares. Eastern Metals, also heavily traded for the loss of pennies. Higher-priced issues slipped, led by a more-than-$1 loss in Consolidated Smelters. United Asbestos drew fifty cents.

Senior golds and junior producers slipped. Hollinger, Lake Shore and Bulolo dropped 40 cents. Most pilot issues were down less than 5 cents. Prospects balanced a narrow list of small gains and losses and holding companies slipped.

Western oil issues outnumbered gains slightly.

SENATOR TAFT IS ANNOYED

Many Americans will probably have a different view of it, but we suspect that President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower has not quite yet forgiven himself of having submitted to the humiliating role which the inescapable demands of political expediency had cast upon him last October. As a political novice he had no way of knowing the many and strange obligations which devolve upon a party leader. . . .

The old maxim that "politics make strange bedfellows" was borne home to him in painful ways during the presidential campaign. It was quite obvious that more than once he was an embarrassed and uncomfortable candidate. But it finally turned that the American people could completely forgive him, even if he could not forgive himself. Because it was, after all, the people, and not the party leaders, who elected him.

That is why, we think, that the President-elect has felt justified in shedding the politician's role and in acting the way General "Ike" Eisenhower would act, and the way the people would expect him to act. Anyone who has paid attention to his cabinet appointments in the past two weeks could not help but general selecting his staff officers. And from any quarter that it might matter, there has been nothing but approval of his selections.

Or rather, that was so until Tuesday of this week. In the last appointments to round out his cabinet team, Eisenhower chose Democrats and Independents. He chose a prominent A.F.L. union leader, Martin Durkin, as as Secretary of Labor. The verb, "startled", is however, something of an understatement in describing its effect upon Senator Robert Taft, old guard Republican leader, whom "Ike" defeated for the nomination. In more expressive terms it can be said that the senator "blew his top." For some days Mr. Taft had exhibited admirable patience. Taft-men were almost completely ignored in cabinet designations. It was too much when a labor man who had been a strong advocate for repeal of the Taft-Hartley (labor) law, and an admitted supporter of Stevenson, was given the nod as Secretary of Labor.

The senator from Ohio issued an angry statement. Somehow the Senator construed it as "an affront to millions of union members who had the courage to defy the edict of officials who had invoked the Taft-Hartley law to censor." We rather imagine that many in the ranks of American labor would be somewhat amused to see Senator Taft rising to such heights of indignation on their behalf.

After all Eisenhower has promised an overhauling of the Taft-Hartley legislation. While it is true that both A.F.L. and C.I.O. leaders endorsed Stevenson, the rank-and-file of labor in the U.S. has never affiliated with political parties. The dictum of the A.F.L.'s venerated founder, the late Samuel Gompers, to "elect your friends and defeat your enemies" has been the guiding principle. That was the course they pursued in November. And we rather imagine that the President-elect could not have shown greater appreciation for that support than he did in naming an outstanding labor official to his cabinet.

To be sure, it has seldom happened to Senator Taft, but he was rather transparent in the heat of the understandable indignation he felt at the appointment. He really meant it was an affront to the author of the Taft-Hartley Law.

WAS IT A MISTAKE?

We cannot recall what the considerations were five or six years ago when it was decided that the permanent seat of the United Nations should be in the United States.

Whatever they might have been, we do recall that the healthy spirit of prevailing friendship then on the international scene has since undergone a change so drastic that it is scarcely credible that the sanguine hopes of that time could be restored to the disheartening and sad picture of today. And in this thought we are prompted to wonder whether it was a great mistake to have chosen New York as the capital.

At that time perhaps it was not compatible with the high aspirations for a new world order to have started once again on the broken foundation at Geneva. But from where we now look we can see that a neat or fancied illomen could have prescribed a more complete and heartbreaking breakdown than now confronts us.

Certainly the United Nations has never had anything comparable to the strange spectacle in New York this week where a U.S. Senate internal security committee is investigating and subpoenaing communists in the U.N. secretariat and U.N. agencies. If this does not seem strange to Americans, and a lot of people in the other Western democracies, it should. And it should.

That the U.S. Senate should concern itself with the loyalty of citizens representing the United States in any capacity with the U.N. is entirely proper. But that is not what this whole line of inquiry can appear to be in the eyes of a great many who are not Americans. It is being made to appear that the United States is investigating the United Nations itself in the Communists. And the very thing that Soviet Russia wants most is to convince all the wavering and uncertain people of the world in the current cold war crisis that the U.N. has become the tool of an imperialist, war-mongering, anti-communist America.

How perfectly this view fits in with the Communist line is recognized only when we stop to look at the picture from the distorted viewpoint of Red propaganda. If there is one undeniable fact it is that there are Communist nations which have been fully accredited members of the U.N. since its inception. To merely point this out and to point to the Senate's current inquiry is to provide confirmation of the distortion. To those in faraway places the Reds need only say, we have told you that the U.S. would eliminate all Communist representation in the councils of the United Nations, now you have only to look to New York, the seat of capitalist imperialism, to see it taking place. If we were looking at it from that faraway viewpoint it would be a very plausible picture to us.

Perhaps this is only a small incident in the broad scene of U.N. activities upon which so many other unhappy incidents have occurred, but it is one which could not have happened in Geneva. We must wonder whether the same thing could be said about many of the others.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WITH WHAT YOU HAVE

There is one thing about not being rich — you have what the rich rarely have. You have lots of wants.

We never seem to get too old to enjoy the fun of saying, however, that we get these wants supplied. We don't have to wait for Santa Claus to come in our mind for years. But each one fulfilled over the years adds to us a welcomed thrill.

I recall, as a boy, that I looked forward to the time when I could afford to eat the bananas which I could hold! It was a rare thing to afford more than an occasional one, even though the price then was about three for a nickel, but since the days of poverty I have not afford to buy dozens of them at all, my appetite for bananas seemed to have vanished in that along the way.

That's the way it is with wants. We can have scores of them, but they stay up in the realm of our mind, like pigeons in a barn flying out just for exercise! It's fun to have wants. They give us speculating and dreaming. It wouldn't be healthy for us to have no wants at all. We would lose incentive and interest.

No matter what our station in life, we should be happy over what blessings we have. We have far more than we stop to take into account. When we get into a complaining mood we ought to stop and take an inventive and note how many more blessings are ours than we realize. We should try and be happy with what we have. It is the possessions that give to us the greatest happiness or satisfaction. It is an appreciation for what we have. Others may have far less.

Thoreau has left us nothing in possessions. He built his crude cabin on Walden Pond himself at a cost less than $30. But one day he once made the remark that he owned possessions to the acres of real estate — without ever having to touch a single one of them. What he meant was that he looked upon those acres and enjoyed them without any ownership accruing that in his mind.

We can be more with what we have than we suspect. It's use that counts. The small home owner with beautiful reproductions of great works of art may appreciate that art more, and be may be a truer owner of the original than the millionaire who bought them. By taking advantage of what we have, we keep gaining more!

"IKE WAVED AT ME!"

I like the pride of the little lad
Who stood with the throng to see
The General pass, then told his dad:
"Ike waved at me!"

A little boy in a teeming crowd
With a glorious memory
Something rich only a glimpse allowed—
"Ike waved at me!"

TO GET SOAKED

(Kitchener-Waterloo Record)

If a person who saved that money for a rainy day isn't careful about it, someone will come along and soak him.

He took to himself that wave of the hat
And it long will be
Before that boy will stop telling that:
"Ike waved at me!"

Though General, the honors that you've received
Time will never dim.
It should warm your heart that a boy believed
You waved at him.

Northern Messenger

(Montreal Gazette)

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has for years been carrying a good work in the Northern Messenger Service. This service has started again for the winter. On Sunday night the ether was humming with messages of cheer, of friendliness and of encouragement to men and women whose concept of duty consigns them to isolated stations in the North.

It requires only a map or Canada and a very little imagination to realize what such messages mean to those people, some of whom receive mail only twice a year and whose radios are often adversely affected by the Northern Lights. Those people, missionaries, teachers, nurses, Hudson's Bay officials and Canadian Mounted Police and, more latterly, construction workers and Department of Transport employees, in the territories that face the freeze-up in October. Some of these areas are not clear of ice before July.

Most of these people have the satisfaction at times that they are doing worthwhile jobs under arduous and sometimes hazardous conditions, but they are human and their Arctic environment produces psychological problems well known to inhabitants of more southern climes.

So the C.B.C.'s Northern Messenger Service provides men and women at Chesterfield Inlet, Aklavik and Yellowknife to Port Harrison and Cape Hopes Advance. Cape Dorset and Frobisher with the opportunity of hearing the voices of friends in Eastern Canada, Columbia to Newfoundland and from points in the United States. The messages are usually brief, personal human, read by announcers who have the knack of making the occasion a festive one.

Reassurances are given that all is well down here. The baby has taken his first steps or cut his first tooth. Mother has a cold. The Smiths were over last night and the Joneses are away but on the way back. Grandma Jones passed away last week. We have had a new bathroom put on the barn.

The tragedy of love, more or less thinly disguised, also plays a part in these messages and the Northern Messenger has singled out a budding romance. But it would take a callous, casual listener indeed to be unmoved by the sincerity and poignancy of these messages, and the service which is truly one of the fine things that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation does.

Chosen Emblem

(Halifax Chronicle-Herald)

The maple leaf as a popular sense a national emblem in Canada long before 1867. In 1860 it was worn by Canadians as the badge or emblem worn by Canadians in the procession in Toronto which welcomed the Prince of Wales (afterwards King Edward VII) on his visit to that city; and in the following year the maple leaf was incorporated in the badge of the 100th Regiment (Royal Canadians).

There is evidence, indeed, that the maple leaf was regarded as a national emblem in Canada as early as 1847. Sketches in that year there was published in Toronto a literary annual known as The Maple Leaf, edited by the late Rev. John McCaul, who expressed in the first issue what called "by the name of the chosen emblem of Canada."

1905 Record Still Stands

(Kansas City Star)

French trains streaking from Paris toward the Riviera are now regarded as the world's fastest, but the United States still holds the all-time record on rails.

France's passenger streamliners to the Mediterranean seashore are electric. From Paris to Dijon—195 miles—they average more than 60 an hour. On from Lyon, 194 miles past Dijon, the average drops only to 7% while the 470 miles from that French capital to Nice are covered at 66 miles an hour, notes the National Geographic Society.

The highest speed ever attained by a train, 127.06 miles an hour reached in 1905 by the Pennsylvania Special, predecessor to the Pennsylvania railroad's Broadway Limited. The steam powered Special kept it up for three timed miles in Ohio. Today's streamliners come nowhere near such speeds on such speeds on such stretches.

Furthermore, the French expresses have proved they keep something in reserve, starting from Paris, delaying most railway by a hot box, the Paris-Lyon-Mediterranean line made up lost time by averaging 70 miles an hour over a run of almost 140 continuous miles. She wound up at destination with an hour to spare. Sometimes only three minutes behind the timetable.

When factors such as load, size of motive power and layout of the line are taken into consideration, the closest American approach to the French record holders are the three runs operated by the Long Island Railroad between Grand Island and North Platte, Neb. These crack trains cover the 137 miles.

The first three car Italian electric train covered the 195.3 miles between Florence and Milan at 101 miles an hour. The fastest steam stop-to-stop rail run ever made by a steam locomotive on the world's track 100 was the Cen-Tral Hudson's 466 hit 113 in 1893 and was for years the fastest thing on wheels. In the early 1930's, the British Cheltenham Flyer Swindon to Paddington, was adjudged the fastest regular daily average of 71.4 and one test run at better than 81.

Secret Of Long Life

(Edmonton Journal)

A Soviet pseudo-scientist recently put forward as a recipe for long life yoghurt, made from the milk of goats.

This man, a Moslem called Haji (which means "the venerable") Abbas, is at least, 140 years old, by the evidence of his British passport. And his physical vigor and British health administration in Malaya made a mistake years ago when they issued him only for a year. He may soon surpass the record of Thomas Parr, who died in 1634, at the age of 160.

Oh, yes, and the "secret" of his long life? Hard work, says Haji Ilias.

PARKING HAZARD

(New Yorker)

Overheard, one lady to another: "The thing I hate most about parking is that awful crash!"

Strength for the Day

NEVER TO BE FORGOTTEN

The word happiness does not occur in the entire Bible. Jesus only once (John 13:17) used the word "happy." Yet the Bible is always talking about joy. One of the outstanding promises of the Christian gospel is that men shall have joy. There is nothing gloomy about the gospel.

But the gospel instead of speaking about happiness, speaks about blessedness. The English word "happiness" comes from the word "hap" meaning "fortune" or "chance." Happiness, therefore, is a variety of "fortuitous concourse." From a pleasant combination of fortunate circumstances. The words "blessed" and "blessedness" come from an Anglo-Saxon word meaning "consecrated with blood." The Bible pays almost no attention to the satisfaction which comes from the possession of riches or from being able to have one's own way. The Bible is full of praise for the profit of that satisfaction which comes from the setting aside of self—from sacrifice, from the shedding of one's blood, if need be, for a good cause or for the relief of someone who needs relief. Therefore, Jesus said, "Blessed are the poor in spirit: the pure in heart, the peacemakers and even those who are persecuted for righteousness sake."

Jesus set all the standards of the world on their heads. He turned the world and mankind's ways of thinking upside down. Many of his words never has been nor will ever be forgotten.

Personal Health Talks

IMPORTANT NOTICE

We regret to announce that effective at once, due to exchange problems, mail difficulties, etc., Dr. Brady can no longer answer personal letters from readers nor furnish pamphlets or booklets. However, Dr. Brady's health column will continue to give up-to-the-minute information on health matters as heretofore.

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THE SIDE OF SEVENTY

In our preoccupation with the tendency of teen age children we too readily overlook an allied condition which is nearly as frequent in persons who are or ought to be retired, pensioned or relegated, to a purely advisory status. Now, please, old timers, don't get miffed about it—remember, I'm on your side this time.

If you carried a torch or even argued with your neighbors over issues of the Cleveland-Harding campaign, your present trouble may be due to hypothyroidism rather than to what happened on Nov. 4.

Unfortunately the manifestations of hypothyroidism are likely to be accredited to the aging process and therefore not properly treated. The principal manifestations are mental, emotional and physical inertia, puffiness of face or just the eyelids, dry, brittle hair and a dry, scaly skin.

A reader who probably needs an iodin ration but won't get it, now that I suggested it, writes: "Dear Dr. Brady:

Your articles on the subject of colds in relation to chilling and amount of protection worn are timely and only typical of one's intelligence but also a menace to the health of this general vicinity.

Sincerely,
(Signed)

That reminds me of another sign of symptom of iodin deficiency or hypothyroidism—we may prefer to call it: diminished intolerance to cold.

You don't know how it is—always one or two of the old girls at the bridge party will insist on keeping all windows and doors closed while the rest of you suffer with the heat.

A good many seniors with hypothyroidism or sluggish thyroid gland function complain of vague aches and pains in head and legs, drowsiness in the daytime but poor sleep nights, poor memory, disturbance and "indigestion" whether these are due to hypothyroidism can be determined by a short "therapeutic test" will tell. That means of course of thyroid extract, under the supervision of the physician, or in mild cases the iodin ration.

I have taken my iodin ration daily since Thory was a pup. The truth is that I am not a heavy investible is that you do not take your iodin in excess. Some "authority" who doesn't know what iodin means has called it "dangerous."

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Soap and Water

Will soap and water washing sterilize dishes used by a person with open or closed tuberculosis? Mrs. R. J., Ont.

Answer—Washing dishes with soap and hot water is the best way to disinfect them, no matter what disease the person using them has had. Wash them with any satisfactory detergent and hot water. Soap is a detergent, remember.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In a village general store, towards the end of the afternoon or in the evening, there is usually quite a gathering. Man, woman and child, they are interested spectators of the store, some sitting on chairs or boxes, some leaning on counters all chatting cheerfully. You might think they are in here just to pass the time.

The storekeeper and his wife and helper are busy waiting on two or three at the counter, but they are standing at or leaning across the counter.

Being a stranger, you might come in and go straight to the counter and get alongside or behind those being attended to. If you do, you will notice a sort of cold stir in the air amidst the gathering. For that you are being a stranger. You are getting out of turn.

In the country store, the merchant or his wife or helper is not to keep track of who is next. The customers are attend to in the order they arrive. Each one, as he comes in, if you will take note, observes who is already in the store, and knows that he or she is last among this lot. As newcomers arrive, they take their place behind the last one who has arrived.

Now, if you are a stranger and you come in and go straight to the counter and get alongside or behind those being attended to, you are violating one of the customs that prevail in the village and have to take your turn in the village store. Since you have not got the advantage to break the tradition of good manners in the country, you are treated as a stranger to the city, where your bad manners are entirely normal, and you feel utterly at home.

Dirty Weather

(Farmer's Advocate)

How often we hear people complaining about dirty weather! Rainfall, even up their cost and tears when it rains and use unprintable language. A rainy weekend is a scourge that destroys the holiday mood, makes everyone catty, mars smiles and children insufferable pests.

During the summer, in most parts, any generally from September on, rainfall has been slim across the whole continent and now a great many city people are inclined as to water, farm wells are dry and farmers are drawing water from streams. Spring creeks to bubble, rivers are running low, much fall ploughing remains to be done and the fall wheat is not only scanty growth. The fire hazard is extreme.

For the most part, men and governments have got over their reluctance, generally speaking, to get rid of the dirty weather gangs and men and governments should make every effort to get it into the ground.

St. Michael's Academy Holds Commencement Exercises

Owing to the limited space in the auditorium, it was decided to hold the annual commencement exercises in conjunction with the regular P.T.A. meeting, on Monday evening.

Mr. K. C. McCallum presided for the brief business meeting, after which he called on Karl Belanger who acted as chairman for the remainder of the evening. A motion was passed that a record player be purchased for one of the primary rooms at St. Michael's Academy and a radio for the primary room at Holy Rosary School. It was also decided that a trust would be provided before Christmas for the children of both schools. The attendance plaques were won by Sister Mary Rose's class and Sister Mary Cyrilla's class.

There was a short programme consisting of choruses by the senior girls, and a vocal selection by a trio of intermediate boys. A primary group presented a choral speaking number and acted several nursery rhymes.

Certificates Presented

Sports Prizes

Dr. F. R. Ross presented prizes donated by him for the girl and the boy who were outstanding for their contribution to sports and who had been satisfactory pupils academically:

$5 to Mary Jane McNally and $5 to Lou St. Denis.

Prizes were also awarded as follows to the pupils who ranked highest in music at St. Michael's Academy:

Graded 2 Cases For ARTHRITIC PAIN

"For years ago when I went to the country I could get about only with the help of two canes," writes Mrs. J. A. Mowry, 219 Newman St., Saint John, N.B. "I suffered greatly from the pain of arthritis and rheumatism. This miserable pain bothered me day and night. I heard about T-R-C's. T-R-C's gave me the first relief I'd had in years. This year I'm able to do my housework. I do not need canes. Unable to T-R-C's."

Don't suffer needlessly when one can get lounge-for relief from Arthritic or Rheumatic pain with Templeton's T-R-C's — Canada's LARGEST-SELLING proprietary medicine specific. Ask for each capsule. Only 65c, $1.35 at druggists. T-620

Music Studio:

$3 donated by Mr. T. Scanlan for highest marks in Grades 6, 7 and 8 piano, to Pauline Lally.

$3 donated by the C.W.L. for highest marks in Grades 2, 4, and 5 piano, to Mary Jo Cannon; $3 donated by Sister Superior, St. Michael's Convent, for highest standing in Grade 1 and 3 piano, to Stephanie Butler; $3 donated by Rev. G. O'Meara, for the boy obtaining highest marts in piano, to Donnie Cunningham; $3 donated by Rev. G. O'Meara, for highest marks in theory to Ann Lew.

For Faithfulness

Two awards were presented by Very Rev. Dean Garvin to the boys who had been most faithful in their attendances as Sanctuary boys; $4 to Leo Finnegan and $4 to John Black.

Very Rev. Dean Garvin, in a brief address, commended the pupils who had won prizes and also those who had successfully completed their year's work. Rev. Father Michael of Holy Rosary Parish, also spoke briefly.

After the singing of the National Anthem, refreshments were served by the mothers of Miss Fluery's and Miss Murphy's class and Sister Mary Cyrilla's class.

Parents and The Adolescent Subject of Interesting Address

On Monday evening the Home and School Club at the Collegiate heard an interesting address on the oft discussed subject "Adolescence" by Miss Laird, who is assistant professor of Psychology at Queen's University. Miss Laird came with a wide experience in education and travel, having received her Master of Arts and Bachelor of Education degrees at the University of Edinburgh, and having travelled and studied in most of the leading countries in the world. She did not pursue her subject along the usual stereotyped course of the problem of adolescence, but proceeded to talk on a basis which could mean that the parents, rather than the adolescents themselves, are the real problem.

Miss Laird at the beginning of her talk stated that psychologists are not necessarily moralists in their approach to the science, although in their ordinary everyday living, they as others should be but in their approach to psychology they are only interested in the behavior or living organisms and as a particular study, human life, and the basic causes of its behavior.

Gradual Change

Adolescence does not follow a pattern of definite steps, but is rather a long gradual change.

Interspersed in her talk, Miss Laird was very refreshing to her audience with a keen but not affected sense of humor. She stated that many parents and some teachers had had arrived at a state of maturity themselves and could, therefore, be of little help in helping adolescents to that state.

A child, according to its age, feels that its parents are at the end of their age of usefulness and enjoyment of life as young as 20 and reaching up to 40 years of age, depending upon the age of the child. The younger the child the earlier does it consider that the age of youthfulness and happiness of its parents is over, at this age, in the child's estimation, the parents are about finished and ready to be put where they can bother no one. This accounts for the tendency of children growing all the fun and enjoyment of youth in the few years in which they believe they have to enjoy it. This picture, in the minds of children, of things to come is portrayed to them in a great many cases by the parents.

Points of Assessment

The members of the audience were asked to measure their own maturity by a survey, according to the problems which adolescence has to face. They are: First—the consensus of family life in regard to tolerance and patience, and the child's outlook brought about by family conditions. Second—the attitude of the parents particularly the father toward his work, that very essential thing to human happiness. The child's outlook can be affected by the father and the parent's attitude to his work which he brings home and his attitude to them. In other words, whether his job is fun or drudgery. Third—the basis of human relations and the striving of adolescents to be just themselves and get along with other people who also want to do just that. In other words, tolerance again. Fourth—the philosophical question of the purpose of life and of moral decisions, and here the example of the parents rather than their dictatorship counts.

The proper answers to these four questions determines to a large extent if the adolescents goal of maturity is properly reached and an individual contribution made to a happier state of world affairs.

Miss Laird's talk stimulated a great interest on the part of the parents who consulted with her on their own problems well past the closing time of the meeting.

Mr. Jack Bennet was chairman of the meeting and Mr. Phil Allcorn introduced the speaker who was thanked by Mr. Ken Atwell, a vice-president of the club. Mrs. Campbell presented a report from the Room Mothers of the various forms.

The chairman announced that the January meeting would take the form of "Open House" to parents to give them an opportunity to visit the children's teachers, who would be on hand to meet the parents. The chairman also stressed the importance of the parents taking this opportunity of getting acquainted.

The meeting closed with a singsong led by Mrs. L. Langlois and Mr. Phil Allcorn, followed by a social period with refreshments.

Make Your Steamed Puddings Early

By Mary Moore

Your faithful old dog Trey worked on a pudding recipe last year during Christmas week, but then it was too late for me to give you a second recipe for Christmas, 1951, so I put it away with copious notes and heavy underlining-reminders of its success with family and guests and to give it to you in this column for Christmas pudding release of 1952.

The time has arrived.

But you people have ideas too. One girl wants to see a Carrot Pudding, and another "a really tip-top fig pudding."

So if you are in a pudding-making mood, let's up and at 'em.

CAUTION:

Do not store pudding containing fruit in aluminum or tin or tin-coated molds in which they have been steamed. When your pudding is steamed in these remove them when cold, wrap str-light in wax paper and towels and store in covered crocks in cold place. (This does not apply to puddings steamed in earthenware bowls.) Then if you want to you may unwrap them at the day of using, and reheat for 1 hour in mold in which they were steamed to keep their shapes.

Many a mold has been pitted (red pitted right through) where currants or raisins or other fruits come in contact with the metal during the storing period, so be warned.

STEAMED PLUM PUDDING

Into a bowl put 1 cup unsifted flour and add 3-4 lb. clean sultana raisins, 4 or 5 oz. broken walnuts, 4 oz. chopped citron peel, and mix well to flour the fruits. Sift together in another bowl 1 cup sifted flour, 1 teaspoon each salt, soda, cinnamon, nutmeg, 1-2 teaspoon allspice, 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 3-4 cup brown sugar. Beat 4 eggs well and add to them 1-2 cup evaporated milk, 1-2 cup water, 1-4 cup molasses, and 1 cup suet. Now combine all of these ingredients, and stir until well blended. Grease molds well and fill about half slightly over 2-3 full. Cover snugly. Steam 4 hours in covered steaming pan, adding enough water in in steamer at all times to keep steam circulating around puddings. Till give you the softer hard sauce we used on this in a week or so.

STEAMED CARROT PUDDING

Into a large bowl grate carrots until you have 1 cup. Do same with parsnip potato. Immediately cover with 1 cup brown sugar to prevent potatoes browning. Add 1 1-4 cups fine breadcrumbs, 1 cup each currants (cleaned and dried), raisins, and 3-4 cup fine suet. Stir this well then sift in 1-2 teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon each salt and cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon allspice, 1-4 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-2 cup unsifted flour. Stir until well mixed then add 2 tablespoons corn syrup and 2 teaspoons milk. When well mixed spoon into well greased molds, cover tightly and steam 3 hours. This pudding cannot be expected to keep as long as Blessed Event puddings are but delicious and not at all soggy.

STEAMED FIG PUDDING

Bright gold in color and universally popular.

Beat until creamy 1 cup fine suet and 1 cup sugar, then beat in 4 egg yolks, then 1 cup milk and 3 tablespoons orange or pineapple juice. Put through grinder and add 1 lb. figs which have been steamed and dried if they were not moist when bought. Grate orange rind until you have 1 teaspoon, and add it with 1 nutmeg freshly grated too. Mix together 1 1-2 cups fine dry breadcrumbs, 2 teaspoon baking powder and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Add flour. Then fold in 3 stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into well-greased large mold and steam for 4 hours, being sure water in steamer is kept up to at least a 1-inch level.

I will give sauces that are appropriate for these puddings in plenty of time.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Graceful Movements

Attractive bearing and pleasing motion will make any woman appear distinguished. They create poise and body equilibrium. They are a combination of physical and mental forces that make for elegance. Graceful lines cannot always be cultivated, but grace of motion is a quality that is possible to every woman.

Even though the hairdo may be outmoded and the complexion brushed by time's fingers, the woman who has a light step and carries herself with splendid will command admiration. How many women do you know who have a queenly bearing? Not many, it seems to be a quality that belongs to the past. Stand on a busy by-way and note the women who pass. Some lope, some take mincing steps, some have their shoulders thrown forward. Many of the heavyweights swing their hips and waddle. Some of the younger girls sporting high heels, clatter along in an awkward manner.

Several old-time stage stars are blessed with charm of movement. A few of the movie favorites have unusual grace, but not all of them.

There cannot be rhythmic movements unless the musculature is strong and resilient. It posture is not what it should be, the muscles do not function normally. Through lack of activity they lose tone, become perfect tenements for fat cells.

Unless the spinal column is kept tall, there will be a queer line about the waistline and the upper portion of the back will assume an ugly bulge.

"Firm muscles, well blended, harmoniously developed are a part of the new Figure Beauty," writes Dorothy Nye in her interesting book "New Bodies for Old". "Their perfect co-ordination carries over into everything we do, from smoking a cigarette to lifting the baby, into walking, dancing and all sports.

Grace starts in the mind.

"The silhouette of such a body is an undulating silhouette. It flows in a series of wave-like curves that rise and fall in logical sequence from head to toe. Every line is honest, dynamic, and suggests that active muscles underneath are perfect are its proportions that it gives no impression of being muscular."

Just what are you doing to keep in fine physical form, to retain youthful lines, and to cultivate distinguished bearing? You must be conscious of the desire to appear alive and alert. Grace, like some other beauty qualities, starts in the mind.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

When you're uncertain, wait!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going steady with a boy named George for over a year. Six months ago he joined the Navy.

I want to get married, because I am ready to settle down, but I'm afraid to get married because his married brother didn't make a go of it, and he thinks the same thing will happen to us. When he was home he very seldom took me anywhere, and if he did, he took another boy with us. Now there is another fellow that I used to go out with who is home from overseas. He tells me that he has loved me for a long time and wants to marry me. I went out with him on his furlough, although I never should have done it, when I was going steady.

Do you think I should wait for George to come home and continue to go with him even though he is afraid to get married, or go out with this other fellow? I would hate to make a mistake.

M. U.

Dear M.U.:

The only way for a girl in your state of mind to avoid making a mistake is to give herself time to let her feelings straighten out. I don't think that you are in love with either of these boys. You are simply anxious to get married, which is normal enough, but hazardous unless you have the good judgment to distinguish between your wish to get married and your feelings for some individual boy.

The best thing for you to do is to forget about "going steady" and go out with any boy who asks you for a date. If you will do that, say for a year, you will be in a far better position to make wise decisions.

In the meantime, too, George's ideas may mature enough to make him realize that the individual makes or breaks his own marriage, and that what someone else has done with his, has no bearing whatever on what anyone else may do.

Distressed by Unhappy Family Relationship

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am terribly upset by the attitude of my in-laws toward myself and family.

It all came to a head on my four-year-old son's birthday, when we expected the grandparents and other relatives either to call him and wish him a happy birthday, as they usually do, or to drop in during the evening. They did not do either, now did they send him a card and a gift as they always have done before.

Neither the grandparents nor any of my husband's sisters or brothers and their husbands and wives ever come to visit us, although they visit each other. We have invited them, time and time, and we have visited all of them many times, but they never come to our house. Apparently we're not good enough for them, for they use the excuse every time but never drop in.

I think grandparents should love their grandchildren and they claim they do, but they never come to see them, and, if we did not take the children to see them, I'm sure they would never see them at all, even though we live just a few blocks apart.

Mrs. F. K.

Dear Mrs. F. K.:

There certainly seems to be something wrong with the relationship between your family and your husband's family, and it seems to me that it is up to your husband to find out what the trouble is, if you are sure you have no idea yourself. It sounds as though your husband had quite a large family connection, and surely among them all there must be one, at least, who would help set this matter straight, if either he, or perhaps yourself, were to approach that one in a friendly, sincere manner.

I suggest you talk this over with your husband and ask him if the two of you might not go together to some one of the relatives and talk the whole situation over, frankly and without ill-feeling, so that you can clear up any misunderstandings and open the way to happier relationships in the future.

MADOC

Rural Girls Club Appoints Officers

MADOC — The Madoc Rural Girls' Club was organized at the home of Mrs. Ernest Devolin recently under the leadership of Mrs. Stanley Franks, assisted by Mrs. Devolin.

Since then four meetings have been held at the homes of various members every second Friday night.

Sixteen girls are taking part in the project work which is the making of a pair of pyjamas.

Officers Appointed

The officers appointed are:

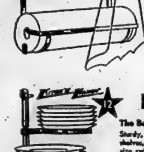
President — Isabelle Burnside; vice-president — Madelyn Forsyth; secretary-treasurer — Molly Franks; Press reporter — Margaret Franks.

The home economist for Hastings County, Miss Mess, visited the club at its fourth meeting, inspected its record books and gave instructive criticism.

Demonstrations have been given on pattern alterations, various kinds of seams, fagotting, and other details of the course.

At the conclusion of the meetings refreshments were served by three girls.

The leaders are to be commended on the giving of their time and talent to this worthy project.



DAMAGING CYCLONE

COLOMBO, Ceylon. (AP)—A week-end cyclone killed at least 13 persons and destroyed crops in the Jaffna peninsula of northern Ceylon, it was reported Wednesday. The storm Sunday and Monday ravaged virtually every acre of land in the peninsula, which is close to the southern tip of India.

Lecturer's Talk On Astronomy Is Heard Here

"Astronomy has already opened vast horizons in the consciousness of man," said Mrs. Robert Lee Moffett of Chicago, educator, who spoke at the Y.W.C.A. last evening on "From Chaos to Cosmos" and "The Scientific Story of Creation," which will continue tonight at "The Starry Heavens Through the Eye of the Telescope," illustrated by remarkable star photographs compiled by the world's most outstanding astronomers.

"The giant 'eye' on Palomar," continued Mrs. Moffett "is now able to photograph objects at a distance of one thousand million light years away, thus doubling the outmost point of visibility in every direction and enlarging the volume of the visible region eight-fold. A great new spiral universe has recently been discovered one million light years away. These dimensions are staggering! In the period between the two wars man's concept of the cosmos has expanded more than a thousand-fold, and has enabled man to expand his consciousness and his appreciation of the words, 'that the heavens declare the glory of God, the firmament showeth His handiwork; day unto day utter speech and night unto night showeth knowledge; there is no place where their voice is not heard.'"

Mrs. Moffett stated this is her first visit to the Belleville area and although she has studied and lectured in about forty countries she expressed pleasure at the warmth of the people she has met and the general feeling of friendliness and sincerity they convey. "I am particularly impressed with the beautiful trees and the atmosphere of peace and tranquility which pervades this lovely city," she said.

Lecturing in Canada

Mrs. Moffett has been invited to come to the Belleville area at this time by the Babel communicity, as she had been lecturing in Toronto and across Canada. The holder of a special delegate's ticket to the League of Nations and an accredited observer from Washington University to the United Nations Conference to witness the signing of the United Nations Charter, Mrs. Moffett has taken several courses in astronomy and social economics and has taught comparative religion.

Mrs. Moffett is interested in the progress of mankind toward unity and world civilization. On Thursday evening she will discuss the cause of the rise and fall of civilizations throughout the Adamic cycle. This series of lectures on "The New Way of Life for World Civilization" is educational, non-political and non-denominational and is open to the public without charge.

This afternoon Mrs. Moffett discussed her experiences at the League of Nations and the United Nations Assemblies at the United Nations Council of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and was introduced by Vinton Reid, director of the council.

County Hospital to Share In Estate of Late W. A. Bog

PICTON — Prince Edward County hospital will share in the million-dollar estate of W. A. Bog, former joint general manager of the Bank of Montreal, who died this year in Montreal. Following settlement of the estate, the county hospital will receive one-tenth of the residue. This money will be invested and the interest used for the upkeep of the hospital. The principal must be kept intact.

Mr. Bog entered the service of the bank in Picton and always took a keen interest in the county where his father was an early resident. He has previously given donations to the hospital and to the Anglican Church here.

AWARDED CONTRACT

PICTON — The H. J. McFarland Construction Company, of Picton, has been awarded the contract for the erection of Prince Edward district High School at Picton. Award of the contract has been endorsed by the Ontario Department of Education, according to advice received here yesterday. The McFarland tender amounted to $710,333 and was the third lowest received.

Other tenders which received special attention were those of the Sullivan Construction Co., of Arnprior, at $725,880 and Bradford Hobbal Ltd., Port Hope, $686,947. Contract does not include furnishings but includes the building, sidewalks, curbing and grading of the playground area.

The school will replace the Collegiate destroyed by fire early in the year. At present, students attend classes in Picton armouries where class rooms are divided by partitions.

TOMELY ALARM

PICTON — A timely alarm saved the life of Harley Brummell, 5, who fell into a cistern at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Brummell at Cherry Valley. Donald Morton, 10, and Shirley Norton, 12, are being praised for their prompt action in notifying the boy's mother of the accident. The boy was standing on the top of the cistern cover, when it tipped and he fell ten feet to the bottom of the well, where there was three feet of water. Called to the scene by the Norton children, Mrs. Brummell and her daughter, Sharon, 10, performed the rescue. A rake was extended into the cistern and the boy was able to hold on to it while being pulled to the top. The lad remained unscrried and co-operated fully in the rescue attempt though he found it difficult to move due to heavy clothes and rubber boots.

Not have heard Harley's cries with the top still nearly covering the cistern," Brummell.

PLANS FINALIZED

PICTON — Plans for the annual Santa Claus parade in Picton on Saturday were finalized at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night. Sam Gentile reported donations amounting to nearly $700 had been contributed and will be used for floats and purchase of treats. Phil Dodds reported 48 floats entered, along with three bands and many walking characters. Donald Thomas reported on costumes, which are being imported. The parade will form at the west end of the town and move off at eleven-thirty in the morning. The Picton parade is claimed to be the biggest in eastern Ontario and everything points to one of the best on record next Saturday.

Couple Found Dead In Gas-Filled Room

TORONTO (CP) — Laverne MacDonald, 28, and Irene Saunders, about the same age, were found dead Wed in a gas-filled room in an east-end rooming house.

Dr. Julian Loudon, coroner, said the deaths appeared accidental. But police said they were puzzled as to why two burners of a gas stove should be turned on full. No notes were found and the door was not locked.

MacDonald, a construction worker, and the woman moved into the house about a month ago.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER

CHICAGO (AP)—Harold Ward, an independent union official, Tuesday was acquitted of murder in the fatal beating of a non-striking worker during the recent International Harvester Company walkout. Ward, 36-year-old secretary-treasurer, of Local 108, Independent Farm Equipment-United Electrical Workers Union, was found innocent of the beating October 3 of William Foster, 52.

Sales, Salesmanship Subject Of Address at Kiwanis Club

Sales and salesmanship were discussed at the regular luncheon of the Kiwanis Club Tuesday in the Kiwanis Centre. Frank Murray, a recent addition to the staff of radio station CJBQ was guest speaker.

Describing the sales picture in Canada and the United States at the present time, Mr. Murray said, "The picture today of sales is not a good one, and there seems to be a great complacency abroad with business organizations both large and small in improving the situation."

The speaker was born in Ireland and came to Canada to take up residence following the war. He served with the R. A. F. and has had extensive experience in the selling game.

"From the ranks we are born," he continued, "until the day we die, everyone is on the stocks a vigorous campaign of salesmanship is not only right this situation should exist as sales are important to our way of life.

Should Be Concerned

"We should be concerned with the present state of things, for salesmanship has been reported by various publications as being very low and as a matter of fact, the whole art of salesmanship is low. We should be concerned for very reasons," said the speaker, "but the main reason is that companies are planning to spend more on advertising next year than has been done for some time."

The speaker listed five points he considered had a great influence upon sales in the retail store. At the top of the list he named, "Methods of Planning the Merchandise."

His second point was "advertising." The speaker advised an aggressive campaign in this field. He stressed particularly the importance of the window display.

"The point of purchase," he said, "is always a concerning factor. It is extremely important to your sales that a customer is able to find without any difficulty the product he wishes. Along this line also, it is well to have all prices clearly marked."

Important is Business

Lastly, Mr. Murray named "the man at the counter," as the final factor in the making of a sale. "This man," he said, "must be able to think upon his feet and as well, he must be able to demonstrate. Perhaps also, more attention could be paid these junior sales. Believe me," the speaker said, "they are important to your business."

"In closing," Mr. Murray said, "I would like to offer this piece of advice; If you do not have it . . . get it, and if you do have it . . . 'get on' it."

It was announced, next week's meeting will not be held at the regular time but will be put ahead to an evening dinner beginning at 6.30 p. m. on the usual day. There will be, however, a round table discussion at the noon hour. The evening meeting is planned for organizational purposes.

The speaker was introduced by Harold Carruthers and thanked by Jack Wallon.

Most Ont. Counties in Agreement With Hastings on Pension Cheques

Nearly all the counties of Ontario concurred in a Hastings County Council resolution of earlier this year to have the old age pension cheques of indigent persons forwarded to hospitals, where such pensioners are confided to hospital.

At Wednesday's council session, Clerk Eric R. Denyes reported that nearly all counties in the province had approved the Hastings resolution and in one or two cases where there was non-concurrence agreements were in effect where indigent pensioners' cheques were turned over to the hospitals.

In a letter from the department of welfare it was pointed out that under the Act there was no authority to send Indigents' cheques to hospitals, but noted that the Hastings resolution would be given consideration. It was stated, however, there was little likelihood of there being a change in the present policy of sending pensioners' cheques directly to the pensioner.

The morning session of council was relatively quiet, with most of the time being taken up by a delegation from the Hastings County T.B. Association. The two representatives, W. Barry Hollins and Norman Garland were seeking an increase in the usual county grant from $500 to $600.

Mr. Hollins and Mr. Garbutt outlined the work of the T.B. Association and said the increased grant was asked because the work of the association had been extended with resulting increased costs.

The request was referred to the ways and means committee.

Council concurred in a Perth County resolution asking the province to set the date for spraying for warble fly, and agreed with another resolution asking for the floor price on beef to be paid on carcasses ranging down to 500 pounds instead of 700 pounds as at present.

Jack Dickens Named Head Quinte Club

Jack Dickens was elected to his second term as president of the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club at a meeting of the newly-elected directors this week.

Wilbur Sherry was named vice-president and chairman of skating with Les Digby also named vice-president and chairman of tennis. Bob Miles was returned to his treasurer's job with Harry Brown again being named secretary.

The executive was requested to meet and decide upon membership fees for the coming year. They will submit a report of their findings to the directors.

The secretary was requested to make enquiries regarding the possibility of bringing in an outside skating show this year. President Jack Dickens will name the chairmen of other standing committees.

AUCKLAND, N. Z. (Reuters) Dick Tober, 27-year-old Dutchman arrived here Wednesday after sailing his eight-ton yacht 16,000 miles from Ymuiden, The Netherlands. "It was not an adventurous voyage and there was only one good storm—in the English Channel," he said.

200 Cars on Barge Sink in Ohio River

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP)—A barges which may have carried as many as 200 new automobiles sank in the Ohio River Tuesday at the head of Henderson Island, about 14 miles below Evansville. It was being towed by a towboat of Commercial Barge Lines, Inc., the same river transport company that lost a barge and 150 new automobiles a year ago at Galconda, Ill. Cause of the sinking has not been learned.

Miami Publisher Goes To Jail for Contempt

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Beubin Clein, publisher of the weekly Miami Life, entered jail Tuesday night to begin serving 30 days for contempt of court. Clein was sentenced Feb. 13, 1950, for refusing to tell how he obtained information on secret grand jury hearings. Since that time, Governor Fuller Warren granted 11 reprieves.

GANGSTER SLAIN

CHICAGO (AP — Daniel Ryan, 23, described by police as an ex-convict and alleged hi-jacker, was shot and killed in gangland style today in front of the "snake Pit," a southwest side saloon.

POINT ANNE

United Church L. A. Sponsors Fine Bazaar

POINT ANNE — The Ladies' Aid of the Point Anne United Church held their annual bazaar and tea on Tuesday in the parish hall with a large attendance.

The hall and tables were nicely decorated for the Christmas festivities with a lovely bouquet of mums on the platform.

The apron and fancy work table was decorated with Santa Claus table cloths and pine cones. Mrs. J. W. McLaurin was the convener of this table.

The home cooking table was decorated with the Christmas paper and centred with a lovely white angel cake trimmed with cherries and green berries. There were white and dark cakes, taffy tarts, berry and fancy cookies, different kinds of pies, home-made buns, date squares and loaves of bread. Mrs. Percy Akey and Mrs. Stanley Guay were in charge of this table.

The Christmas cards and canned fruit table was decorated with the Christmas colors with Mrs. Annie Akey in charge.

The little guest tables were each decorated with fancy tea cloths and a spray of bittersweets.

Those who served the refreshments were Misses Norma Sedore, Glenda Dunstan, Kathleen Payne, Beverley Jones, Vivian Lloyd and Mrs. Morley Akey.

The tea table was decorated with a lovely corn lace cloth and bouquet of white mums and silver services, cream and sugar.

Those presiding were Mrs. Fred Macdonald and Mrs. Ed Fraser while those serving the guests were Miss Ruth Payne and Miss Kay Fraser.

Those replenishing the plates were Mrs. Noble Brown, Mrs. William Norwood and Mrs. Fred Clarke.

The pretty quilt, which was quilted by the Ladies' Aid, was auctioned by Mrs. Dr. Robt. of Front Road, and Mrs. Noble Brown was the lucky purchaser.

The president, Mrs. Noble Brown extends a hearty vote of thanks to all those who donated, served, or helped in any way to make this bazaar the real success it was.

Guests were present from Belleville and Front Road.

On Tuesday evening, a social time was held in the St. John's parish hall, Point Anne, for the three congregations, Holy Trinity Church at Shannonville, St. Margaret's-at-the-hill, Belleville and St. John's in Point Anne.

Rev. A. McConnell, rector of St. George's, Trenton, was the guest speaker. He also showed several lantern slides and told of his trip to England and Ireland, in the past summer.

Musical selections from the Barber Shop Quartet of Belleville, and community singing, which made the evening a real pleasant and was enjoyed by all present.

Refreshments were served by the Point Anne parish ladies.

PICTON

Surprise Party Highlights Birthday

Picton—On Thursday evening, relatives and friends surprised Mrs. E. Ellsworth by arriving at her home to celebrate her birthday. Mrs. Ellsworth had attended the early "show" and on reaching home was greeted by the singing of "Happy Birthday to You" and greetings of good wishes.

Games were quickly arranged, with many mysterious parcels as prizes. Later, delicious refreshments were served from a buffet table centred with a lighted birthday cake and decorated with gift bouquets of chrysanthemums.

Following the supper Mrs. Ellsworth opened and admired her lovely birthday gifts, that included a cable of good wishes from her friend Mr. and Mrs. Horrobin, Stoke-on-Trent, England.

Among those arranging the happy event were, Mrs. J. Vanservalt, Mrs. George Morden, Miss C. Mitchell, Mrs. Hegns and Mrs. Wood.

Natural Justice Denied Plea Before Court

OTTAWA (CP) — Counsel for Steve Suchan and Leonard Jackson argued that the two men were denied "natural justice" in the trial at which they were convicted of murdering a Toronto detective, John J. Robinette and Arthur Maloney of Toronto pleaded Wednesday with Mr. Justice J. W. Estey for permission to appeal the convictions to the Supreme Court of Canada, Canada's highest court.

Jackson and Suchan, members of the notorious Boyd gang, have been sentenced to be hanged Dec. 18 for the slaying last March of Toronto detective Edmund Tong. An appeal before the Ontario appeal court was rejected.

Mr. Robinette, appearing for Suchan, said the trial judge, Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Ontario high court, had "erred in law."

Chief Justice McRuer refused a request by defence counsel for a precis of evidence of some 45 crown witnesses, the majority of whom had not appeared at a "sketchy", preliminary hearing, Mr. Robinette said.

Editor Requests Govt. to Give Single Reason

MONTREAL (CP) — Richard Lewis, editor of Canadian Broadcaster and Telescreen, calls on the federal government to show "one single reason" why it can't open the gates of television to private radio.

In an excerpt of an address prepared for Rodney fair board, Mr. Lewis said Wednesday night that the government, in letting private stations take over in areas where the CBC has no television outlets "is only letting private enterprise in on the deal where it couldn't possibly make it pay itself."

"I should like to call upon the government of Canada to show one single reason why it cannot open the gates to private radio, . . and permit it to serve the people with television in large centres as well as small."

TRUCK DRIVER HELD UP

TORONTO (CP)—An armed robber Wednesday night held up Edwin Kirk, a delivery truck driver for a downtown department store, and escaped with $200. It was the fourth robbery of its kind in the last nine days.

Charge of Rape Follows Attack On Woman

TORONTO, (CP)—Police today charged Raymond Vautour, 23, of Toronto with the rape of a 50-year-old married woman in the city's east-central area.

The woman is reported in critical condition suffering shock and face and head injuries.

Police said a man followed her Wednesday night as she and another woman left a hotel, grabbed her from behind and threw her into a laneway. They said she was punched in the face until she fell to the ground, then kicked about the face and head until "she blanked out".

DELEGATES

Why a Peace Congress in Peking?

The Peking Peace Congress was designed for Asian and Pacific nations. Those countries whose territory stretched to the Pacific and Indian oceans were asked to send delegates. In addition to the official delegations there were some special guests and about 40 observers.

Why was a Peace Congress held in Peking? Officially, it was to discuss questions like the war in Korea; the disturbances in Viet Nam and in Malaya; the idea of cultural and economic exchanges between communist and capitalist countries and the halting of Japanese rearmament. All three are serious questions and would give any congress plenty to talk about. Heaven only knows, we had our ears burned off listening for 10 whole days to the same arguments, the same declarations and the same accusations. But basically, it is possible that the Congress of Peking may be for Asia the counterpart of the Congress of Vienna.

Why was Peking chosen? Probably because a congress of this kind could only be really successful in a communist country and only China, of all the Asian nations, had the resources and the money to bring it off. Peking proved the perfect setting; the splendor of its temples and palaces were perfect foils with which to charm and impress the peace pilgrims. In addition, the millions of dollars which must have been spent to organize a congress on such colossal proportions could only be borne by a country which has more than 475 million inhabitants.

And that, I suppose, is why we were met in Peking with such tremendous politeness and such legendary Chinese hospitality.

Prime Ministers Decide New International Terms Needed To Steady Raw Material Prices

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill's cabinet and eight of the British Commonwealth's top statesmen today examined Western Allied policies in Korea, the Middle East and the East-West cold war.

The extraordinary cabinet session at 10 Downing St., also was to get two first-hand reports:

From Churchill on the progress of the Atlantic alliance's military preparedness effort in Europe and the size of Britain's new defence program with its accent on new weapons.

The prime ministers of Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Pakistan, Ceylon and Southern Rhodesia and the premier of India and South Africa have been meeting in London since last Thursday.

High officials said before their session today with the British cabinet that, as far as they knew, the group has no plan for a Korean settlement. But the consensus, they said, does seem to be that the Commonwealth would oppose any extension of the war to the mainland of China.

Officials explained that a stepped-up war in Korea would impose new demands on the Commonwealth's already-strained resources of men and equipment.

None of the British-led group with fighting troops in Korea seems willing to reinforce its contingent there. One of the chief reasons they are meeting here is to figure out ways to save money on other fronts so they can pay for the military obligations already contracted.

Eden also was to report that British-sponsored plans to set up an Allied-Arab defence pact in the Middle East had struck snags once again. Middle East security affects the whole Commonwealth because through that region pass vital sea and air lanes. Much of the group's oil comes from there.

The main East-West cold war problems up for discussion today included progress of the Atlantic Allies' defence buildup, tensions in divided Germany, fighting in Indo-China and Malaya and the general strategic situation in Asia.

Canadian Wins First Place For Field Peas

CHICAGO (CP) — William M. Landell, of Rosedale, Ont., won first place in the large yellow field peas division of the hay and grain show at the International Livestock Exposition here.

Gustav Stein of Matheson, Ont., was first in small yellow field peas. Joseph Wright, also of Matheson, was second, and W. J. Delore and Son of Admaston, Ont., third in Saturday's judging.

In the yellow soybeans division, regions one and two, Robert D. Owen of Electric, Ont., was first and R. H. Peck of River Canard, Ont., was second. W. R. Sifton and Daniel A. Chmis, both of Ridgetown, Ont., were third and fourth respectively and Clifford Dale of Glanworth, Ont., finished fifth.

Hercule Trahan of Pelmorant, Ont., was in second place in the Canadian hybrid shelled corn division, and M. E. Hooper and Son of St. Mary's, Ont., was sixth.

Teeth of Rats Used to Find Cause of Decay

TORONTO (CP)—Teeth of rats and other animals are being used in University of Toronto experiments to find the cause of tooth decay.

Dr. C. H. M. Williams, associate professor of dentistry at the university, said the rats are being fed special diets. Germs taken from the diseased teeth also are injected into the animals to detect what effect tooth decay has on the body.

He said that experiments also are being carried on to learn whether a child with a crooked tooth formation is more likely to suffer from tooth decay than a child with straight teeth.

Mayor Jackson Re-elected For Fourth Time

HAMILTON (CP)—Mayor Lloyd Jackson was re-elected mayor of Hamilton for the fourth time after taking an early lead over former controller Hugh McIntyre.

The vote Wednesday was closer than expected. The latest figures, with eight polls to come, gave Lloyd Jackson 27,486; Mr. McIntyre 21,234.

Hamilton ratepayers approved construction of four artificial rinks and three swimming pools at a total cost of $710,000.

Controllers Sam Lawrence and Les Parker led the polls for re-election followed by Ald. John A. MacDonald, 26, the youngest controller ever to serve in the city. Controller Sam Baggs maintained his seat.

OFF REMAIN ON JOB

PRESCOTT (CP)—Town council Tuesday night approved renewal of an agreement to have this community 15 miles east of Brockville policed by the Ontario provincial police. They also agreed to have the payments to the officers increased.

Beautiful Canadian Waterfall Lies Virtually Unknown in Alta.

EDMONTON (CP)—A beautiful Canadian waterfall lies virtually unknown in Alberta's isolated northland. Tall pines crowd the edge of the chasm and only a few trails lead to choice views.

Alexandra falls drop 150 feet into a foaming gorge and are located near mile 320 of the Mackenzie Highway. The 394-mile, all weather road reaches north from Grimshaw in the Peace River country to penetrate some of Canada's most wild and unsettled areas to the shore of Great Slave Lake in the Northwest Territories.

The waterfall, dropping over sheer limestone cliffs from the quiet Hay river, is incongruous in such a flat area. Cliffs border the river for about three miles downstream to the Alexandra's sister falls, the 46-foot Louise, which are not visible from the highway and require a one-mile trek through rugged bush.

The Mackenzie Highway was completed in 1948 under a federal-provincial agreement. The Alberta government paid most of the cost of construction for the 393-mile section in the province and the federal government built the remaining 61 miles in the N.W.T.

Civilization Link

The road has provided a link with civilization for hundreds of people who have dedicated their lives to the north country.

No longer does the trapper have to wait months for supplies. Nor does the farmer in Alberta's far-northern Fort Vermilion area have to ship his grain by boat to Peace River elevators. Sick persons can be rushed to hospital and a regular mail service is provided for the area.

The two most important industries which depend upon the Mackenzie Highway are farming and fishing. Almost all the fish comes from Great Slave Lake at the northern terminal while the bulk of the farming is done along the first 70 miles of the route.

Jewelry Firm Looted Of $30,000 in Metal

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Four or five bandits trussed up a night watchman in a jewelry findings firm Wednesday night and trucked off gold and silver bars valued at more than $30,000. Frederick B. Read Jr., superintendent of A.T. Wall Company, said the $30,000 figure would be "a conservative guess." The men reached the precious metal by burning a large hole in a vault.

Posthumous Award of Gold Medal for Bravery Announced

TORONTO (CP) — Posthumous award of his gold medal for bravery to Frank Hawkins, 12, of Burton, B.C., was announced today by the Royal Canadian Humane Association.

The 12th gold medal awarded by the Association in its inception in 1284 went to Hawkins, who lost his life in the Arrow Lakes at Burton on Oct. 13 in an attempt to rescue an 11-year-old playmate, William Baker, who also was drowned.

Twelve parchment certificates for brave rescues were also awarded by the association.

The exploit that cost Hawkins his life was recounted in the award of the gold medal. Several boys were riding their bicycles on the Burton pier when young Baker's bike hit the edge of the wharf and he was thrown into the water 25 feet from shore.

Disregarded Danger

Regardless of his own chances Hawkins jumped in and made his way to the struggling boy. A good swimmer, Hawkins grabbed Baker several times but each time lost his hold. He dived several times in efforts to bring Baker to the surface but each time after about two minutes both boys sank. Their bodies were recovered shortly afterwards.

Young Hawkins is survived by his parents and eight brothers and sisters. Baker is survived by his parents and three brothers and sisters.

The parchment certificates were awarded to the following:

James Bryan Cook of Vancouver, for the attempted rescue of William Monis from drowning in the Fraser river last June 12.

Robert Sharpe of St. James, Man., for the rescue of Nell and Jack Ball from their burning house at Winnipeg Dec. 21, 1951.

STIRLING

Diplomas, Awards, Scholarships Given at Commencement Exercises

STIRLING — The annual commencement exercises of the Stirling High School were recently held in the Stirling community hall with a large crowd in attendance.

The program opened with a piano interlude by Misses Ruth Mumby and Marlene Bradley followed by the presentation of special prizes to successful students by principal J. L. Good, assisted by Mr. J. B. Belshaw, of Stirling, representative to Central Hastings High School Board.

Scholarship Winners

The Hon. J. R. Cooke, Chapley U. O. D. E. prize (value $5) for the highest standing in Grade VIII at the Stirling Public School went to June Sleeper, a grade IX student.

Dominion-Provincial Student-Aid bursaries to grade 13 general course (value $100) were won by Shirley Ackers and Mary Robb; while Margaret Drew was the winner of the Hon. J. R. Cooke scholarship ($250) and the Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Lawlor Memorial Scholarship ($60).

The grade 9 music class was heard to advantage in the rendition of four numbers, "Canada, Canada," (C. W. Bosch — Mrs. Fenwick); "Polly - Wolly - Doodle"; "Shades o' Evening" (Mrs. C. P. Rose) and "We A Hundred Pipers," (Lady Nairne) under the leadership of Miss A. Hickie, director of music, with Donna Stapley as pianist.

The senior choir, under the direction of D. H. Garrison, with Ruth Mumby as pianist, rendered "All Through the Night" (Owen Cooper); "Vells" — L. Lehar; "Rock-A-Bye-Baby" (Leslie B. Bell) and "O Canada" (Wetz—Lavelle.)

Valedictory Address

The starting student this year was Margaret Drew, now standing Queen's University. In her valedictory address, Margaret paid tribute to her parents, to Mr. Good for his kindly, firm, wise guidance during Grade XI and XII and to the staff. The value of the past five years lay in development of their minds and character, and for success, not necessarily always victory, in sports, that brought honour to the "best school of all."

Mr. Malcolm Robb, barrister of Belleville was guest speaker and was introduced by Mr. Good. Mr. Robb's theme was "Citizenship." If a student showed continued progress in his academic work, the chances were his later years would show a gradual improvement in his character and he would be a good citizen.

Need Achieved.

Education continued after school saying. Success in politics was not the holding of office, but achievement of an ideal through the energy of the individual. Now is the time for youth to resolve what they will stand for in later years.

His final appeal was not to make patriotism a war-time effort, but to use it in times of peace. "Our actions should prove in the years to come that we mean 'O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.' Then we survive."

THOMASBURG

Fuller Friends Honor Young Couple

THOMASBURG — Friends of Fuller and Thomasburg gathered in the I.O.O.F hall, Thomasburg, recently in honor of the newly-weds, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Bateman.

Mr. Borden Redelfite acted as master of ceremonies. The guests of the evening were invited to the platform. After a short program, a congratulatory address was read and they were presented with electric lamps; a tridgbt, and a bookcase set for which Doreen and Gerald graciously thanked their friends for their beautiful gifts and invited them to their new home in Belleville.

Refreshments were served, after which dancing to the music of the Taylor orchestra, Madoc, was enjoyed for a time.

At Home

Recently the Thomasburg I.O.O.F. Lodge No. 239 were At Home to their friends. Mr. Kenneth Jeffrey was chairman to a varied program of instrumentals, songs, recitations and tap dancing, which was well received and applauded.

After the serving of refreshments a social time and dancing was enjoyed by all.

T.F.U.

The Moira Thomasburg Young People's Union met recently in the vestry of Thomasburg United Church. The devotional period was conducted by the President, Mr. Fred Waite.

The theme for the meeting, 'Stewardship,' was taken by Guy Thompson.

During the period of discussion, the crest or emblem of the United Church was one of the topics discussed.

The Thomasburg lunch committee served.

The black out in Thomasburg on Sunday evening when the United Church service had just begun, caused some disappointment when it was learned the power would not be replaced for over an hour, and other light was not available. The congregation quietly dispersed.

r. and Mrs. Earl Yateman, Canifton, were Sunday evening callers at the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mr. W. Yateman.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Porter of Toronto were recent guests of their sister, Miss E. Porter.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ray, Thurlow, visited with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Jones, on Sunday evening. Mr. Charles Jones was also a week-end visitor.

WHITE'S DISTRICT

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Rush were Sunday evening callers of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Yateman of Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. William Yateman and Brenda were Monday afternoon callers of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Wadsworth of Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Rush were Tuesday dinner guests of Mr. and District.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Young were Wednesday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Duetta of

The official board meeting of the Bayside pastoral charge was held at Wesley Church on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Clifton Rush was a Wednesday dinner guest of Mrs. Donald Rush and assisted her at a quilting.

Mrs. Albert Hackaday opened her home on Saturday afternoon for practice for the Christmas entertainment. Mrs. Floyd Dudley, Mrs. W. A. Jeffery and Mrs. George Bilsan assisted.

Mrs. Leonard Young; Miss Mabel Brown and Mr. Gerald Brown were and Mrs. Cecil Sine of Wallbridge.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. James Sandercock, in the loss of her sister, Mrs. Nellie Fiskin, who passed away at Kingston General Hospital, on Saturday.

The many friends of Mr. John Fletcher, a former resident of this district, will be sorry to hear that he is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Friends will be glad to know that greeting favorably in Kingston General Hospital.

Mrs. Floyd Dudley, who has been ill with the grippe, is able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Young visited relatives and friends in Belleville General Hospital on Saturday afternoon.

Community Chest Campaign Exceeds Quota Second Time

For the second year in a row the Belleville Community Chest exceeded its quota. This year's goal of $34,500 was subscribed to 100 per cent, according to a report given at a meeting of the Chest executive today.

Mr. J. Wallace in presenting his report, as treasurer of the Chest, reported that because of the interest and support of 2,870 persons, firms and organizations a total of $34,525.60 had been raised for welfare work in the community.

"I am very happy to report that the expenses of conducting this campaign have been very low," said Mr. Walton. "Our costs amount to $1457.10 or less than 6 per cent of the total amount raised. I think this is very commendable since the usual percentage in other Chest cities is 10 per cent to 15per cent of the amount raised. Of course we are able to keep our costs down because of the very active voluntary support of everyone, from the general chairman to our youngest canvasser."

Mr. J. V. Trudeau, general chairman of the Chest commented on the success of the campaign. "We are all extremely pleased that our quota has been met, because it means that the six member agencies of the Chest will be able to carry on their services to the community without any decrease in quality or quantity of effort. All those persons and organizations who contributed in this year's success are worthy of praise and thanks for their open-hearted interest and support."

Chairman of the general campaign, F. C. McGuire, agreed with Mr. Trudeau's thoughts and added that, I think we ought to also thank each and every person who gave of his or her time as a canvasser, or supervisor to assure the success of the campaign."

Publicity chairman C. D. Lundy in making his report stressed the fact that the Chest had received the closest co-operation and assistance from the publishers of the Ontario Intelligencer and from the management of radio station CJBQ. "Had it not been for their interest and the work done by members of their staffs, I am doubtful if we could have reported such a high degree of success today," commended Mr. Lundy.

After the budget committee had determined the allocation of funds to the six member agencies, an audited financial statement will be published.

Presentations Made

On Friday afternoon, pupils of Ivanhoe public school honored Mary Jo and Jimmy Beckel prior to their departure for Grand Coulee, Sask.

Following a suitable address, read by Joyce Reid, Linda Reid made the presentation of a photograph album and silver bracelet to Mary Jo, while Bethle Stephens presented Jimmy with a jackknife and flashlight.

Mary Jo, who also spoke for Jimmy, made a neat little speech of thanks The Beckel children have been popular with their school mates and will be missed in the school and community.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was reeding in the living room waiting for pop to get home, and I went in saying, is the paper here yet, ma, I want to see the comic page.

Well then powers your sole in patience till after dinner, ma said, and I said, Well aw G, ma, why?

For the same reason I am refraining from looking at Hookbinders Wenesky page till after your father has had a chance at the paper, ma said. You know how he objects to finding the paper mussed up, she said, and I said, But jimminies, ma, he's read it.

That's all the more reason we should give him a special treat and let him find the paper in its own crisp creases for a change, ma said. I'm sure we'll be amply rewarded by his pleased serprise, she said, and I said, Oh boy, that's a swell idea, he'll think he's dreaming and he'll hope he never wakes up.

And after dinner pop picked up the paper and unfolded it without saying anything or even looking any happier, and me and ma looked at each other half disappointed and half mad, and just then the celefone rang and pop got up saying, I'll take it, I expect a call.

And he left the paper on his chair and went, and ma hurry up opened the paper to Hookbinders syvertise...ent and looked at t till she heard pop coming back, and she quick dumped it back on the chair again, and pop picked it up, saying, Yee gods, cant I ever read my paper in peace instead of in pieces?

What's better, now you seem more like yourself, ma said, and pop said, Eah? What's the gag?

Never mind, read your paper in peaceful pieces, ma said, and pop claimed it was no joke, but me and ma kept on laffing on account of knowing different.

Hornets Sting Syracuse 2-1 In Overtime

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Frank Mathers scored both of Pittsburgh's goals, one a sudden-death overtime shot at 1:15 of the extra stanza, to give Pittsburgh Hornets a 2-1 win over Syracuse Warriors in an American Hockey League game.

The win Wednesday night put the Hornets in second place, 1½ games behind first-place Cleveland which was idle.

Bronco Horvath sent Syracuse ahead late in the first period with Mathers tying the score in the second.

In the first period, Syracuse goalie Gordie Bell was struck in the mouth with a puck fired by Danny Lewicki. Bell lost two teeth and five stitches had to be taken in his lips but he returned to the game.

Win Pace Race At Dufferin

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Parker, owned and driven by Lucien Dionne of Drummondville, Que., and Frisky Frisco, owned and handled by Cam Wanamaker of Casselman, shared the spotlight in defeating a good field of pacers in the $5,000 free-for-all pace, feature of Wednesday's harness program at Dufferin Park. Each took a heat.

Real McCoy, owned by B. Erskine of Pleasant Gap, Pa., driven by Bud Gilmour, and Moss Hanover of St. Maurice Stables of Three Rivers, Que., divided the fifth and/secondary feature between them when they each won one heat.

Lowly Cougars Back in Cellar

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Victoria Cougars are back in the Western Hockey League cellar.

The Cougars dropped a 5-1 decision to Seattle Bombers Wednesday night while Edmonton Flyers trounced Tacoma Rockets 4-1. The Flyers thus moved up to second-last place.

George Pargeiter paced Seattle with two goals. Rudy Pilous, Lorne Nadeau and Doug MacAulay fired the others. Eddie Dewsbury, Andy Hebenton and Jim Fairburn were the Victoria marksmen.

Reg Raglan, Earl Reibel, Larry Zeidel and Cling Johnson counted for Edmonton, Gord Kerr for Tacoma.

Seixas Whips Ken McGregor

MELBOURNE (AP)—Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, playing captain of the United States Davis cup team, whipped Australia's Ken McGregor today 7-5, 6-1, 6-2, to enter the final of the Victorian tennis tournament.

Seixas will be pitted against Frank Sedgman, the Aussies' cup ace, in the final. Sedgman trounced his countryman, Mervyn Rose, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 in the other semi-final.

Earlier Maureen Connolly, American and Wimbledon champion, easily disposed of Australia's Mary Hawton 6-4, 6-1. Julie Sampson of California had tougher going in the other semi-final against Australia's Helen Angold, but won 6-3, 6-4.

GIFT FROM SEA

SANDGATE, England (CP)—A seagull flying inland dropped a live fish on the doorstep of Mrs. H. Kennett's home. Sandgate is in Kent county on the Strait of Dover.

Sport in Brief

TORONTO (CP)—Manager Conn Smythe of the National Hockey League Toronto Maple Leafs hints he may recall forward Bill Ezinicki from Pittsburgh Hornets.

Smythe, who vowed Ezinicki would never play for the Leafs again," said he shipped him to the American Hockey League club in talking steps to bolster his sagging squad before the next game Thursday at Montreal.

Wednesday he announced transfer of Hugh Bolton to Ottawa Senators of the Quebec Senior League and said he may use his last recall to bring in a player from Hornets.

WINNIPEG (CP) — A record purse distribution of $65,300 has been announced for 21 days of racing in 1953 on Prairie circuits at Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon and Regina. Announcement of the new purses schedule, an increase of $25,100 over last year, was made Wednesday by the Exhibitions Sports Corporation Limited.

COLUMBUS, O. (CP) — Levi Harner of Bloomsburg, Pa., Wednesday was named the United States' leading race-winning harness horse driver. He had 128 victories in the 1952 season. Johnny Chapman of Toronto was fifth with 84. Joe O'Brien of New Glasgow, N.S. was tied for seventh with 82. Harold Wellwood of Brantford, Ont., and Clint Hodgins of Clandeboye, Ont., were tied for 16th with 69 victories.

NEWMARKET, England (AP)—Racehorse owner E. P. Taylor of Toronto Wednesday paid $30,870 for Lady Angela, an eight-year-old Hyperion mare, at the Newmarket Horsesales sale. The mare is believed to be in foal to Nearco, one of the best modern stallions.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—The Ottawa club of the International baseball League Wednesday signed Jim Wright, former major league outfielder. Wright hit .298 with Louisville in the American Association last season.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—The 1953 Kentucky Derby will be run Saturday, May 2, and its value to the winners will remain at $100,000, directors of Churchill Downs, Inc., announced Wednesday.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Chicago Cubs Wednesday acquired veteran catcher Clyde McCullough from Pittsburgh Pirates in a trade for pitcher Dick Manville and an undisclosed sum of cash. McCullough, 34, batted .273 in 60 games with the Pirates last year.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore was offered a franchise and the Dallas Texans team in the National Football League Wednesday if it will buy $2,000,000 worth of season tickets by Jan. 22. The deal, by which Baltimore can get back a franchise it gave up two years ago, was engineered by Lamar Hunt, owner Bert Bell. He said the sale of the tickets within six weeks is the only string attached.

WHY IS IT?

It could be the weather. It could be turns or Christmas coming up. It could be almost anything but the fact remains there is something definitely wrong with city hockey fandom.

We may be a bit premature in writing this piece. Perhaps with the turn of the year and the fog of the Christmas and New Year hangovers cleared away, things might be different.

Be that as it may. Outside of the few 900 fans, more or less, that are witnessing hockey in these dying days of 1952, there is a lot missing some of the best ice spectacles dished up here in a long while.

And that goes for both junior "B" and senior "B" teams.

Response to the efforts of the Belleville Hockey Association's, junior "B" entry and Don McIlveen's senior "B's" to give this city the best hockey obtainable then far has been, to put it bluntly, "lousy."

Strangely enough past performances warrant a better condition at the box office. Last year the junior Hawks went to the provincial semi-finals against the powerful Weston Dukes and fandom hereabouts got solidly behind the team.

At the moment the Hawks are leading their group and bid fair to cop the titular honors.

The senior "B" Glen Roys at present holding third slot in a group that is composed of Hespeler, Oshawa, Orillia, Stayner-York and Kingston, after a somewhat shaky start due to organization problems, are gradually finding themselves.

As a matter of hockey fact, two of the best senior hockey games played in this city were affected by fandom last Friday and this Tuesday night when the Kingston Goodyears and Oshawa Truckers provided the opposition. The Glen Roys slowly but surely reaching the top spot of the rest of the group teams demonstrated quite clearly that they are a force to be reckoned with in this power-packed senior set-up.

To use an old cliche, "you must crawl before you walk." Don McIlveen, manager and sponsor of the Glen Roys senior club has spared neither time nor money to build a senior team that he hopes will be comparable to the rest of the group entries, and a credit to the city.

By the same token, the junior "B" Hawks under association president Jack Vanever and mainly manager Bill Cook, plus the co-operation of the Chicago Black Hawks have brought another team of youngsters together that carry the Junior banner of Belleville into the hockey wars.

But, and there is little difference, a say, in the box office response to the efforts of these people and organizations.

Speaking of cliches, this one has always held good in Belleville or any other sports centre, for that matter, "Give us a winning team and we'll support you." How true!

But not so true here this far this season. The support thus far has been negligible. Both junior and senior teams via their respective managements are doing their best to bring top-flight hockey to the city and are succeeding.

And it rests without saying that the pre-Christmas caliber of hockey with all teams creditably performing at their speediest or bad as it may be, is but a warm-up for things to come in the new year. And from the calibre of hockey dished up thus far in both senior and junior groups, the "senior event" should be some of the choicest ice-lane dishes served up in a long while.

Belleville has the reputation of being one of the "best sports towns between Toronto and Montreal. In the old days when baseball and hockey championships were won by Belleville teams city fandom backed them solidly.

True this is 1952. Hockey-minded men, conscious of the sports needs of the city are going all out to give it the best obtainable. Surely they deserve to get the support of fandom. Thus far it has been lacking.

With the junior "B" team that at the moment is heading its group and a senior "B" club that clearly demonstrated by recent fixtures over two of the strongest teams in the group, that it is becoming a powerful force, fans of the city should show their appreciation in a helpful way — the box office.

WELCOME FELLAS!

Two new faces showed up at the senior "B" practice last night and the post-practice consensus was "They'll do." One was bumping Bill Turland, former junior who played with the Kashets here and did his puck-checking for two or three years in the International League. Bill is a defenseman and looked good behind the blueline last night. He played this season with the Troy, Hudson league, and was recently given his release. Coach Doran said he might use Turland Friday night against the Kingston Goodyears.

The other player is Don Dale, former Woodstock senior player who is associated with the Swift Canadian Company and was transferred here a few days ago. Dale is a forward, who is a bit rusty on his skates since he hasn't worn them in six weeks, but he'll round into shape and should make a valuable asset to the Glens front line divisions.

Form House Basketball Loop

A four-team basketball house league, for Y members between ages 14 and 17 had its first workout that was followed by friendly games between the teams, at the Y.M.C.A. Tuesday night. The teams are the "Red Raiders", captained by Stanley Jackson, the "Hot Shots", captained by T. Bechtel, the "Shrimps", captained by Don Smith, and the "Aces," captained by Ronald Wright.

The teams will be playing league games on Tuesday evenings, while Friday evenings have been allotted to them for their practice sessions. A member of the Y's Men's Club will act as counsellor and coach for each team, starting next Tuesday.

After practice games Tuesday night, the four captains and Dr. Diamandides, physical director met to go over the schedule. It was decided to continue with some coaching on basketball fundamentals followed by practice games for the rest of this month, and start the series on a point basis the first Tuesday of January.

It is hoped that at the end of the series a representative team will be selected out of these teams to play against basketball teams of the nearby Y.M.C.A.'s.

Come from Behind to Plaster 5-3 Defeat on N.Y. Rangers; Leafs Hamstrung by Ruling

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

"Them as has, gets," so the saying goes.

That's the Chicago Black Hawks. Sid Abel's lads have the winning spirit this season and they're grabbing those National Hockey League wins whenever they can.

Wednesday night they filed away No. 12—a 5-3 win over the tailend New York Rangers. Tonight they'll try for No. 13 when they face the fourth-place Boston Bruins.

The Hawks now are comfortably settled on top of the league with 30 points, five ahead of Detroit Red Wings.

Leafs Gloomy

While the sun shines on the Black Hawks, the Toronto Maple Leaf camp is shrouded in gloom. Conn Smythe is faced with a grave problem. His Leafs, now in fourth place with 25 points, are hard strung with injuries. He has only one regular from the farm at Pittsburgh. If he makes that recall he'll have nothing left for a later emergency, and the season is still young.

He hinted that he may recall the one player he said would never play for the Leafs again. That player is Wild Bill Juzda, who was banished to the American Hockey League.

Meantime the Leafs left for Montreal with what strength they have left for a game with the third-place Canadiens tonight.

A third-place finish will see Detroit playing host to the Rangers. It was a rough victory for the Hawks in New York last night. The body checks came hard and fast and a number of fights broke out.

Coach Scores

Paul Ronty opened the scoring early in the first period, but minutes later Sid Abel tied the game. Doc Gratton gave the Hawks ahead in the second but rookie Neil Strain scored the tying one. The Rangers made another by Conroy in the third when Ronty slammed in his second. It was a futile gesture. Fred Glover tied it up a minute later and then Scotty Bodnar and Jimmy Peters scored the winners.

BILL TURLAND

Former Belleville junior player who has returned from Troy, Illinois, where he played with that team in the International League. Bill, a defenceman, has his release and tried out last night with the senior "B" team. Manna from heaven, so to speak.

National League Should Ban TV, Says Cards Boss

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — President Fred Saigh of St. Louis Cardinals said today he believes the National League should ban television from all its ball parks for 1953.

He reiterated his threat to refuse other clubs permission to telecast their home games with St. Louis unless the Cards receive a share of the TV receipts.

"There is no question in my mind that television is hurting the attendance," he said. "However, to satisfy the skeptics, I suggest we can video for one year to determine once and for all whether it hurts or helps baseball."

Saigh, a persistent opponent of baseball telecasts, is convinced that television not only cuts deeply into attendance but ranks up the balance of power throughout the league and threatens to wreck the poorer clubs. The Cards, who own the largest radio network in baseball, consisting of 52 stations, do not telecast their home games.

Barrie Flyers Defeat St. Mike's; Nudge Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto St. Michael's Majors brought three injured players back for their Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game with Barrie Flyers but it didn't do them much good.

The Flyers moved to within one point of the second-place Toronto team by handing them a 6-4 defeat Wednesday night in spite of the return of Captain Marc Reaume, Murray Costello and Les Duff to the Irish colors. Toronto Marlboros are three points up on St. Mike's.

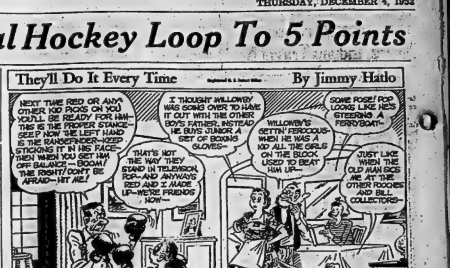
Doug Mohns scored two for Barrie with others divided among Don McKenney, Orin Carver, Fred Pletsch and Jim Robertson. Jack Caffrey scored a pair for the Irish, Ed Fiala and Mike Raichford notched the other two.

There was no action last night in the Quebec Junior league but tonight Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts play the fourth interlocking schedule game of their current Quebec City and Hull-Ottawa Cities battles. There are no OHA games tonight.

The Kitchener club is looking for its first win on tour. They dropped later encounters and the season's opener to Montreal Canadiens and Three Rivers Reds and tied the last-place Montreal Royals.

Intercounty Loop Meets Sunday

BRANTFORD (CP)—The second off-season meeting of the Intercounty Baseball Association will be held in Brantford Sunday.



The meeting will be convened by President Otto Manske. Topics will include salary limit, rosters, final entry date and a schedule providing for doubleheaders on holidays and Saturdays.

Delhi Maple Leafs were not represented at the last meeting. Reports from the Royal City say the franchise will be allowed to lapse unless some buyer comes forward soon. Should Guelph retire six teams would be left in the league.

Two-Team Race Looms in Sr. League; Mercs, Indians Travel Neck-and-Neck

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It's a two-team race in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League.

The top-place Stratford Indians (Continued on Page 24) build their total to 20 points last night. Owen Sound Mercurys, three points back of the Indians, maintained the pace by burning back Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen 5-1.

Kitchener is third with 19 points, seven behind the Mercurys. Brantford is fourth with 18.

Sarnia Sailors pulled into a fifth-place tie with Chatham Maroons by downing them 3-2.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Greyhounds extended their lead in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior southern group by battling Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Indians, to a 6-6 exhibition tie.

The batters was a familiar one in Hamilton. The Tigers, in dropping their 17th straight, held the pace for two periods that faded Billy Reibel from the light three times for Stratford. Dicky Flanagan, Jack White and Les Kelly shared the offense. Jack Drew and veteran Murray Comfort scored for Hamilton.

Bost Harley was outstanding for the Sailors against Owen Sound. Harvey Jacklin scored the game Kitchener tally. Roy Leckie scored twice for Owen Sound and Jack McComb stogled.

The Sailors took over their home game with Chatham in the first period and were never chased. Chuck Glaab led the Tars with three goals. Jim Wilson scored twice and Vern Hamilton, Jack Lewsey and Don Savage shared the others. Norm Hiscocks and Jim Campbell notched Chatham goals.

Scores Three

Jimmy Farrell paced the Sault Indian attack with three goals. Other markers were by Cordie Cullen, Claude Watters and Vip Palladino. For the Greyhounds, Hec Theso shipped in two. John Goldeast, Ron Ley, Terry Nicchi and Chuck Johnston tallied the others.

South Porcupine Porkies whipped Timmins-Schumacher Flyers 10-5 in a Porcupine Mines Senior game. It was the fourth straight loss for the Flyers and kept them four points behind the league-leading Noranda Copper Kings.

Lorne McKay, Tony Talentino and Eddie Keith each scored two goals for the Porkies. Three Simmonds, Billy Adamo, Pat O'Leary and Stew Pirie sank the others.

John Kennedy, Gil St. Pierre, Ralph Orlando, Denis Morello and Claver Quesnel got the Flyers' goals.

The Indians visit North Bay Trappers tonight for the only action in either league. Friday night Stratford Indians play at Brantford, Hamilton will be at Chatham and Kitchener plays Sarnia.

Tigers Trade Trucks, White, Groth To Browns for Two Players, No Cash

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—In the fourth major Detroit-St. Louis baseball deal in a year, the Tigers today traded pitchers Virgil (Double No-hit) Trucks and Hal White and centrefielder Johnny Groth to the Browns for left-fielder Bob Nieman, second baseman Owen Friend and catcher-outfielder J. W. Porter.

The seven, averaging some $250,000 in player talent, did not immediate cash, Detroit general manager Browns general manager, said.

The 33-year-old righthander who pitched two no-hitters in 1952 but wound up with a 5-19 record. Groth, a Detroit native who hit .284 in 141 games and White, a 32-year-old relief pitcher, had a 1-4 record in 41 games.

Rookie Sensation

The most important to Lockie player involved was Nieman, 25, a rookie sensation with a .399 batting average, 16 homers and 76 runs batted in.

Porter, used both as a catcher and outfielder, received a $62,000 bonus from Chicago White Sox as a free agent. Last season the 28-year-old prospect hit .250 for the Browns.

The Tigers will have to wait a week or so for Friend, 25, to be discharged from military service. He was the Browns' regular second baseman in 1951, hitting .257 in 119 games.

A total of 24 players changed uniforms in the series of Tiger-Brown deals that started last winter.

At first glance, it appeared the Browns had the best of the latest trade, acquiring a starting pitcher in Trucks and a regular centrefielder in Groth for one proven big leaguer—Nieman. However, the Tigers were regarded hot after Porter, who has promise of becoming a future star.

'Wid That Name, Sure, He's Good' Warbles Clancy

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Sky Pilot Clancy, Irish-born ice accountant, decried on hockey, and now is ringing the bell for the Calder cup champion Pittsburgh Hockey.

At the moment, coach King Clancy of the American Hockey League champs is breathing easier. His team, after a poor start, is one point behind the pace-setting Cleveland Barons.

Maloney, a 170-pound centre, was a big question mark in Clancy's plans for the current season because of injuries last year. But the 25-year-old native of Ottawa reported in top shape and in 19 games he's scored four goals and 13 assists for the second highest total on the squad.

Clancy figures it's only a matter of weeks before Maloney heads back to the National Hockey League.

"He's come up in leaps and bounds," Clancy said. "What a big guy he is to have in hockey. He's a coach's dream and an example for the players to follow."

Maloney almost threw in the sponge after being shipped to the Hornets from Toronto in 1950.

"It was a big disappointment to me to be farmed out," Maloney said. "I had a pretty good season with the Boston Bruins but after I got traded to Toronto I didn't see much action.

"But I've learned a lot of hockey under Clancy and now that I'm in top physical shape maybe I can start to play like I should."

Maloney decided to give up hockey while attending college in Ottawa and caught on at one with Shawinigan Falls in the Quebec Senior Hockey League. He figured there was more money in hockey than accounting.

Aussie Horses Named for Stake

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—Two top campaigners from down under, Australia's Peshawar and New Zealand's Dalray, have been nominated for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap Feb. 28, the management of the Santa Anita Park announces.

The pair will be flown here a week before the 1¼-mile event, the announcement Wednesday said, and they probably will also run in the $50,000 San Juan Capistrano handicap, a closing day feature at 1¼ miles on March 7.

Peshawar last October won the Caulfield cup, one of Australia's top turf events. Dalray won the Melbourne cup on Nov. 4.

Take Curl Cup

BRANTFORD (CP)—Mrs. E. L. Woolley of Toronto skipped her Granite club rink to victory for the James T. MacDonald trophy in the Brantford Ladies bonspiel.

Mrs. Woolley defeated Mrs. Frank McKelvey of Hamilton Victorias in the final Wednesday after winning a semi-final from Mrs. J. Noble of Hamilton Vics.

Mrs. R. Tesky's Kitchener rink won the second event by trimming Mrs. G. Thomson of Brantford. Mrs. P. Logan of Barrie won the third event and Mrs. H. D. Baldwin of Sarnia took the fourth. A total of 32 rinks curled in the four events.

Zatopek Named World's Best Athlete But Sportsman, Well, That's Different

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP)—A cable dispatch from London reports that a group of the world's leading sports authorities has voted Emil Zatopek, the indefatigable Czech, as the world's No. 1 sportsman for 1952.

North Americans are justified in being a trifle confused. Zatopek the No. 1 athlete? Well, perhaps. But No. 1 sportsman? No—not in our strictest interpretation of the term.

To Europeans the label of "sportsman" may be applied to anyone connected with sport. To us it stands for more than strength, spercurial speed or record-shattering triumphs. It connotes a spirit of fair play, humility in victory, graciousness in defeat.

Premier as an athlete, Zatopek falls far short of the requirements for a sportsman here.

Thrilled World

The lean, arm-flapping wonder indeed thrilled the world with his fantastic feats at the Helsinki Olympics in the Helsinki Olympics which brought him gold medal victories in the 5,000- and 10,000-metre runs and the marathon.

Yet he remained a bitter disappointment to millions afterwards when he used his fame as an instrument of Communist propaganda, destroying much of the international goodwill which had been generated in these traditional games.

We remember him well at the Russian pine-studded village of Otaniemi, a camp of the Iron Curtain athletes hidden some 15 miles from the heart of Helsinki.

He was a pleasant fellow, with a nice smile and blue eyes that gleamed like an electric light when he talked of running techniques with other athletes. He and his attractive wife, Dana, were Czech Olympic javelin champion, spoke good English. More than that, they spoke.

Were Different

In that respect they were different from the other Iron Curtain athletes who wandered around the roughly-hewn premises under the watchful eyes of the blue-cossled MVD men.

The Zatopeks appeared more Western and more independent than their Czechish contemporaries. And the men with the steel teeth, the MVD boys, gave them plenty of room.

Zatopek told a group of American athletes and newspaper men of his desire to come to the United States. He spoke well of the country, said he was flattered Americans should want to see him run, hinted he might make it.

It was in good faith then that the U.S. Secretary of Commerce, Charles Sawyer, invited the Zatopeks to tour the U.S.

President Truman eyes expressed approval of the idea.

It wasn't until two weeks later that this gesture of friendliness was used by Zatopek—as a propaganda boomerang.

"I only laughed when I received these ridiculous, unsportsmanlike offers," Zatopek told his fellow countrymen in a broadcast over Prague radio. "They have nothing but circus tricks there."

Zatopek, a great athlete, sure. But a reversed Olympian who will be remembered in the same breath with the Nurmis and the Owens? We doubt it.

Suspensions Due For Quebec Junior Squads

MONTREAL (CP) — President Martin Conway of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association says that as soon as a full report has been checked there'll be suspension for a wild, disgraceful stupid by Junior Montreal Royals and Quebec Citadelles.

Six match misconduct penalties, eight majors and one misconduct followed the big brawl Tuesday night. Quebec won the game 9-3.

"Rough stuff in hockey has gone a little too far and from now on players involved face severe action—especially those who incur match penalties," said Conway Wednesday.

"Coaches and team officials will also come in for action if they don't put a curb on their players. Referees have been advised to call things according to the book, and any more rough stuff will make it a sorry matter for the rule-breakers."

Coley Wallace KO's Bob Dunlap

DETROIT (AP)—Crashing Coley Wallace, the New York heavyweight who looks like Joe Louis, gave Bob Dunlap the Joe Louis' treatment Wednesday night. He stopped Dunlap at 66 seconds of the sixth round with a smashing left. Referee Leo Handler halted the scheduled 10-round fight when Dunlap reeled to the canvas and tried to get up.

Wallace had a 22-pound edge over the 177-pound Salt Lake City fighter.

SUNLIGHT HAZARD

CAPETOWN (CP)—The South African Medical Journal said overexposure to the sun may be a major contributary factor in skin cancer of white people. A research team found that African natives do not suffer to the same extent.

IT'S TRUE! By Wilby Perdan

APPEARED IN 20 STOCK COMPANY ROLES BEFORE MAKING HIS BROADWAY STAGE DEBUT IN "ROUGH GIRLS." HE MADE HIS FIRST APPEARANCE BEFORE THE MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS WITH PER ANGELI IN "TERESA."

PLAY HUSBAND AND WIFE FOR THE SECOND TIME IN "SHADOW IN THE SKY." THEY FIRST PLAYED A TYPICAL YOUNG AMERICAN MARRIED COUPLE IN "THE NEXT TIME YOU MEET..."

EARNED HER TUITION FOR LAKE FOREST COLLEGE AND NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY BY PHOTOGRAPHING AS MANY SERIALS, TV DRAMATIC TRAINING ULTIMATELY PROVED A STEPPING STONE TO HOLLYWOOD STARDOM.

AT THE BELLE—Two powerful M.G.M. pictures are showing at the Belle Theatre Tonight for the last time, in "Shadow in the Sky", and Walter Pidgeon, John Hodiak, Audrey Totter and Paula Raymond in "The Sellout".

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — On anybody's map of Hollywood, the Forum is the center of the escapist country would have to be Universal City, a tiny suburb just a stone's throw from here.

When you visit the acts, you can generally be assured of visiting two kinds of locales—out west or some exotic land.

This was not always so. Shortly after the war, the studio went in for critical triumphs like "A Double Life" and "Another Part of the Forest." The company lost money in whopping amounts.

U-I is back on the escapist trail again. The result: It is probably in better financial shape than any studio in town. Half of its unreleased films are big westerns in color. Now the lot is hankering for foreign lands. You can tell by the titles of the pictures now shooting: "Prince of Bagdad," "East of Sumatra."

Let's drop in on the latter film and see how one of these pictures is put together.

We are driven between the sound stages and out to the back lot. Here you can find whatever locale you want, from a town on the Mississippi to the Casbah, from a civil war stockade to a medieval castle.

AT THE McCARTHY—Red-haired Piper Laurie is teamed again with Tony Curtis in "Son of Ali Baba," Technicolor feature. All-star cast featuring Susan Cabot, Hugh O'Brien and Victor Jory. "Son of Ali Baba" is now playing at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre.

We drive up a canyon. Workers are huddled in a gorge. The walls mount up 50 feet. They look like solid rock, but they're strictly fake.

So is the 35-foot waterfall at the end of the gorge.

We watch a scene in which Jeff Chandler and a crew of adventurers beat their way through the jungle. The greenery is mostly in pots and can be hauled back to the greenhouse when the picture is over.

We notice a large number of male visitors on the set. It appears that in the next scene Susan Hall is going to take a bath under the falls.

Miss Hall appears, clad in a kimono. The kimono is removed, and we see that she is wearing a form-fitting sarong.

She climbs around the waterfall to a large rock. The water, warmed to 80 degrees, begins gushing over the falls.

She dived in and swam about in a warm pool. When the scene was over, she climbed out of the water with chattering teeth. She had given her all for escapism.

HOMING DUCK

GUNTON, England (CP)—One of 70 ducks hatched in an incubator by Mrs. D. Chapman was sold and taken to a farm three miles away. A week later, bedraggled and muddy, the duck fluttered back into her yard.

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE

MONTREAL (CP)—The first real estate exchange in Canada was opened here Wednesday in an effort to solve Montreal's housing problem. Called the Montreal Real Estate Exchange, it is a private organization grouping 40 real estate dealers in the province and is designed to act as an impartial service for property owners, real estate dealers and the public. It will have regular daily trading sessions.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section fit which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

FOR FRIDAY, DEC. 5, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Splendid aspects favor new undertakings as well as familiar routine, laboring tasks. Unique ideas and methods can add to gains.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Tradesmen, academia, teachers, authors, inventors, journalists should find day very responsive. Originality will score.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Short of day in which versatile, ingenious Gemini can be distinguished. Clever ideas may be fresh money-makers. Romance also rates.

June 22 to July 22 (Cancer)—Extra encouraging influences from Mercury, Jupiter and Uranus should aid you greatly in making unusual achievements. Promising ideas, carefully, they will reward you.

July 23 to August 22 (Leo)—Advancing new prospects, improving conditions at work, making solid plans for future security, boosted by constructive influences. Friends, when renewed ambition.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Excellent time for your special talents, gains in position, salary, investments, real estate. Take things in good stride.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Make opportunities pay; don't look back and expect results. Be cognizant of facts.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Stimulating vibrations for well thoughtout and executed endeavors. Take rightful advantage of friendly relations to better standing.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Influences argue for caution before acting. Don't boast or disuple with superiors, anyone. Be the diplomat.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—May find some adverse conditions that could upset best of plans, if you let them. Money matters may disturb if you become careless.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Uncertain for some activities. Restrictions in personal affairs may have headaches. Seek friendship of intelligent, happy people.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—No time to overrell your propositions. Pace your progress in a practical way. Don't go heading into things you know little about.

YOU BORN TODAY are the frank, openhearted, sincere type. You love to talk and you have a personable way. Practice listening, too. Many clergymen, statesmen, judges, bankers, professors, leaders of industry born under your Sign. Birthdate of: Martin Van Buren, 8th U.S. Pres.; Geo. A. Custer, Amer. cavalry leader.

"Feel Well First Time in Years," Praises Syntona
"Free of Stomach Disorders, Headaches and Backache; Rheumatic Pains Gone. Even Work Seems Easier," Says This Man.

MR. STANLEY STAFFORD
"After being rundown and suffering from stomach disorders for several years I have found Syntona to be the best medicine I ever used," said Mr. Stanley Stafford, Sheddon, Ontario, in a recent report.
"Many people who suffer as I did will know how hasty I felt all the time. I could hardly eat a meal without having pains from gas, sometimes a burn and sour stomach. I'd get very tired, dizzy and sometimes sick to feel. But the most terrible ache were rheumatic pains set in my back, limbs, joints and muscles. I was full of nerves and tension and kept me from doing my work properly. I became run-down, always tired and nervous.
"I am often heard now telling about Syntona, but I didn't take it about a year or few weeks ago and I would say to my friends to try it. From the first few days I began to feel better, then my food began to digest better, the gas pressures and heartburn cleared up and the nervous tension and headache. Now the aches and pains with rheumatism are caused down and I have more energy. As I go about my work I feel well for the first time in years and I give Syntona full credit for helping me this way."
Made from 12 of Nature's finest Herbs and Roots, Syntona has helped thousands of men and women in this same way. Given a fair chance it can do as much for you.
Syntona is sold and recommended in Ballerille by Dolan, the Druggist.

"Bill," he said quietly, "I here, but I'm not afraid of you. don't know why you should hit Just wanted to say that I me. Highland," he's a pretty hadn't felt sorry for you good fellow, y'know, and he the other day when you pulled reminds me of the Swede, I'd made a me off the Swede, I'd made a bonehead play." mess of you—"

So we'll just let the matter stand "Oh, well," Curly shook his for now. The folks have come head, "if that's the way you down from the village tonight went it that's the way it will be. to see Bill Frost in hand and But I think you are making a John up! Bring in your friends, mistake. Now please go and let there's plenty to eat. All I ask these people have their fun." is that you behave yourselves. What do you say?"

Bill Frost exchanged glances with his partners.

"You think you're pretty smart, Curly Brown," he growled, "but you can't fool us. You'd get us in there, then the whole damn gang of you would pile onto us. No, Mister Brown, you can't get us into a trap that easy. I know that you're said to be the ablest man around

For a moment Bill Frost and the Newtons confirmed, then they filed out the gate, crossed the road, climbed into their buggy.

"Some day," Curly said through set teeth, "I'm going to take Bill Frost in hand and teach him a lesson. Fancy me saying 'please' to a rat like that."

He was about to turn back to the house when Father Finucane hooked his arm in his.

"Let's take a walk down the road to cool off," the priest advised. "Do you know, Curly, you have just done a magnificent thing. I'll admit there are times when a good sock in the jaw will do more good than a pretty speech, but that was not one of them. Frost is credited with being quite a fighter, but you would have made a mess of him. Y'know, my son, I heard more about you back in the city than the folks around here would ever find in their Globe or their Mail. Tracey Brown is what they called you in those days, remember? And it was said that you feared neither God, man, nor the devil—"

"But, of course, father, they were wrong." Curly spoke up, "Yes, I always believed in, I've always feared to go against the wishes of a Supreme Being."

He spoke like a true Methodist," the priest chuckled.

"Yes, but a Sorrowful Methodist." Curly explained, "I'm sorry to have to admit that I'm too fond of dancing to suit my church."

They were coming back to the gate now, when Father Finucane said:

"Hard Acres! That's quite a name for a place. It's rather intriguing, don't you think. Ever think of changing it?"

"No," Curly said, "I rather like it the way it is. It's not only an intriguing name, as you say, but it's challenging. It keeps me up on my toes."

As dawn broke, Hazel and Curly stood in the doorway to bid their guests goodbye and to assure them that they would always find the latch string out for them at Hard Acres.

And that same afternoon, Mrs. Butler was back with some of her choicest hens and a rooster so that Hazel could have fresh eggs when she required them. And summer passed.

October came and in the second week, Ben Whitmore brought the news to the Depot one night that the British Empire was at war with the Boers in South Africa. In the days to follow, the newspapers filled in the details. President Oom Paul Kruger of the Transvaal had poured troops into Natal, a British protectorate. Within a few weeks, one thousand Canadian soldiers were on the high seas heading for the battle zone, and names like Gen. Otter, Col. Steele, the Strathcona Horse, the Fort Garry Horse, were soon on everybody's tongue. Henri Bourassa, a member of the House of Commons at Ottawa, stood up in the House to state that Canada should not send troops out of the country, only to be severely reprimanded by Sir Wilfred Laurier, the dominion's prime minister, for making such an unpatriotic statement.

A branch of the Red Cross was formed at the Depot and women started to make comforts for the fighting men. Patriotic concerts, public meetings were held. It was a time of excitement, but only a few of the boys in the outlying townships managed to get into the act, since more men were flocking to the recruiting offices in the big cities than were required, and married men were the least needed.

Of course, like many others, Curly did not agree with the statement made by Henri Bourassa in the House of Commons at Ottawa, but he contended that the French-Canadian had the right to say what he did. After all, democracy was free speech, and free speech was something that had been bought at the expense of much bloodshed. For a few months the war in South Africa hung in the balance. The mother country had underestimated the fighting qualities of the Boers. It was not until the situation had grown serious, that the small army in Africa was strengthened and Lord Roberts, "Little Bobs," was placed in command.

With the first signs of winter, Johnny Mohawk arrived to resume his trapping north of Hard Acres. He called to get acquainted with the Browns, and left them assured that there was a welcome for him at any time. Just about that time plans were being made throughout the townships to usher in not only a new year but a new century, and to nominate a reeve and council for the coming year.

In mid-December Bill McTaggert, Don Caswell and Jules Belanger arrived at Hard Acres one evening to ask Curly to stand nomination to a seat on township council.

"But, I couldn't do that, I couldn't qualify," Curly said, "I haven't been in possession of property long enough for that."

"That makes no difference, Curly," Bill McTaggert said, "and even if it did, and some one cared to be mean, you could resign. We need you in council, Curly. In fact we must have you—you could give us a lot of sound advice."

"Advice," Curly laughed, "What do I know about council matters?"

"You'll learn," Bill said, "I'll be going to county council next week, and I'll have a chat with the clerk. I don't think there's anything to prevent you sitting on our council. We're not taking

EISENHOWER LEAVES KOREA AFTER INSPECTION

Hate of Western Powers And Love for Socialism Dominate Oriental Thinking

By Gerard Filion

The Congress was to have opened on September 21, but it didn't get under way until the afternoon of October 2. The delay was due to the difficulties several delegations experienced in getting permission to leave their own countries and to the poor travel facilities between Prague and Peking. The trip from Moscow to Peking usually takes three or four days by Soviet airplane. But we know several delegates who took more than a week to make the trip. One delegation was stranded for three days in Irkutsk, waiting for a plane to pick the members up.

The U.S. blockade of China hasn't helped things either. Several delegations managed to travel via Hong Kong, including those of India, Pakistan and Ceylon. But the Indonesians had to go to Amsterdam first before they could get behind the Iron Curtain.

Each morning, around breakfast time, newcomers arrived and we got to know each other, each waging our impressions of the trip.

FROM THE LEFT TO FAR LEFT

It didn't take me long to find out that most of the delegations were made up of ardent Leftists, either outright Communists or fellow travellers.

No one needed to be told that the delegates from the People's Democracies were Marxists. After all, you can't allow foxes into Communist henhouses. But the delegates from the Scandinavian countries were predominantly Communist. There were few exceptions, of course. The delegates from Chile were of every hue in the political rainbow.

If you were at all naive, you might have been deceived by the remarkable discretion of the Marxists. It seemed to be an aim of the Congress to give an impression, at least on the outside, of great freedom in expressing ideas and views. The Congress did not run in the mould of the Internationals and votes were not counted with clenched fists. The Peking Conference gave no hint that it was dominated by Communists, except for the occasional slanderous remark and an ardent exuberance of opinion. I have no doubt at all that the more naïve among the delegates were completely taken in by this strategy.

You should like to make an exception, however, of some of the Far Eastern delegations, particularly those from India, Pakistan and Ceylon. They were really representative delegations, made up of people from every province and every class and language. The Indians were led by a member of parliament from New Delhi who was an admirer of Nehru. The great majority of the 80 Indian delegates were not Communists and the group had a semi-official status. The Pakistan and Ceylonese groups were similar. These three groups were very important, I thought, and I considered their attitudes and their comments to be extremely valuable.

Assassination Brings News Of Widespread Disturbances, Deaths in Nationalist Tunis

PARIS (Reuters) — News of widespread disturbances with a number of French dead in nationalist Tunis today created further censorship black-out by the Paris government.

News and telephone communications with the North African territory were cut after the assassination last night of Fehrat Hached, secretary general of the General Workers' Union of Tunis.

Official sources said he had been killed, but refused to say what the circumstances of his death. Fehrat was a member of the anti-Communist International Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

Jean de Hautecloque, resident-general who represents French authority in Tunis, said: "It is bitterly resented by a strong nationalist group hurried from exile to Tunis today. He had arrived last night to consult the government.

Before leaving he attended a meeting of ministers on the Tunisia problem. Premier Antoine Pinay was at the meeting as were Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, Defence Minister Rene Pleven and Deputy Premier Henri Queuille.

Hached was in frequent contact with the bey of Tunis, Sidi Lamine during recent discussions on the

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) — Synopsis: A large mass of warm and rain covering most of the Great Lakes area this morning is moving southeastward. By evening Ontario the rain ended early this morning in western and northern districts is to move east of the province late this evening.

In northern and central regions the cloudy snow is expected to become much lighter this afternoon and to end before Saturday morning.

Although westerly and northwesterly winds are expected in most regions tomorrow, the temperatures are expected to be only a little cooler than today.

French reform plan. The Bey, as titular head of state under French tutelage, has shown some sympathy for the more moderate nationalists' aspirations toward self-rule.

Hached himself always made it clear that he understood the French are not prepared to go far enough towards self-government, but he was not fanatically anti-French.

Nationalist leaders have been before stepping into his aircraft: "During my short visit here, I shall study the measures with the government to assure public order and prosperity of all Tunisians. All acts of terrorism, from whatever quarter they come, will be suppressed without weakness."

EVANGELIST WILL BE SUBPOENAED BEFORE INQUEST

Jury May Recommend Ban on Faith Healers

TORONTO (CP)—An itinerant evangelist will be subpoenaed to testify at the inquest into the death of a 19-year-old girl who died after she stopped taking her life-giving insulin.

Pretty brown-haired Mary Taylor, a sufferer from diabetes since she was four years old, had attended Pastor W. J. Ross's healing services at Barrie, Ont., and had decided she could be cured by faith.

Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner for Ontario, said Thursday night he will view of Pastor Holmes' expressed willingness to attend as a witness in Barrie we decided to subpoena him and we expect he will attend.

Date Is Set

He added that Dec. 22 had been set as the tentative date for the inquest at the Lake Simcoe town 30 miles north of here. He specified that the jury at the inquest might recommend a legal ban on the activities of faith healers, added Taylor died Wednesday.

Meanwhile claims of healing through faith and prayer came from more than a score of persons who attended Ross's healing meetings. Against them arose a storm of anti-healer protest from physicians and medical circles.

Pastor Holmes, who comes from Tulsa, Okla., said in Tonawanda, N. Y., that he will return to Barrie for the inquest. He added:

"I have prayed for hundreds of persons and they have been cured. This is the first time anything like this has happened."

If Professed Faith

Rev. Donald A. Jones, pastor of the Apostolic Church of Pentecost in Orillia, where about 1,400 persons heard Pastor Holmes during per week of preaching, said the services produced salvation and there were "anywhere from 30 to 40 healings." Some of these, he claimed were "invisible healings."

Rev. Gordon E. Cohoe, general secretary of the United Church of Canada, said: "There is a place for faith healing within the church but only if it is undertaken in close co-operation with the medical fraternity."

Bishop A. R. Beverley of the Anglican diocese of Toronto said that faith begins where medical science leaves off. He said it is "utterly foolish not to make use of every available aid." He added, however, that "there is plenty of room for faith after that."

A Roman Catholic spokesman said the church encourages and shelves the use of medical knowledge.

Judge J. A. MacFarlane, dean of medicine at the University of Toronto, said in his experience instances where faith alone could achieve a cure were rare and only of a type where the mind had to be treated.

Scientist Tells How H-Bomb Might be Tamed for Peaceful Uses

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP)—An atomic scientist today supplied the first public explanation of how hydrogen bomb materials might be tamed for peaceful uses such as power.

Electricity discharged through a thin wire plasma, he said, could tame down" reaction which could be controlled for various purposes, Dr. George Gamow told a reporter.

He said there were other "theoretically possible" techniques that might even be better, but he declined to explain.

Until recently the general view including that of most top scientists has been that atomic energy could be released from hydrogen only by the hydrogen explosion.

Gamow, an internationally-known theoretical physicist who serves as a consultant to the atomic energy commission, made the comments when asked about a recent statement by Senator Bourke Hickenlooper (Rep., Iowa), a member of the joint congressional atomic committee.

Hickenlooper said: "the hydrogen picture contains some aspects of time, for peaceful and constructive applications."

Hickenlooper's statement — and one made by committee chairman Brien McMahon shortly before his death — was the first public indication that atomic officials see a possibility of using hydrogen bomb reactions for something other than projected H-bombs. The AEC has said nothing along that line.

The consensus of most top scientists has been generally that there would involve an explosion in itself—but also that it would have to be controlled by an explosion, too.

Hickenlooper's statement was described by the federation of American scientists as the first public indication that atomic officials see a possibility of using hydrogen bomb reactions for something other than projected H-bombs. The AEC has said nothing along that line.

The consensus of most top scientists has been generally that there would involve an explosion in itself—but also that it would have to be controlled by an explosion, too.

Hickenlooper's statement was described by the federation of American scientists as a hint that atomic scientists outside the AEC than the 'news' and rumors of a hydrogen bomb. . . The application would be in power, conversion to electrical energy of energy gained from fusion. . ."

Dr. Gamow told a reporter that if it is at least theoretically possible to get a "slowed - down" atomic explosion that might provide electricity by causing a powerful electric discharge through a thin wire placed in such materials.

Speedup in Training S. Koreans To Replace American Troops At Front Hinted by Eisenhower

The following story — released from censorship after Dwight D. Eisenhower's departure from Korea — was written by AP Correspondent Don Whitehead, who accompanied the General on his tour. It was a return to familiar scenes for Whitehead, who covered Korea as a war correspondent two years ago.

By DON .WHITEHEAD

WITH EISENHOWER IN KOREA (AP) — U.S. President - elect Eisenhower kept to himself any strategy he might be forming for settling the Korean war, but he strongly hinted during his action-packed trip here his solution for that is by expanding the war by attacking Red China.

"How difficult it seems to be in a war of this kind to work out a plan that would offer a positive and definite victory without possibly running a grave risk of enlarging the area," he told a press conference.

Many Limitations

"There are many limitations in a war of this kind, but this much is certain, I would be remiss in my opinion, to improve our position—much will be done."

Eisenhower also said his staff would study "everything we have learned here" so the incoming administration will be "better able to pursue its policy of supporting freedom in the world."

He hinted one of the first moves he might make would be to speed South Koreans to take over more of the combat burden now falling on the Americans.

U.S. officers working with the South Koreans feel that is being done—but no one should expect too much too soon, despite the startling progress made in two years in building the Republic of Korea forces into effective fighting units.

Boosts Troops Spirits

Eisenhower's visit to Korea had a big psychological bearing on the spirit of U.S. troops and giving them hope that the war is on the road to peace, it will be found.

Lt.-Gen. Maxwell Taylor, British 1st Commonwealth Division — Sgt. Joseph Killea of County Roscommon, fell into a pit. Another soldier: "If anybody can end it, General Eisenhower can. He's the man to do it, Sir."

Eisenhower-left New York secretly under cover of the darkness before dawn last Saturday.

The secrecy about the news of his journey was not lifted until his plane was one hour in flight tonight on the way home and well beyond danger of attack.

Family of Nations Split Over Two Ways to Give English Pound More Freedom

LONDON (AP)—The British family of nations was reported split today over ways to give the pound sterling more freedom to help harness the vast resources of the Commonwealth.

One week of closed discussions by statesmen of the nine-country Commonwealth group has produced agreement on several important questions.

But ranking delegates have begun to warn that no "cut-and-dried plan" for setting some of the group's crucial troubles in order is likely to emerge from the conference, which still has another week to go.

Freely Civilians

In each case, an informant said, Britain has found herself under fire, her policies freely criticized by the rest of the commonwealth.

On convertibility, with Indian, Pakistani and Ceylonese support, Britain has opposed Canadian, Australian, New Zealand and South African pressure to take quick steps toward freeing the pound.

A temporary compromise, however, seems to have been reached. Britain, wanting to go slow, is reported to have obtained deferments of action until the view of the new U. S. Republican administration can be learned early next year.

On industrialization, South Africa's ministers of economic affairs, Eric Louw, apparently keynoted the feelings of the expanding young commonwealth countries in a speech in an interview his government has given Britain the right to hold alone for capital and goods. He made it plain that South Africa in the future will look to British private capital from the United States.

His government, he said, will continue his industrialization program although its first concern will be to encourage local development rather than set up any new industries.

Louw is known to have criticized Britain indirectly during the conference for not coping effectively with inflation at home and for a lack of enthusiasm for capital goods to South Africa.

Many British Troubles

South Young countries as South Africa, Canada, New Zealand and Australia have declared to see the Commonwealth economic crisis as largely a British problem.

This apparent attitude is said to have led to a sharp clash between Britain's foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, and Australian Minister Robert Menzies.

Eden is reported to have suggested that Australia should help to wind up about Dec. 10. He is due to attend an economic parley in Paris Dec. 12.

Menzies, informants said, complained at the suggestion. He said negotiations for nothing bigger than a meat agreement usually ran for months and that there was little point in trying to solve all the problems of the Commonwealth in a matter of days.

OFFICER WANTS GREATER SHARE IN WAR'S CONDUCT

Says Casualty Rate As Heavy As Dieppe

OTTAWA (CP)—An army veteran of the Second World War suggests that Canada should have "some part in determining the conduct of the war in Korea."

Lt.-Col. Gordon Churchill, Progressive Conservative member for Winnipeg South Centre, said in the Commons Thursday the Canadian casualty rate is as heavy as the casualty rate at Dieppe.

"The only difference is that at Dieppe the casualty rate of 60 per cent was attained in a matter of nine hours and the casualty rate of 58 per cent in Korea has been spread over 22 months," said Col. Churchill.

Canada has suffered 1,245 casualties so far in Korea, including 221 dead, wounded, 28 missing, 94 injured in action and one captured.

Col. Churchill, commander of the 1st Canadian Armored Carrier Regiment in Europe during the Second World War, said:

"This is not a police action in Korea; it is war, with all its horrors, its suffering and its bloodshed."

Must Back Troops

Canada, he added, must back her troops there not only with arms and ammunition but by having some say in the conduct of the war.

He noted reports that ammunition was being rationed to Canadian troops in Korea. If the reports were true a full explanation should be given to Parliament.

"In the third year of any war, there should not be a trickle, but a flood of ammunition," he said.

"We have lost the equivalent of the fighting strength of two battalions. We are calling upon our young men to sacrifice their young lives, as they have on the bloody sands of miles from home. Are we going to be content merely to see that not one of those lives is needlessly lost."

Col. Churchill was one of several to participate in continued debate on the speech from the throne.

No Proposal Heard

At the House opening, Defence Minister Claxton, who leaves today for the Atlantic Treaty council meeting in Paris, said Canada is willing to consider any suggestions for strengthening Western defence. But he knows of no proposal that Canada's General Matthew Ridgeway, in Europe.

In the debate, Miss Minister Fraser criticized the Social Credit government of Alberta and the Social Credit leader. The Alberta government was clamoring for credit for oil developments when it was the discoveries could not have been made without the assistance of federal surveys and maps.

Served 283 Days in Front Lines, 400 P.P.C.L.I's Back from Korea

SEATTLE, Wash. (CP) — Home and family drew nearer today for 400 Canadian soldiers who watched, waited and fought for more than a year with United Nations forces in Korea.

Trains carrying the men to Seattle from Korea via Japan by Eastern Canada rolled through the night after "veterans' land" greeters at the Pacific northwest port which included pretty girls, a jazz band and a companion they believed dead.

The soldiers constitute the main body of the 1st battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. They boast the longest stay in the Korean front lines of any Canadian unit, 283 days on consecutive days.

The 3rd British Columbia troops aboard the transport Gen. H. B. Freeman when she docked here from the Orient are already home. They were taken by bus to Vancouver.

As the troopship docked Pte. Tommy Nelson of Montreal enthusiastically waved one of his two canes to the Canadians lining the rails.

Nelson is recuperating from wounds received in 1951, when his D company, on an outpost, was under attack.

"Fifteen of our company got killed or wounded," he explained. "I was evacuated to an American hospital and flown home. I heard the buddies figured I was dead. That's why I wanted to come down from Vancouver to meet them when I got back."

The men who would talk of the war had respect for the Communist artillery and intelligence service. They told of many days of constant bombing, movements almost as soon as the Canadians did.

Brig. Jean Victor Allard, commander of the Army's E. C. area, read a message from the commanding officer of the Commonwealth forces in Korea.

"I say to all ranks well done. . . and you have never forgot. Those gallant members who gave their lives have added to the proud traditions of the regiment and the

Does Not Believe In Spreading War To Red China

Visits Combat Units Near Front in Three-Day Tour

By DON WHITEHEAD

SEOUL (AP) — U. S. President-elect Eisenhower took a hard look at the Korean war situation for three days, inspected combat units near the front and departed today for the United States.

He indicated that he does not believe in attacking Red China or otherwise spreading the 2½-year-old conflict.

Eisenhower, was well guarded and he was in excellent spirits.

Shortly before his departure, Eisenhower visited President Syngman Rhee of South Korea for, a hastily-arranged conference.

A source close to Rhee said the two exchanged notes which may be made public tomorrow.

The Eighth Army announced that the general had completed his whirlwind tour of this battered country and was on his way home. He left Korea at 5.01 p.m. (6.01 a.m. EST) today.

His Korean trip fulfilled a promise he made to American voters in the closing days of the successful, political campaign he waged to win the presidency.

The general told a press conference before leaving he came over here to learn. We have no panacea, no trick ways of ending this conflict.

But he strongly indicated the solution of the Korean conflict does not lie in spreading the war to attack Red China. He said:

"How difficult it seems to be in a war of this kind to work out a plan that would bring a positive and definite victory without possibly running a grave risk of enlarging the war. There are many limitations on a war of this kind, but this much is certain. . .much can be done, in my opinion, to improve our position—much will be done."

Eisenhower added that on his way home he would meet with members of his staff to study "everything we have learned here."

Eisenhower left as secretly and quietly as he came. He arrived Tuesday night by plane.

He found Korea raw and cold, heaped with the dead and rubble of war, a war that was already shivering in its third winter of strife.

He left Korea sorry to see that not one of those lives is needlessly lost.

Col. Churchill was one of several to participate in continued debate on the speech from the throne.

No Proposal Heard

Living Costs Under New Index Up Tenth Point

OTTAWA (CP) — Living costs as reflected by the new consumer price index, rose another one-tenth of a point during October to 114.1 from 114.0, the bureau of statistics reported today.

This was a reversal of the September trend when the new CPI, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, dropped by the same amount — one-tenth of a point.

It was the sixth month in a row, the bureau said, that the new CPI has shown changes of only one-tenth of a point.

However, the cost-of-living index, based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100, continued its four-month downward trend, declining by one-fifth of a point during October to 173.8 from 185.6, the bureau said.

Higher food prices provided the main impetus for the advance in the new prices yardstick.

Higher prices were noted for butter, lard, oranges and fresh vegetables, which countered price drops for grapefruit, beef and lamb.

The food sub-group in the new index increased to 113.9 from 113.1.

However, the old index, which bureau officials do not consider as accurate as the new, the food sub-group showed a decline to 229.9 from 230.8.

In the new index, the clothing sub-group dropped slightly to 102.8 from 103.9, with declines in men's overcoats and boys' parkas offsetting increases in men's suits and women's overshoes.

BEECHAM IN MISHAP

LONDON (AP) — Sir Thomas Beecham, Britain's explosive symphony conductor, is recovering today from a concussion suffered in a taxi ride. Sir Thomas hit the ceiling—the taxi's—as he was getting out to make way for pedestrians. He said he was forced to remain in his London flat and missed a concert Thursday night.

Mobile Diesel School Unit Visits City

A new type of education moved into the city yesterday. It is a mobile school for training operators of material and marine installations, operated by General Motors Diesel Limited and sponsored by the W. C. Becker Equipment Company of Toronto. The unit is just now winding up a tour which has taken it from coast to coast across Canada.

This mobile classroom, housing three instructors, members of the diesel company, moved into the Armouries on Wednesday and will leave tonight for Camp Borden. Due to the distance which has to be covered, this four-wheeled classroom is unable to remain any longer than two days at any place.

The aim of the mobile unit, according to F. E. Wilson, one of the G. M. instructors, is to build up a number of trained diesel mechanics, to insure maximum efficiency of the handling of every unit—and most important to instruct operators in the best methods of reducing down-time to able replacements of strategic materials.

Those taking part in the course are men employed in firms where it is necessary for them to acquire extra knowledge in the operation of these machines. According to the company official, 23 men from the area registered for the course on Wednesday morning.

Mr. G. Patterson, company representative, said it has taken the unit never interfered for the heavy motor traffic now passing over it," he said. "It was just not built long enough."

Mr. Grills went on to point out there had been several fatalities on the bridge, one fatality being prevented last summer only by reason of metal traffic strips on the bridge floor. A truck had left the steel timbers and flooring and only the metal strips prevented it dropping through to the river.

Double Fatality at Bridge

Last winter there had been a double fatality at the west end of the bridge when a Glen Miller father and his young daughter and his truck left the bridge, ended through the railing at the approach to the bridge.

"I strongly urge that serious consideration be given to construction of a new bridge as the present structure is not safe for present day traffic."

Following presentation of the report Reeve Clarke Jr. Rollins, of Wollaston, noted that a building in which repairs to road machinery could be stored would pay big dividends in time saved. If there was not enough work for a full time service man he could be retained on a part time basis.

"This is only a suggestion and is not criticism," he stressed, "but at today's prices machinery is worth looking after."

Engineer Appointed

County Engineer Larry Langlois agreed that such a building was badly needed, and said such a building was provided proper maintenance of machinery would not be given. It would prevent many of the smaller breakdowns, he said.

Deputy Reeve Harry Morrow, of Sidney, asked the difference between present cost estimate of the Glen Miller bridge and the original estate when the structure was talked of two or three years ago. He was told the difference was slightly in excess of $7,000 this resulting almost entirely from increased cost of structural steel.

"Why was the bridge not started up the Reeve Warner Heath, of Rawdon, asked.

Simply because councillors decided the county could not afford it," replied Mr. Langlois.

Reeve Asks Question

The Frankford-Frankford county road, four miles of which was graded this year as a development road was the subject of discussion with Reeve Heath asking why county forces had done the work when usually this type of road construction was contracted. Had this been the case county forces would have been able to do more regular county work.

Mr. Langlois said he could not answer the question, although he had heard that as the job was small in terms of larger government contracts, it was felt that supervisory staff would be too much for that had been contracted. As it was Mr. Langlois said he had assistant had supervised the work.

He added that because county forces had been busy on maintenance, the Frankford road could not be completed in the year.

Presents Report

Reeve Charles Bunkard of Deloro presented the report of the administration of justice committee. This showed that to the end of November $70,019.82 had been spent on justice administration in the county as compared to $65,737 last year.

Reeve Earl Sager asked for a breakdown of the costs and was told that treasurer E. E. Seward that contrary to public opinion the province paid only a small percentage of justice costs. This amounted to only slightly more than a quarter of all employer salaries, about one-half of the crown attorney's salary and a third of the sheriff's salary. The province also paid but a small percentage of the light and insurance.

Justice costs in the county this year would be up to $80,000 and if this was the case the county's share would be about $45,000.

Brief Referred Back

Earlier a brief from Welland county council was read by Mr. Denyes, the brief asking for a review of the administration of justice act which it termed as "cumbersome and inadequate". The brief was referred to the justices committee for further consideration.

Reeve Harvey Adams presented the Children's Aid Society report and that of the Juvenile Court. He recommended the appointment of a county member to the finance committee of these organizations as then the council would be given more detailed information of the work of the two organizations. It was pointed out that the present county representatives to the boards were but "observers."

The agricultural and reforestation committee report was given by chairman Mrs. Ross Anderson, reeve of Farsday, while Deputy Reeve Harry Morrow gave the publicity committee report. He said that 10,000 copies of the Hastings county tourist booklet would be purchased for next year, half of the cost to be borne by the city of Belleville.

Getting Value for Money

The tourist committee is getting value for its money, however, according to Reeve Tracy Adams. He said that more American tourists were in the north during the past summer and nearly all of them had been brought to North Hastings through the tourist booklet. "Nearly all of them had a booklet with them," he said.

Grants of $15 each for the Women's Institute branches in East, West and North Hastings were recommended paid and re-grants in ways and means. Likewise grants of $100 to the educational associations in South, Central and North Hastings were recommended and also referred to ways and means.

Snow removal grants of $75 each to the northern municipalities of Dungannon, Mayo, Wollaston, Limerick and Carlow were also recommended.

Extends Appreciation

Council passed a motion extending appreciation to the Ontario Department of Highways for the direct financial assistance given to the county in regrading part of the Frankford-Foxboro road and requested additional funds to continue the work next year.

Warden Grills said he had been glad to see the work on the Frankford road completed. With a good job had been done and it was an asset to the county.

Thursday county councillors visited the new county home with Reeve Tracy and Reeve Bancroft later expressing a vote of appreciation to the superintendent and matron Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Yorke for the fine appearance of the home. "After a year the home was still in as fine a condition as on opening day," they said.

Most of Thursday's session was taken up with discussion relative to the proposed new wing at the Belleville General Hospital. At their last meeting council had approved a grant of $60,000 toward the new wing and yesterday councillors discussed whether the grant would be paid in a lump sum or spread over several years.

Hospital board chairman J. N. Vanover and Mayor A. M. Hall addressed the session and explained that a 99-bed wing were now proposed instead of the 80-bed wing originally planned. The change had been made on the recommendation of the department.

When council was told that building operations could not commence until possibly next spring and that there was no immediate need of funds, no further action was taken by council with respect to the grant to the hospital.

Carrier Boy Has Bike Stolen

There's a heart-broken youngster at 33 Church street.

He is thirteen-year-old Richard Pout, a carrier for the Ontario Intelligencer.

Four years ago, Richard decided he wanted a brand new bicycle. He started to save his pennies and nickels. This he has done since, and a few months ago he realized his dream.

He became the owner of a new bike, and placed on it all the "accessories" dear to the heart of a boy. He was the proudest kid in the neighborhood.

He rode it to school and on his newspaper route. He was the envy of the 13's around home and at school.

But Richard's enjoyment was shortlived.

The other day he came from Queen Mary School to discover someone had stolen his bicycle. It had disappeared completely.

The theft was reported to police who are investigating.

Meanwhile, a grief-stricken boy hopes somebody will feel effects of conscience and return the bicycle.

SEEK HIGHER WAGE

TORONTO (CP)—The Teamsters Union (AFL) Thursday served demands on the Automotive Transport Association of Ontario for a series of wage increases—30 cents an hour for city drivers, 20 cents an hour for mechanics and one-cent a mile for highway drivers. The union represents about 6,000 trucking industry employees in the province. Present rates are $1.32 an hour for city drivers, $1.42 for mechanics and five cents a mile for highway drivers.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices continued weak today in slow early afternoon stock market trading.

Volume for the first three hours totalled 630,000 shares.

Central Explorers led western oils losers with a drop of 35 cents in active trading. Canadian Atlantic, Scurry and Central Ledge also slipped while Canada Southern made a small gain. The oils struck a new low for the year.

Industrials weakened as utilities, steels and retail stores slipped and most other issues mixed. Foods and banks showed some strength.

Constructions were mixed although Canada Cement dropped $1.50 in the first three hours.

Senior golds lost strength as Dome and Hollinger slipped. Junior producers recorded a wide majority of small losses and prospects weakened, Conwest and Violamac leading. Holding companies turned downward from a mixed opening.

Higher-priced base metals gained but most other issues slipped. Anaconda, Campbell Chibougama and Fend Oreille traded lower.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The American dollar was at a discount of 2 39-32 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported today.

Dairymen Play Into Hands Of Manufacturers

—Robertson

TORONTO (CP) — Mark Robertson, Belleville dairy operator, says dairymen play into the hands of margarine manufacturers when they refer to the product as a butter substitute.

In a talk before the Ontario Creamery Association Thursday he said;

"If I were a manufacturer of margarine, I would be tickled to death every time it was called a butter substitute."

He said "ersatz" or "pseudo" would describe margarine better.

"Every known dairy product can be copied in sight, taste and smell by synthetic producers, M. G. Van Buskirk, president of the Illinois Dairy Products Association, said.

He said synthetic dairy products were making such serious inroads into the United States dairy industry that the health of the country would be slowly undermined unless immediate action were taken.

Chances of Spring Election Out By Announcement

OTTAWA (CP) — The government just about said it out loud today the chances of a spring election in 1953 are slim if not non-existent.

He said synthetic dairy products were making such serious inroads into the United States dairy industry that the health of the country would be slowly undermined unless immediate action were taken.

Hey Kids! 'Wanna' Talk With Santa

Call 6,000 On Or After December 10

Hey, kids!

How would you like to pick up the telephone some of these days, call a number and have the cheery voice of Santa Claus answer?

Can't be done, eh! "Wanna bet."

That is what you will be able to do from Wednesday, December 10th., to Saturday, December 20th., between the hours of 6.30 and 8.00 p.m.".

Officials of the Recreation Commission have made special arrangements for Jolly Old St. Nick to be here in person in the period. He has promised to be here, so you'd better plan what you have to say to him for he'll only be able to talk with you for a few seconds.

Here's all you have to do.

Pick up the telephone receiver, ask the operator for number 6,000 (letter 'got that down) and the first thing you know the booming voice of old Santa himself will answer.

But remember these things;

Do not call before December 10th., and do not call long distance. Just ask for 6,000.

Please do not call at other times of the day than between 6.30 and 8.00 p.m. because Santa will be busy in his workshop.

And please do not wait until the last day to call. Santa will be on hand every evening in the aforementioned period except Sunday, to await your calls.

If the line is busy, be patient. Wait a few minutes, then call again.

Remember the starting date; December 10th., between the hours of 6.30 and 8.00 o'clock.

Canadians Wait Seven Hours In Cold for Ike

IN KOREA (CP) — Canadian troops waited for seven hours in bitter cold Thursday for the arrival of U. S. President - elect Eisenhower.

AP correspondent Don Whitehead who accompanied Eisenhower on his Korean Mission said that on his third day's arrival in Korea he reviewed units of combat troops from Allied countries.

"Some cases of frost-bitten feet were reported among troops who had stood for hours waiting for the general's arrival," Whitehead reported.

"One unit—the Canadians—had waited in the cold for seven hours," Whitehead said.

The general obviously wasn't aware the troops had been ordered to assemble so long before his arrival.

A sharp wind from the north sent the temperature skidding to near zero.

The Canadian 25th Brigade is part of the Commonwealth Division in Korea.

DOGS ATTACK SHEEP

BRAMPTON (CP)—A pack of five marauding dogs Wednesday night attacked a flock of 32 registered sheep on the farm of William Armstrong, nine miles northeast of here. Mr. Armstrong said he killed one of the dogs with a .22 rifle but the others got away. "Only one ram and three ewes were untouched by the dogs," he said. "The rest will have to be destroyed they were so badly injured."

Chief Kills Two Planes Called Off

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Search for two lost aircraft — five men in all — has been called off, RCAF officials said today.

Eleven aircraft from RCAF station Centralia scoured Georgian Bay area in a fruitless hunt for four Edmonton football fans, missing since last Friday, when they disappeared on the last leg of their flight in a single engined plane from their home city to Toronto.

Two planes have returned from Bagotville where they took part in a hunt for a lost Sabre jet fighter.

TRIO COMMITTED TO HIGHER COURT

Three men accused of breaking into the offices safe at Trinidad Leaseholds Limited on South Front Street on November 9th were committed for trial in a higher court when they appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in a preliminary hearing in city court this morning.

They are Michael "Mickey" Metrunitz, 40, Walter Johnson, 36, and Robert Knutson, 34, all of Toronto.

The accused were committed on two counts each of breaking and entering and theft and being in possession of stolen goods, to wit; more than $1,000 in cash.

CAPACITY HOUSE AT GUILD PLAY

The Belleville Theatre Guild's presentation, "Ghost Train," dramatized for the final time last night in the auditorium of B. C. V. I., played to a capacity house according to reports received from the Guild president, Mrs. W. J. Doyle.

Last night's production was the second time the play was shown. "Ghost Train" played to a good house on Wednesday night. Mrs. Doyle said the audience on both nights was extremely friendly and appreciative, following the play Thursday evening, a small party was held for the members of the Guild.

GRATIFYING RESULT

The social conscience of this community is in a healthy and active condition. For the second year in a row Belleville has exceeded its Community Chest objective.

This happy result of the Red Feather campaign reveals a widespread awareness of the worthwhile activities directed to social welfare which depend upon the Chest. The six member agencies are now enabled to carry on their services in the community good without curtailment, and to continue meeting needs which extend their ultimate benefits to those in all walks of life in this city.

Success in any campaign of this kind is always a matter of genuine satisfaction to those who were among the subscribers, and to the teams of canvassers who devote themselves to the task of raising funds. For the latter it is an easy chore, but it is one that becomes doubly worthwhile when public-spirited effort is met with such a generous response from citizens.

MUNICIPAL REBELLION

Not since the depression years have municipal property owners been so conscious of the weight of their taxes. Since the end of the war few communities have escaped increasing costs of local government and for most of them the future promises little hope of a downward trend.

It is a curious thing that most ratepayers believe the municipal council determines what the mill rate will be from year to year. And it is the municipal council that they invariably hold to account for the tax levy. It is true that the council must strike the tax rate on the basis of estimates for all departments of the municipal government for the current year, but the important fact, so much overlooked, is that the municipal council exercises a maximum of budget control while it is definitely restricted.

On the other hand, local boards of education enjoy almost unrestricted authority in spending the municipal ratepayers' money. This has long been a bone of contention between councils and boards of education. The boards have the power by provincial statute to demand whatever funds they decide are needed to meet education costs in the municipality. And under this statute the council is powerless to reduce a board's estimates or refuse to provide the money.

In Belleville, for instance, education costs have become so heavy that they now account for more than one-third of the total tax levy in 1952. By 1953 the local costs of education will be higher again and City Council must accept whatever the increased figure may be as a first charge against the tax revenues.

Supposedly City Council may become thoroughly obstinate about this long-standing issue and refuse to accept the board of education estimates?

That is an alternative many councillors have speculated upon many times with relish, and particuly in these harassing postwar years when education costs have become the one greatest single charge against local government. But none of them in this whole province ever got up enough gumption to carry the idea through until just very recently.

Just a while ago in Port Arthur, veteran Mayor Charles W. Cox decided it was time to take the bull by the horns. He saw no law, he proceeded to slash the board of education estimates and he announced that if the board didn't like it, let them sue!

And so the Port Arthur trustees, with nothing but the law on their side, decided to do just that.

The impending court action at the head of the lakes will be watched by every municipal officer in Ontario. And we rather suspect that the unprecedented move by Mayor Cox, a former member of the Ontario Legislature, has been not unwelcomed by the authorities at Queen's Park.

A year ago Municipal Affairs Minister George Dunbar attempted to meet the protests of the municipalities by proposing that three members of councils serve on the school boards. But for some reason this was not acceptable to the municipal men. So there was no adjustment made at all.

Perhaps the Port Arthur case will reveal what authority the councils feel they should have, irrespective what they might get, and offer some basis for agreement. The existing legislation goes away back to the days of the little red schoolhouse on the prairie. Then the problems of today were no frills then. But it was a time when the tendency was in the opposite direction to the point that some municipal councils refused to raise enough money to keep their schools open.

To meet this situation the school boards were established with complete independence in matters of community education. How far the pendulum has swung in the other direction — and at what mounting cost — is now well known.

The law which gave the boards unrestricted spending authority was passed 102 years ago. We have caught up with a lot of neglect in education since then in this province.

FRIENDS

I have no friend I'd throw away.
Whatever be his form or picture
Or what his politics, I may
I have no friend that I can spare
In every color, race or creed,
Cathedral great or mission small
Are friends of mine whose help
I need
And to the end I'd keep them
all.
'Tis true we may hold different views
And differ as we vote and pray
But still not one of them I'd lose,
I have no friend I'd throw

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 5, 1932.

The municipal elections are over for another year and there are indications that the vote polled will be heavy.

Mr. and Mrs. George Carter are celebrating today the 64th. anniversary of their marriage. They were married in England and came to Canada twenty-one years ago. In England he was a gardener and worked on several large estates in that country. Here he continued the same work and for ten years was employed at the Ontario School for the Deaf. Many times called at their home to extend congratulations and to express good wishes.

A howling wind with torrendo-like proportions raged from the north and carried away banging business signs. It cleared by day and the electric sheet and tossed the water into raging white caps. The mild weather of late has caused the ice to soften and weaken, and the cold spell for which had been left too close to the shore, were carried away on the waves. In some parts in the district shingles were torn from barns and window glass broken in houses.

30 YEARS AGO

December 5, 1922.

The members of the Ratepayers' and Property Owners' Association met in the city hall last evening with ex. Mayor Panter in the chair. The assessment of property was discussed, but no definite action was taken. Ald. A. Robinson, secretary of the association, reported a membership of 515 of whom 337 have paid their fees. There is a balance of $153 in the treasury.

Mr. T. A. Thompson of Almonte, secretary of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association is here to make arrangements for the holding of the annual convention of the association in this city during the first week in January.

40 YEARS AGO

December 5, 1912.

Mr. Fred Davey Diamond, who is leaving the position of City Tax Collector to accept the position of Inspector of Weights and Measures with office in this city, was presented with some time ago an address by the members of the various staffs at the city hall with whom he has been associated. The event took place at the city hall last evening and the gifts included a silver coffee service and tray and pudding dish. Among those who were present were Mr. David Price, the city treasurer; Mr. J. A. Kerr, the city assessor; Mr. J. G. Lindsay, the city engineer; Mr. Thomas Gardner, the manager of the gas department; Chief of Police, John Newton; Mr. W. C. Mikel, the city solicitor and city clerk.

50 YEARS AGO

December 5, 1902.

The Prohibitionists of the Province of Ontario won a decided victory in the vote at yesterday's election. Liquor Act of 1902. It is not known yet if the vote is sufficient to put the act in force, although the majority for the act is the way will be reached. A light vote polled in Belleville gave a majority of 25 against prohibition. Trenton gave a majority of 177 in favor of the act.

Mr. G. G. Thrasher, barrister, of Stirling, was in town today.

Mr. J. S. Holgate of Bowmanville is spending a few days in town.

Three Great British Leaders Emerged in National Crises

By LEWIS MILLIGAN

Britain has never lacked a leader in a time of national danger, and it is certainly fortunate that when a man who has been unpopular and whose leadership has been rejected in time of peace. This was the case with Lord Chatham, the elder Pitt, whose shrewd war and leadership guided and saved England and the empire in the Seven Years' War with the French. Before that war he was known as the "Great Commoner" and was an unrivalled orator, but he was distrusted by the king, George II, and frustrated in his political ambitions by members of his own party.

A biography of Pitt, entitled: "Lord Chatham: A War Minister in the Making," by O. A. Sherrard, has just been published in London, and is reviewed in one of London's Weekly by Christopher Wright. Mr. Wright points out that the careers of Chatham, Lloyd George and Winston Churchill have a remarkable similarity. All three, he says, "influenced England at a moment in their assumption of superiority, and dominated its great war through their very appearance all suffered for their success after the war: each was humiliated, all endured periods of frustration, in which it seemed that their chances of the highest office were finally fading."

Lloyd George, in his early days, was a voice crying in the wilderness. Few men in office heard or read his fiery speeches against the Conservative Party and the old Liberal leadership, one day he would rise to power as the leader of the Welsh and their parties in a great war. He was frustrated by his own party, and Asquith, who was the leader, scorned him as a demagogue. Churchill, when a young man at that time, newly returned from his adventures in the Boer War. There was nothing arrogant about his personality or his appearance. He was said to be a room at the rear of the hall in Bournemouth, where he was the one of the speakers, when he strolled in with his thumb in his vest. His dress seemed rather a quizzical smile. He was very ordinary in appearance, but he had an air of aleyness and self-confidence that one associates with a very efficient schemer who is called in to size up a difficult job. I was not much impressed by his speech from the platform; it was perky and humorous, but he suffered from an impediment in the form of a boyish lisp by which he got the nickname of "Winnie."

Churchill was a great admirer of Lord Chatham and his war, I recall how he once remarked that he never fully admired and publicly fought, tooth and nail. But Chatham, Lloyd George and Churchill are known in history as the three greatest British leaders in times of national peril. As Mr. Wright says in his review, "Here are men whom power did not corrupt but ennobled. There was something defiantly splendid about them. We know that I can save this country and that only I can save it."

Mr. Churchill did not repeat that saying when j he assumed the leadership in the dark days of 1940; but he knew, and the whole world knew, that he was the only man who could save the nation from disaster. He at once proceeded to do it. He promised it to "Blood, toil, tears and sweat" and promised it to it. He saved Britain. The pity is that he was not allowed to "finish the job," but was dismissed from the leadership before the peace was assured. Churchill, the great war leader was discharged, leaving Stalin as the sole survivor of the world leadership. And he used it! He captivated the people of Russia, the vast majority of the people were led astray by him, but he became the lient dictator and the Messiah of the Socialist Millennium. Churchill is back in power. He is not in power, and he is an old man, worn out by the tremendous fight for his country. If he were to die at this time, he will stand out from the history of the younger Pitt: "Oh, my country! how I leave my country!"

Blueprints To Fortune

(Fortune Magazine)

Jack Riley is a salesman who started selling at ten, peddling poultry in Joplin, Missouri. He got into the blueprint business in Texas in 1936 because he thought that in a couple of years he might be able to make $25 a week. He was nineteen, and newly married. He could not support a wife on $12 a week, so he got her a job in the same shop.

Two years later he moved to Shreveport, Louisiana, and started a blueprint shop—Riley Reproductions. His wife ironed blue prints all day and took them home to iron his shirts at night. Riley began to specialize in blueprints of oil well locations (Shreveport is full of oil wells). He collected logs in the courthouses, and he called on the major operators to use his shop as a repository for this information. Riley Reproductions grew and he sold them to oil companies. Profits were reinvested in the business, and he added to open branches in other oil-producing areas of Louisiana: Baton Rouge, Lake City, Calgary and Edmonton, and over 125,000 drilling histories of oil wells are now stored in the city hall of Shreveport. Riley owns 60 per cent of his blueprint business and pleasure by profits come from oil companies.

To save time Riley learned to fly. He now keeps an enthusiastic amateur. The blueprint business was established in 1939 and he combined business and pleasure by getting a Taylor cub distributorship in Shreveport. Within a year he had sold eighteen to friends in the business.

Two years ago Riley saw a de Havilland Dove in Calgary, and liked it better than any twin-engined job he had seen. He bought one, and got the distributorship for eight southern states. Riley says that "everybody and his brother" sells eight Doves at about $100,000 each last year. One of his friends who knew his profitable blueprint business "sort of like to buy from me because I'm a pilot. I don't really need the money."

Early this year Riley bought rights from a Los Angeles firm that had developed a method of converting Navion's to twin-engine planes. It used single-engine Navions as "cores" for the job. Riley rebuilds it and the customer gets a twin-engined plane for $86,000, less than half the price of any similar plane. The converted Navion carries four people, has a range of 700 miles, and cruises at 200 m.p.h.

Riley's 1952 gross from his various activities will be about $1 million and he expects that figure to be $19 million in 1953.

They Would Hang Farouk

(Edmonton Journal)

The technique of the public opinion poll is being put to strange uses in the Middle East. A Cairo newspaper recently took a poll among the people of Egypt to find out what they thought should be done with ex-King Farouk. The results had more than the appearance of some U.S. pre-election polls. More than 75 per cent of those questioned thought that Farouk should be brought to trial, and 70 per cent wanted him executed.

WHY?

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

RELIABILITY

No matter how long we live, the long-time, old-fashioned ideas of life and conduct remain the best. Honesty, decency, reliability are eternal values. They work with all peoples and in all times. Of these basic elementals, this reliability, might almost be called the important cornerstone, for without it, no kind of character can long stand.

I have heard women say, time and again, that their reason for trading at a certain store is that it is a reliable place that they can depend upon what they buy there. People interested in baseball will recall that one of the finest players on the New York Yankee team was Henrich, whom they called "the reliable." And they called him that because he so often "rang the bell" in a pinch! A wonderful reputation to have.

There are certain staples we buy because we can depend upon them, no matter how long they have been on the market. You may recall that famous Elbert Hubbard story, "A Message to Garcia," a man by the name of Rowan was selected by President McKinley and was given a message to deliver to the Cuban General during the Spanish-American War. He asked no questions but took the message, and after great hardships delivered the message as he was told. He was selected because he had the reputation for reliability.

People make stupid mistakes, and then fail to keep them. They themselves are least concerned about friendships and opportunities for a successful career. No one wants to do business with one who is unreliable. People are appointed to high positions of trust because they have become known for their reliability.

I recently read of a certain stream in the south where it is said: "Don't worry about finding bottom in the deep hole; they'll find you!" I couldn't help but think that that is the way with men and women. Where there are opportunities there are always those who are ready and are—and grasp them. And those who fail for reliable workers are sure to land in the right ones!

Sunday Sport Is Rejected

(Hamilton Spectator)

When the issue of Sunday-commercialized sports came before Canadians on the question of a referendum it was new and confusing. Now those towns and cities that favored opening their doors to sport on the turnstile, and voted to do it, have had a sobering experience; it has not turned out as they expected. Many have found, despite the old "blue law" restrictions, it has imposed the noisy, restless tyranny of professionalism—money making, recreation, symbolized and traditionally proven in the one day's rest in seven, has found a futile substitute in the opening of sports arenas and to spectator crowds. And that is only the beginning of a wider evil.

Recently five representative centres in Ontario—the capital and some smaller industrial cities turned thumbs down on Sunday professionalism. They are weighing people of Ottawa, Kingston, Gananoque, Brockville and Belleville have demanded their Sunday rest, unspoiled by the clatter of the gate takers. This time they voted knowing what others have found through experience. They were not confused or misled. They understood.

It's All Rain, And Wet, Too

(Vancouver News-Herald)

A lot of Vancouverites are annoyed because photographer Karsh of Ottawa called Vancouver in a article "... the rain is as much a part of Vancouver's landscape as the sea is a part of her wealth."

Mr. Karsh merely faced facts when he reported that. The rain is a great part of our atmosphere is a very wonderful part.

Most of us go around apologizing for the rain, pretending that it doesn't often rain in Vancouver.

What we should do is boast of our rain. We should tell our visitors to come prepared for rain, soft and penetrating, and properly dressed for rain to walk by the seashore, or in the park. They'll love it.

SMALL TURKEYS

(Ottawa Citizen)

No wonder small turkeys are being featured in Christmas offers. They don't yield nearly as much pout-holding flesh.

Personal Health Talks

IMPORTANT NOTICE

We regret to announce that effective at once, due to exchange problems, mail difficulties, etc., Dr. Brady can no longer answer personal letters from readers nor furnish pamphlets or booklets. However, Dr. Brady's health column will continue to give up-to-the-minute information on health matters as heretofore.

HOW TO AVOID CATCHING THE C R I

In "Crab's Progress" in this column recently the old crab said:

"Call it what you will, it makes little difference as long as you are fully aware of these two facts:

(1) That most acute illnesses involving the breathing passages are infectious, communicable, catching.

(2) That any such illness or indisposition (the correspondent was infuriated because I call it C-r-i pronounced screy, meaning Respiratory Infection) is most likely to spread to other persons in the early hours before the nature of it and of the trouble become manifest.

You know—before the alleged "cold" proves to be measles, diphtheria meningitis, infantile paralysis or what not.

My main purpose in urging people to call it C R I is to help to improve matters by everybody's mind the fact that most such indisposition or illnesses are communicable via mouth or nose droplets or spray of invisibly or visibly fine droplets of moisture given off from mouth and/or nose in coughing, sneezing, talking, laughing, and the moisture droplets carry the germs or virus of whatever you may be coming down with.

The main difference between the spray of an open-face cough or sneeze and the spray of mere conversation is that the former may carry ten or twelve feet, the latter less. And we feel, therefore, one sitting or standing more than five feet from the blankety-blanks, and we don't like puddles samples of whatever he or she has caught, under the pretense that it is just a little you know what, is comparatively safe from infection so long as the stinker doesn't cough, sneeze, about or laugh at the victim.

Only when a suitable mask, as described in the booklet, is worn constantly in the presence of other persons, can the spread of respiratory infection be prevented.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In all our cities and most of the bigger towns, Santa Claus is now braving, for the first time in many years, the internal ditties out of store windows, over the top of transoms, and from other points of vantage and surprise all over the down-town districts. It is to continue for another twenty days. The question is: can we take it?

Santa Claus originally was a secretive sort of fellow. Not only did nobody ever see him, but he weren't even supposed to hear him. He'd try standing in the middle of the night. So intent upon not being visualized was he that he came down chimneys instead of using doors or even windows. A most unsatisfactory and ineffectual character did not exist. He was not asked what presents he made on, and you were only to see him in your dreams.

Then about 1870 with the three-quarter point of the last century, Santa Claus, a merchant prince at that or a salesman, got the idea of dressing up as Santa Claus less to create terror than for entertaining his children. The idea spread like wildfire. Santa Claus in his fur suit was soon to be seen everywhere. By 1900, a daddy who couldn't dress up as Santa Claus early Christmas morning wasn't worthy of the name.

But just about the time every house on the street had an old Santa Claus suit stewed away with the Christmas tree decorations, the stores got the idea of using the old gentleman from the domestic to the public sphere. Once he is there he is today, decree of him in every town of any importance with a population of over one thousand.

The connection of Santa Claus with the down chimneys instead of using doors or even windows, is somewhat obscured by the fact that the most solid and multiple of figures, all within two generations, is probably as slick a job as the twentieth century has yet seen. Santa Claus is nevertheless wrath into the noisiest gay in history. It stands as quite a feat of social engineering.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

FOUNDATIONS

Not far from here a young man and his wife have just finished building their home. While they had some help from professional tradesmen, they themselves did almost all the rest of the work themselves, even digging the cellar, sawing planes, buying materials, and actually erecting the house.

One of the most difficult and also most important parts of the work will scarcely show now that the house is finished—the foundations. They knew the least about doing this part, and as far as physical work is it was the hardest of all. But they were sure of one thing: no matter how good the walls of the house was, it would be worthless without good foundations.

Foundations are sensible. They are building their lives the same way when they build their home. They want the best possible foundation for a good and successful living. So they have become members of a church—a church that tries to live the Christianity they profess and that endeavors to make Christ living means.

Jesus said, "whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock."

Quinten Rebekah Lodge Holds Attractive Christmas Bazaar, Tea

Another year has rolled around and once again the I. O. O. F. Hall was the festive Christmas mart for the annual Christmas Bazaar of the Quinten Rebekah Lodge on Wednesday afternoon. By twos and threes and finally the prospective patrons and friends wended their wey up the long stairs to be rewarded by the Nativity scene beside the regal evergreen, with its clusters of red, yellow, green and blue lights and shining ropes of silver. Since then, were the sellers of tickets, Mrs. A. Burley and Mrs. E. McDonald.

Just inside the precincts of the bazaar, were the receptions of Mrs. Miles Miller, Noble Grand and Mrs. Verna Oliphant Vice Noble Grand, who greeted lously welcomed one and all, with a cheering smile and warm handclasp.

Like bees seeking honey, they glitted from booth to booth seeking the elusive Christmas gift, which, judged from the rapidity with which the various booths were despoiled of their pretty articles, were easily found.

Lovely Christmas Picture

The booths, singly and together made a lovely Christmas picture; the lines of gay decorations with their red and green predominating, accented by bright crest crimsons and pale greens, and set the tempo for the full and gleaming Christmas tree, with its many lights, and pretty packages.

First came the fancy work booth, with its unique centre miniature of a choir gathered around a tiny white lacy grand piano, gowned in red and white lace capes; all were there, even to the soloist, and the choir leader with baton. On either side of the choir, making the picture still more realistic, were two tall 100-year-old brass candle-holders bearing aloft tall, red candles. Convening the numerous pretty articles were Mrs. A. Caldwell, Mrs. M. Drummond and Mrs. M. Gills. For sale here were heart-shaped pin cushions edged with pleated satin ribbon frills; dainty hot-mats, pretty wall plaques with sail boats, lacey dollies; clothespin bags made in the form of little dresses; housedoots with quilted wine-colored satin tops, blue bath towels with matching crocheted edges, cocktail aprons, black with band, border of red and fragrant sachets.

Many Varieties

Some lovely artificially colored wild flower stalks with empty seed pods made a pretty centre for the next booth with its great variety of prints, muslins, organdy and broadcloth aprons in tulip pattern design; while others were of the usual all-over and half-apron style. One that especially caught the attention was of print with pale background and trimmed with yellow having a slashed side panel with emeraled pocket. Others showed pot-holders attached. There were shirtwaist aprons and one, a cocktail apron in ecru crochet with blue and pink. These were conversed by Mesdames D. Webber, R. Mitchell, R. Mott and C. Pilgrim.

The candy booth had a hall circle across the top like a rod and green rainbow, from which hung little cornucopias; while a red fringed valance decorated the lower part, the whole highlighted by a miniature Christmas tree. At one end was a little rag doll in blue slacks, sitting in a most dejected attitude and having an expression similar to the little darky boy who said, after gorging himself on watermelon, "I'm going home, but don't bend me." Had she partaken of the delicious cream, chocolates, fudge, maple creams, and candy canes, that littered the scene before her? Ah the far end, was a very dainty booth, who wore a pretty dress of yellow, with a self-satisfied expression because of her lithe form she looked, but lacked not, the conveners and assistants were, Mesdames I. MacMillan, L. Belknap, E. White, C. Ironside and A. Webb.

Parcel Post

The Christmas tree, where the parcel post was doing business, had a number of all kinds, shapes and sizes of parcels, which were prettily wrapped in Christmas trappings. These were distributed to the various ones desiring something unknown. A jolly time was nearby, showing Santa Claus in his little red sleigh driven by a white reindeer, coming across the white expanse of cotton batting. Mrs. J. Baird, and Mrs. J. Bushell were the jolly postmistresses.

At the handkerchief booth, one paused to admire, just a little longer than usual for here, a handkerchief Christmas tree, bearing on its branches all kinds of the dainty white and colored squares; while on the table beneath, many more were piled so pretty with their edges in crochet and tatting, and some with great red roses, making it hard to choose. Mrs. M. Shadlock convened this pretty spot.

Sewing Basket

Another rainbow spread across the Children's Booth, from which were suspended, gaily colored rattles, interspersed with swaying Santa Clauses. Displayed here were a pretty little bassinette in white dotted Swiss, lined with pale pink and a set of A.B.C. blocks; a covey of tiny mitts in pink, white and blue; white woolly bonnets; cute little sacques; panties, aprons, sun suits, jumper suits, comfy nighties in white sprinkled all over with tiny rosebuds; and so many more things that baby needs. Convening this were, Mrs. V. Summers and Mrs. Collins.

The homecooking booth, in charge of Mrs. M. Adams, Mrs McKee, Mrs. West, and Mrs. L. Smith, as usual was the drawing card with its lovely silver basket of iridescent colored oat stalks in blue, gold, dark blue and carmine. Here were luscious pies, lemon, apple, and fruit; tarts of different kinds; cup cakes too pretty to eat; jelly rolls so good; Christmas cakes with decorated tops; raisin and date loaves; date and nut loaves; tea breads; pickles, jams, jellies, catsup and marmalades.

Scene of Lovely Dolls

The doll's booth was a dower of lovely dolls, with the queen of the dolls standing in regal state in the centre, dressed in white organdy dotted with red, bloe and yellow, with matching hat. She would become the prize of the lucky ticket holder. Among the many other doll people was a tiny Hawaiian girl with a wreath of white flowers around her neck; a stocking man, or "Punch" with colored rosettes decorating his suit and his matching cap; a little Irish Colleen with ballerina gown; a two-faced Susie with yellow hair, one face smiled and one went to sleep; and nearby, a big velvet Teddy bear. These were in charge of Mrs. I Addy; Mrs. A. Adams and Mrs. D. Adams.

The variety booth, under Mrs. Florence Pollitt of convenery, assisted by Mrs. M. Vaughn, Mrs. W. Donaldson Mrs. P. Drurey, Miss Wellman and Mrs. G. Abey, had all manner of odds and ends, as well as a little red wagon to go along with the basket holder; gold bracelets; costume pins; plant holders; figurines; pictures; African violets; salad forks; little vases; a dressmaker's dream with scissors, cushion and pots surrounding for each spool of thread; doll's bed, complete with doll, and a pretty black and henna satin cushion top.

Attractive Tea Room

The tea room was situated upstairs and was most attractive with its white gates, each post topped with a red Santa Claus, sleigh and reindeer. In the distance, surrounding the tea table with its lace cloth, centred with a lovely red poinsettia plant, flanked by tall white candles in crystal holders and shining silver services, was a tall bedecked tree. The little quartet tables were each covered with a white cloth, centred with a tiny Christmas tree and silver reindeer.

Had Mailed Letter

The tea room hostess was Mrs. A. Carlisle, taking tickets, Mrs. G. Rogers; presiding at the tea table, Mrs. A. Rose, Mrs. P. Burley, Mrs. T. Aman, Mrs. C. Beal and Mrs. Twiddy. Those who served included Mesdames G. White, K. Abey, H. Darvell, M. Jordon, G. Abey, M. Newlands, H. Bunton, F. Crake, W. Donaldson, M. Parks, Shubert A. Gilway, B. Smith, Misses L. Metz and D. Baldrick. Those serving the delightful cups of tea, Mrs. J. Redner, Mrs. I. Sinfield and Mrs. Briens. Conveners of the tea, Mrs. G. Charlton and Mrs. E. Cherrie; while those who convened the bazaar were Mrs. M. Large and Mrs. D. Hayes.

The winners of the lucky tickets included: 1st, Miss E. McQuaid; dolly, Mrs. I Sinfield; child's chair, Mrs. A. Hart; wagon, Miss H. Miller; box of candies, Mrs. Collins and cream and sugar, Mrs. E. Miller.

An attractive bazaar and dainty tea splendidly convened and pleasingly culminated.

MORE BANKRUPTCIES

OTTAWA (CP)—More businesses failed in the first nine months of this year than in a similar period last year, continuing a post-war trend, the bureau of statistics reported today.

Bankruptcy proceedings rose to 1100 from 1,030 while the average liability for each failure increased to $18,823 from $18,401.

PRESIDENT-ELECT

He jumped off on a backbreaking inspection tour the first day, talking to Sabre jet pilots, marines and soldiers.

Reviewed Troops

One of his first stops was at the headquarters of the U. S. 1st Corps where he reviewed troops gathered from all 17 United Nations units serving in Korea.

Eisenhower's son, Maj. John Eisenhower, was assigned as his father's aide during his tour of Korea. Young Eisenhower is assistant operations officer of the U. S. 3rd infantry division in Korea.

After along was a host of brass including defense secretary-designate Charles E. Wilson, the incoming attorney-general, Herbert Brownell Jr.; the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, Gen. Omar Bradley; the navy's Pacific commander, Admiral Arthur Radford, and the top Far East commanders, Gen. Mark Clark and Gen. James A. Van Fleet.

Others he talked with were Maj.-Gen. Stephen R. Ricomnik of the British Army and deputy commander to General Clark, and Maj.-Gen. William Chase, head of the United States military mission in Formosa, seat of Nationalist China's government.

He watched firing from artillery pieces, ran the line now and visited freshly-wounded at receiving stations in the front.

Jeeping through the brisk Korean cold Eisenhower wore a fur-hooded air force parka, field boots and wool olive drab trousers. Sometimes he traded his costume for a regular army field jacket and pile cap.

Eisenhower carried no pistol but Van Fleet sported his usual white handled automatic.

The long flight from the U. S. apparently did not faze Eisenhower. He was in high spirits. He kept up a running fire of conversation with the field commanders.

Did Not Leave Plane

To maintain secrecy en route to Korea, Eisenhower did not leave his plane until it reached lonely Iwo Jima in the Pacific. He had remained quietly aboard while the sleek Constellation refueled at Travis Air Force Base, Calif., Hickam Field, Hawaii and Midway.

On the long jaunt from New York, Eisenhower's plane carried a double crew to insure that a rested and alert hand was on the controls at all times. The plane carried two pilots in addition to another veteran pilot as aircraft commander.

A complete news blackout on all the general's movements prevailed from the time he walked from New York's Hotel Commodore as though he were going for a stroll.

A small party accompanied the general while his New York headquarters threw up a news screen by doling out the names of the general's future cabinet and aides.

The 77-year-old Dutch Korean president, Syngman Rhee, was on hand in battered Seoul, the 300-year-old Korean capital, to talk with Eisenhower.

But the general's movements were so carefully shielded that many Korean school children and admirers missed him.

To my sponsors and supporters I wish to express my sincere thanks. My deep appreciation of your confidence will guide me at all times while I am furthering Belleville's interests in City Council.

Tea, Auction Sale

A most successful tea and auction sale was held by the Guild of St. Margaret's Church—Hill, yesterday afternoon, with a splendid attendance of patrons and friends.

Appreciative thanks are tendered to those whose support and donations made of the event an outstanding one.

Tabernacle United Church 'All Church' Christmas Bazaar, Tea, Charmingly Successful

Christmas "with all its lovely charm was vividly portrayed on Wednesday afternoon in Tabernacle United Church, when the "All Church" bazaar and tea was officially opened by the Rev. R. J. Rowley, pastor of the church.

After being greeted with silent "welcome" by the little Dutch boy and girl guarding the outer entrance, one was hailed by the beauty of the scene before them. There, half hidden behind a miniature forest of snow-laden evergreens, was the "Church in the Wildwood," the evening Christmas service had just begun, for every window was ablaze with light, and the strains, of lovely "Noel, Noel" from the organ within filled all the place, making the listener loath to leave.

Down a few more steps, and through the swinging doors, to see a fairyland of color; to be welcomed by the wife of the pastor, Mrs. Rowley, Mrs. F. Douglas, Mrs. Burgess and Mrs. A. Mulvey.

Enchanting Picture

Colored lights, and gleaming tinsel, garlands of red and green; a tall emblazoned Christmas tree, a cosy brick fireplace, sprays of fragrant pine in every available nook, merged into one enchanting picture or the Days or Days. Even some magic alchemy had changed the tall big pillars into huge white candy canes, with bands of red, while round about, three sides the various booths were arranged with the apron booth, the linens, and the novelty booth, making a central square, whose corners were marked by little red cedar trees.

The apron booth, convened by Mrs. W. May and Mrs. C. Hogle, assisted by Meadames Izard, Holdrick, Burgess, Farnell, Kerr, Langridge, Schlievert and Winters displayed the efforts of many needle-women. There were aprons for every occasion, made of every kind of material, from prints for the heavy duty, to the gossamer dimities, and organdies for afternoon teas. All were pretty, and attractively styled.

Fine Linens

The linens consisted of embroidered pillow slips in rose design, lilies, "Big and Ker" varied guest towels in pastel shades, luncheon cloths, tea towels, and bath towels in yellow, rose, green, all with crocheted edges; sets of wash cloths and towels, and many other dainty articles ideal for Christmas gifts. These were convened by Mrs. W. Dougherty and Mrs. Stanton, assisted by Meadames Archibald, Brickman, Butler, Cowles, Oliver, Shane and Grant.

The felt work consisted of dainty sewing bags, shopping bags, add children's wear, of all kinds, knitted vests, sacques, bootees, and bonnets. These were convened by Mrs. Shaw and Mrs. Firth.

Attractive Centrepieces

The novelty booth with its garlands, and rosettes of red, white and blue, displayed lovely doilies, attractive centrepieces of wool flowers on swaying wires, in mauve and blue, a bevy of tatted edged handkerchiefs; little chicken cosies for the boiled egg, an embroidered spoon case, laundry bags, dresser sets of blue and pink, hand-painted vases, flower holders, frilly crocheted centrepieces, and coasters for glasses. Mrs. G. Gorsline and Mrs. R. McMillan were the convenors, with Meadames G. May, E. Johnson, C. Ackerman, Smith, Dier, Davis, and Miss Ethel Horton assisting.

The candy booth, convened by Mrs. H. Foote and Mrs. J. Poole, assisted by Mrs. R. Royce and Mrs. H. Bovay, was soon sold out of its delectable sweeties or popcorn balls touched with chocolate, fudge, taffy, barley sugar twists, divinity fudge, and marzipan and finger-dipped chocolates.

Costume Jewellery

Beside the open fireplace and the Christmas tree, the C.G.I.T. girls sold jewellery, which consisted of pearl earrings, rhinestone costume brooches, bracelets necklaces, as well as their C.G.I.T. girl dolls in full uniform, as they doll explorers. They also had charge of the unknown packages that decked the Christmas tree.

The needy booth displayed a fine selection of handicraft, which included a black cat smoker stand, a rag rug, nicely braided; velvet cushion covers with raised wool flowers, Gail's high chair, toy, the jumping jack, lawn furniture, wall brackets in crescent and star design, wall what-nots in buttery design in natural wood finish, fern pedestal, and white enamelled medicine cabinet. Convening the booth were Arthur Naylor, and Ed Schlievert, with G. Brickman, E. Bolton, E. Taylor, A. Firth and W. Judge, assisting.

The parcel post, as usual was soon depleted to the joy of the convening postmisteress, Mrs. J. Thompson, Mrs. M. Nelson, Mrs. Bush, Mrs. Grills and Mrs. Kingston.

Ladies With Good Things

The homecooking booth, convened by Mrs. Ed. Cornish and F. Davidson, assisted by Meadames Grandison, Ashley, Goodfellow, Grey, F. Mitchell, Hallam, Jerome, Nelson, Robinson, Irvine and Hagerman, was laden with all manner of good things in the pastry line, including pies, gems, tarts, rolls, baked Boston beans, potato salad, angel cakes, chocolate cakes, cakes with coconut topping, cookies, large, medium and non-dite variety; pickles, grape jelly, and individual mince pies, and many more which disappeared before the reporter arrived.

The two tea rooms were convened by Mrs. S. Joss and Mrs. H. R. Ross, who had most gracious hostesses providing for their guests accommodations.

The tea tables, one in each tea room, were appointed identically, with lace cloth, hand-made, and centred with a miniature pine tree, beautifully lighted with interspersed red carnations, and flanked by tri-branched silver candelabra lustres, divinity fudge, and marzipan and finger-dipped chocolates.

Those Who Served

Those who presided included, Mrs. M. P. Duff and Mrs. Huddleston; Mrs. French and Mrs. Fisher; Mrs. W. Judge and Mrs. A. D. Archibald; Mrs. W. Ashley and Mrs. W. Lent. While those who served were, Mrs. M. Salisbury, Mrs. D. Smith, Mrs. M. Stewart, Mrs. E. Soulsbo, Mrs. Priest, Mrs. Brown, Miss J. Smyth, Miss H. Thompson, Miss V. Grose, and Meadames C. Mott, J. Bush, W. A. Campbell, L. Andrews, R. Moorman, G. Wambolt, Kindred, D. McLean.

Those who replenished the plates included Mrs. W. Embury, Mrs. S. McGuire, Mrs. E. Barlow, Mrs. Jerome, Mrs. R. Irwin, Mrs. W. Wonnacott, Mrs. C McBride, Mrs. E. Walmsley, Mrs. H. Moorman, Mrs. L. Wannamaker, and Miss E. Moorman.

The general convenor was Mrs. Arthur Naylor assisted by Mrs. C. Mott and Mrs. W. Judge.

Much appreciation is due the convenors for a delightful tea and lovely bazaar, and to the Good Companions Club, and Mr. Earl Blansfield, for the charming decorations, and overall effect, and to all those others whose kindly assistance helped in its successful conclusion.

Rednersville W.I. Enjoys Travelogue, Colored Slides

Rednersville Women's Institute met for its regular monthly meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. George Roblin, with the president in charge. A short singsong was enjoyed.

Business was dealt with briefly.

Guest Speaker

Mrs. Harmon Montgomery, convener for Education, introduced the guest speaker, Mr. George Wishart of the Agricultural Research Laboratory, Belleville. Mr. Wishart with Mrs. Wishart, kindly assisting him at the projector, showed beautiful colored slides and pictures he had taken himself during his four months' travels in Europe.

His interesting comments on each picture in turn combined to make a most exceptional and instructive travelogue.

Mrs. Allan Weese thanked the speaker for his splendid talk and colorful slides.

After the meeting closed the hostess and lunch committee served delicious refreshments and a social half hour was enjoyed.

The December meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Earl Bonter, Tuesday evening, December 9th.

Ladies Aux. Plans Skating Instruction Marathon Bridge

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Quinte Skating and Curling Club was held Tuesday afternoon at the clubhouse.

Mrs. F. C. Miller, the president, presided.

The convener of each committee gave an outline of plans for the coming season.

Of immediate interest is the acceptance of Mrs. Olivia Weese to instruct during the figure skating periods. Mrs. Weese is well known in the city and district and has given freely of her time and talent. The children enjoy the lessons and many are anxious for the cold weather and a good sheet of ice.

Films Presented

Mrs. Jack Dickens presented plans of the social committee. The second bridge marathon will commence early in January. Mothers of club members are invited to play and to notify Mrs. R. L. Smith by phoning 1611M. The Valentine tea, which has been popular for the past three years, will be held in February at which time a draw will be made on the Royal Doulton figurine "Blythe Morning." Other activities will be held at various dates.

A social half hour concluded the successful business meeting.

Unity of Purpose, Topic at Foxboro W.I.

The Foxboro Women's Institute met on Tuesday evening at the new recreational hall in the school at Foxboro with 36 ladies present.

Mrs. E. Hollinger opened the meeting and conducted the business.

Mrs. J. Reynolds and Mrs. V. Harry were in charge of the program. Mrs. C. Hubble gave a reading, "Sleigh Ride". Mrs. W. Simmons explained the theme, "Open Hand, Open Heart, Open Mouth" in the form of a short quiz. Mrs. M. Shorey read "Wonder World", and then all present sang "Silent Night".

Mrs. Tummon gave two readings, "There is a Santa", and "What is a Boy?".

Guest Speaker

Mrs. Hollinger introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Roscoe Robson, the district president. Mrs. Robson's address was most instructive to conveners and to all the ladies present in that the members of the W.I. are "all one in the Institute", and that they should try to have a better understanding of each other. Mrs. Robson closed with two inspiring readings, "Farmers and Women", and "I Smells", by Edna Jacques.

Following there was a mince pie contest with Mrs. G. Dicastle taking honors for the best mince pie.

Gifts were also presented to the new kitchen by members instead of the usual exchange of gifts.

Refreshments were served and a most enjoyable evening was had by all.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She's awaiting — divorce— should she get wed with next?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 18, and separated from my husband. I was married at 16.

The trouble between us was mostly jealousy on his part, and I was a little jealous, too. Personally, though, I believe there should be a little jealousy in marriage, or you probably don't think much of your husband. There was love in our marriage for a time, but his jealousy killed my love.

Now I am waiting for my divorce, and what I want to know is this. My husband is running around with other girls, and I have been asked out by other fellows, and would like to know if it would be proper for me to accept dates with them.—J. O.

Dear J.O.:

There are two reasons why it is a very poor idea for a woman not yet divorced to have dates with other men.

For one thing, it is in very bad taste, and makes the girl look like a light-headed, irresponsible person who can't wait to be rid of one man before running around with others.

The second reason is that, until a marriage is legally dissolved, there is always the possibility of trouble cropping up if a woman has friendships with other men. Under such conditions, if a husband is angry and resentful because his wife is divorcing him, it is not at all impossible for him to put her in a very disgraceful position if he learns that she has new men friends.

For your own sake, therefore, I strongly advise you to wait until your divorce has become final before going around as though you were a single girl.

And I would like to add this: I think you had better discard your ideas about jealousy before you think of getting married again, or you may have another marital failure on your hands.

Mother won't let her write to boy friend away at school

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 14 years of age, and a freshman in high school.

The boy across the street, who is 16, asked me to write to him while he is away at school. I asked my mother if I could do this, and she said I was too young so write to boys. The letters we write are just a few short paragraphs about things that happen in school and in the neighborhood. What do you think about this?—B. F.

Dear B.F.:

I can't understand why your mother should feel the way she does about your writing to this boy. Any young fellow who is away at school naturally likes to hear from his friends back home, and I certainly think you should be permitted to exchange letters with him, keeping him up to date on what is going on at school and in the neighborhood.

If your mother absolutely refuses to allow you to do this, then I suggest that you ask this boy if he won't write a nice note direct to your mother and ask her himself if she won't let you write to him occasionally. On your might adopt the plan of getting a group of girls and boys he knows to write joint letters to him, say once a week or so, each one putting in a paragraph or two telling the letter. Surely your mother could have no objection to anything like that, and it would be a lot of fun.

Let me know how you make out. I would be interested to hear.

Readers' Friday Column

By Mary Moore

QUESTION:

. . . enclosing my recipe for fruit cake. As you can see the fruit is soaked for 1 or 2 hours . . . could I put a little brandy at that stage? If so how much? I was especially pleased to see Tomato Soup Cake . . . mine was too moist . . . yours is different. Will you be having a recipe in the Almond Cream Darling? If so will you please send me one! (Mrs.) Helen C.

ANSWER:

Yes, you can soak the fruit in some brandy if you wish. Reduce the amount of grape juice to 3-4 cup and add 1-4 cup of brandy to it. Soak the fruits in this mixture. Steamed Puddings were given yesterday. I hope you saw them.

QUESTION:

I see you have many queries for diets. . . hope you will be able to help me as I have so splendidly done for others. I need a self-reducing diet. My main problem is making a substitute for cake, cookies, etc. . . . I know that there must be no baking powder or soda, no dried fruits, no glaceed meats but livers.

In case you or any readers would like a recipe for Salt-Free bread here it is: Using 1 package Yeast making 2 loaves: 2 cups of flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons shortening, 2 cups water. It may require more flour to mix stiff, . . . will be grateful indeed for any recipes you may give. —Mrs. S. R.

ANSWER:

I am mailing to you a salt-free diet menu sheet. Most patients on salt-free diets use sweet yeast breads in place of cake and find them not only satisfactory but pleasanter altogether. They would not want to go back to cake and baking powder cakes.

Here is one I like and which I made up this week for a tea.

CHERRY COFFEE CAKE

(Those who make this for normal diet should add 1-2 teaspoon salt.)

In 1-2 cup lukewarm water soak 1 package granular yeast with 1 teaspoon sugar, stirring twice during 15 minutes. In a warm bowl cream until fluffy 1-2 cup saltless butter or best quality shortening, then beat in 1-2 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 2 beaten eggs, 1-2 cup lukewarm milk and 1-2 teaspoon each cinnamon and freshly grated nutmeg. When well mixed add yeast mixture which will have risen to top of measuring cup by this time. Stir in 4 1-2 cups sifted bread flour. Now kneed or stir for 5 minutes. Scrape dough from sides of bowl, butter top of dough, cover with cloth and let rise 1 1-2 hours or until double in size. Cut dough down. Now add 4 oz. sliced candied cherries and 1-4 cup chopped dates or peel and shape into two round loaves. Butter pans, let rise until doubled. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 20 to 25 minutes.

Thank you for the recipe for Salt-Free Bread.

QUESTION:

. . . your many suggestions have been a great help. . . I have no trouble with butter cakes or sponge cakes or angel foods, but one trouble I have and that, is when making Christmas cakes they want to go moldy on me after storing for about 1 or 2 months. My cakes turn out lovely. It is a disappointment when after New Years or even before they start to mold. (Recipes for dark and light fruit cake enclosed.) Mrs. M. B. C.

ANSWER:

I notice that both of the recipes for fruit cakes call for either sour cream or milk. Do not use these ingredients if you want to store your cakes. Replace the sour cream in the dark cake with 1-4 cup butter plus 3-4 cup more fruit juice and a pineapple. However I do not think the cake requires that much liquid and so lessen as much as possible. Leave it out entirely if you can still stir the cake. Better still use the tested cakes printed in this column Nov. 20.

QUESTION:

. . . recipe for Sweet and Sour Spareribs—the kind served with Chinese food . . . they were done in red sauce—Mrs. S.

ANSWER:

As you know the spareribs are cut so that the meat is left on both sides of one rib; this rib is then cut in halves crosswise. These pieces of rib are dipped in Cover Batter—To 1 beaten egg add 3-4 cup milk, 1 teaspoon melted fat. Sift over them 1 cup sifted flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1-2 teaspoon baking powder. Stir until smooth. Fry in deep or shallow fat until golden. Place in baking dish. Pour over them Sweet-Sour Sauce—1 cup sweet pickle vinegar, 1 cup best tomato catsup, 1-2 cup cold water. Into this stir a mixture of 1-4 cup brown sugar and 2 tablespoons cornstarch until thick and smooth over heat. Add 1-2 cup chopped sweet pickle, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper. Pour over ribs fried in batter, bake covered at 300 deg. Fahr. 1 hour.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S WONDERFUL to watch how designers, season after season, give the good old standbys a fresh new look. Very new and smart is a medium gray flannel suit with a blouse-back jacket shaped in by buttons, which, like the velvet collar and cuff inlay, are black.

TEAMED up with a slim skirt, the well-done fur jacket becomes a smart accessory. Beautiful colors, such as lipstick red, banana beige and peacock, are among those selected for a nice little rabbit jacket with an interesting double-tier yoke and broad half belt in back. The collar buttons high or folds back at the throat. Looks like rabbit is doing all right again!

FIRST PRIZE for the prettiest evening gown we have set eyes on this winter goes to one in white silk chiffon. The delicate fabric is worked into an intricate lily draped and tucked bodice, the softly curved strapless neckline trimmed with bands of wild mink. Layers of shirred chiffon form the waltz-length skirt.

IDEAL for a youthful wearer is a polo and skirt twosome. The fabric is black and white tweed, with black braid accenting the side gores of the skirt. The shaped stole is lined with black jersey and is reversible.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Useful, inexpensive presents for the golden wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please suggest something appropriate —to cost about $5—for a gift for my husband and me to give to a very dear couple who will be married 50 years soon? I'm quite sure they aren't going to have a celebration, but we attended their wedding 50 years ago and we'd like to "surprise" them with a gift. Stella K.

You should, of course, send this Golden Wedding "bride and groom" something that both can use and enjoy. . . .and it would be nice if you could find something of a golden color. For example: a golden-colay pottery or china or bowl (for centrepiece, or fruit bowl), or medium-size vase; a painted serving tray, with gold or dark-yellow as the background or predominant color; a decorative box for their coffee table or end-table; photograph frame, gold-color fancy paper or fabric or leather; a gold-color table cloth or place mats, linen or novelty cotton or plastic; one or two bath towels each; or . . . to shed a charming light on the Great Day. . . . a pair of low or medium-height amber-color glass candlesticks, with accompanying yellow candles for their table. . . . one fo each?

May be some reason why girl's mother did not rise to greet guests

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently I came to know in our local Junior College, where we are both day students, a very attractive girl who lives not very far from me. (We are both in our late teens.) Yesterday we were walking home from school together, met a boy whom we both know, and she invited us both to go to her home to have a coke and cookies. When we entered, her mother was sitting in the living room, said 'How do you do' to the boy and me as we were introduced to her, but did not rise. Should she have risen? My mother would have risen, I'm sure.—Jean.

As hostess it would have been perfectly natural, for the mother to rise to greet her daughter's guests, particularly when they were being introduced to her. However, don't pass judgment until you are sure whether or not there was some reason why she perhaps found it difficult or impossible to rise. . . .she may be lame, or she may not be well.

Making it easy for bride to exchange wedding present

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have been invited to a wedding of a very dear friend of ours back home, where we lived until quite lately. I am planning to order a wedding present of a silver tray to be sent from the local specialty shop there. However, I am not sure about the size she would find most useful, or not sure that ours will be a duplicate. So I would like to write on the card to be enclosed "We're sending this from Mary Robinson's, so you can easily exchange it if you prefer another size or something else." Will my husband doesn't approve of this, says it takes away the "personality" of a wedding present. What is your point of view?—Dolores B.

Your point of view is my point of view. . . . You are extremely kind and thoughtful to make it easy for your friend to have what she prefers. It is especially important that such an important present as a silver tray be of the size most useful to the household she is to have, and she doubtless doesn't want more than one of the same size. Also you are wise not to order the monogramming until you've seen it. Your friend will bless you for your forethought!

Women of The Moose Sponsor Fine Bazaar

On Thursday afternoon, the Women of the Moose, Belleville Chapter 583, held their annual bazaar with co-worker, Mary Vandusen, as convener.

The hall was beautifully decorated with colorful streamers and individual tea tables were covered with white cloths and centred with vases of flowers.

At the head of the hall sat the long tea table with Chatage, of Regents Faith Maginnis pouring tea, assisted by Junior Regent Olive Roth, Guide Gladys Bilch, Senior Regent Mary Peoples and co-workers, Nellie Burns and Florence Churgel, serving.

Children's Table

Along each side of the room was the display tables. On the children's table were dainty little aprons, slips, cute plaid and check skirts and boleros, and many dresses of different sizes and hues to enchant the little girl's heart. Presiding at this table was co-worker, Annie Davidson.

At the next table were several beautiful cushions, cushion tops, shopping bags and a miniature chesterfield suite in wine and grey for some doll to relax on. Also large draw string purses to hold the various things women find to put in them. At this table were treasurer, Nellie Scrymgeour and chaplain, Emily Jeffery.

Beautiful Dolls

Presiding over the beautiful dolls and dollie clothing were, Mary Vandusen and Olive Roth. There were brides, bridesmaids, grooms, Negro dolls, all dainty dressed; all sorts of clothing too, from the small unmentionables to hunting togs.

Taking care of the White Elephant table with its various prizes was Selina Ilse.

Much laughter came from the saw dust bin, here each guest after paying a small fee was allowed to dip in the saw-dust for a token and came up with ornaments, toys and other oddments. Guarding these treasurers was Joyce McKenzie.

Next, but not least, was the homecooking table with delicious cakes, fancied in chocolate and white; cup cakes, taffy tarts, macaroons, pumpkin pie and apple pie; candy of all different kinds, and many more goodies too numerous to mention. In charge of this table was Peggy Minto.

The last table was the fancywork with everything to win a woman's heart: daintily embroidered pillow cases, tea towels, hand towels, with crocheted baskets, aprons of all sizes and colors; oven mitts, luncheon cloths, doilies, and pot holders. Convening those were Eva Little, and Luella Bull.

Co-workers helping at various things included: Lena Cohnel, Anne Chainard and Margaret Crawford.

Taking tickets at the door was Pearl Wey.

Many thanks were tendered to the convener, Mary Vandusen, and to all who worked so faithfully to make the bazaar the huge success it was.

CAMPBELLFORD

Two Newcomers To Serve Terms On Utilities

Campbellford—A comparatively light vote on Monday, gave a decisive victory to two newcomers to the Public Utilities Commission, gave the position of Reeve to last year's Deputy Reeve, Oscar Mason, by the narrow margin of three votes, and placed two new men on the council.

Oscar Mason received 562 votes to Wm. Nicholas' 559. A recount was needed last year to decide which of these same two men would get the job of Deputy Reeve, and 14 votes decided the question in favor of Mr. Mason, who served as Deputy Reeve in the 1951 council, and also the 1951.

Two newcomers to the council contest last out in the final count. G. I. Blair and W. Geo. Brabazon polled 639 respectively. Reeve R. J. Locke was made mayor by acclamation this year, leaving his seat on council vacant. Councillor A. F. Collette, a member of the 1951 council was nominated but did not run for re-election. The two council seats were filled by a former councillor of a few years back, F. W. Burgess, and another former councillor, F. M. Rutherford.

Suffers Broken Arm

Lyle Nelson, eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Nelson of Warkworth suffered a broken arm and bruised face on Sunday afternoon when he fell from the rafters to the floor of a barn at the home of his parents.

Lyle was playing in the barn with some other children, and attempted to walk across a board between two rafters. The board slipped, causing the lad to the floor below.

He was taken to Campbellford hospital where he was attended by Dr. Britnell of Warkworth. After X-rays showed a break, a cast was applied and the boy was allowed to go home.

Car Strikes Pole

Losing control of his car on the county road a few miles north of Campbellford on Sunday evening, Glen McMaster, of Campbellford, suffered a broken nose and possible fractures of facial bones when his car struck a hydro pole.

McMaster threw himself in front of his passenger, Leila Pollock, Havelock, when he saw the car was going to strike the pole.

The hydro pole was broken off at the base, and leaned at an angle over the road, allowing high tension wires to dangle dangerously close to the roadway. Campbellford and Provincial Police kept passers-by away from the fallen wires until line crews of the H.E.P.C. from Campbellford arrived to supervise removal of the pole which was wedged against the post.

After power through the line, which carried power to the No. 11 power house near Campbellford, was cut off, the car was removed without incident.

Miss Pollock suffered a bruised right leg.

Sunday School Lesson:

Truth Has Nothing to Fear

By ROY L. SMITH

The problem of evil is one of the oldest dilemmas with which the mind of man has ever wrestled. "Why do good people suffer?" "Why does evil seem, so win so many victories?" "Why is wrong on the throne and truth forever on the scaffold?"

These are not easy questions to answer, but it is worthy of note that atheism has not done as well in trying to answer as faith has. It is always well to remember that skepticism has just as many dilemmas to solve as religion has. We do not get away from problems when we turn agnostic.

Jesus, a Story Teller

Jesus' great skill as a teacher appears in the skill with which He told stories as a means of setting forth great truths. In this case He describes the experience of a farmer who, having planted good seed, discovers that poisonous weeds have grown up with his wheat. There can be no doubt about the seed. He knows it was good. The problem is what to do about the weeds.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for December 7: "Jesus, the Great Teacher," Matthew 13.

His hired hands suggest that they will go into the field and pull up all the weeds, but the farmer knows that well that this will result in the ruin of a very great deal of the grain for, in the early stages, it is very difficult to tell the two apart. He decides, therefore, to let the whole field go for a while, knowing that in due time the true character of each will become apparent, and then the situation can be dealt with accurately and without waste.

Evil Cannot Long Deceive

An attorney with an impressive record of cases won in court was being urged by a younger man to rush into a certain situation and "show them crooks up."

"No," the older man said, "I don't think that is the way to handle it. I have discovered as a result of a good many years in the practice of law that the truth will not go hidden forever. Some day the facts will come to light, and the truth will be known. I find it best to wait for the truth to vindicate itself without my help."

The Real Issue

Jesus is not here attempting to deal with the complex problem of the origin of evil. He is only trying to teach one simple truth. We can always be sure that the thing which is opposed the will of God is evil.

Through the first few weeks of the growing season the tares seemed to prosper. They got as much rain from the sky and drew as much nourishment from the soil as did the wheat. But there was a friendliness for the wheat in the heart of the farmer which assured the grain of survival, and there was an enmity for the tares in the heart of the same farmer which fixed the fate of the weeds. And the same thing is true of life. Truth has nothing to fear. The facts are all on its side. If this be true, then the truth can afford to wait.

Leaven in the Meal

Jesus was profoundly convinced that there is a divine influence at work in this world which is allied to justice, honor, righteousness and truth, and that the victory will be won eventually. It is just like yeast which spreads out through the dough. It makes no noise, creates no excitement, and is accompanied by no fanfare. But it is irresistible! The final victory belongs to it!

Of one thing Jesus was profoundly convinced. God was working on the matter, and that settled it. "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My word shall not."

HATE OF WESTERN

Admiration for the socialist countries was almost unanimous. Among the western Communists, the admiration was inspired by their Marxist ideology. Western Communists whether they are from France, Great Britain, America or Canada, are not fools. They know perfectly well that as far as material advancement is concerned, socialist countries — including Russia — are 100 years behind the capitalist countries.

Admit West is Ahead

They cannot help making comparisons in which the USSR always comes off on top, but in general, they admit that the West is way ahead of the People's Democracies.

But Marxist dogma rules their choice. A Communist economy is infinitely more to be preferred than a capitalist economy. As a result they are completely convinced that the day will come when Marxism will be on top in every way, even though yesterday comparisons are not particularly flattering to Communism. Their faith is firm and hope accordingly lodged in their hearts.

It's quite a different matter for the Orientals. They have suffered imperialist and capitalist domination. Their standard of living is lower than you could possibly imagine. In the monsoon regions of Asia, there is constant famine. The difference in balance between the size of the population and its food supply is periodically upset by drough, flood, war and revolution. And when this balance is destroyed, five or 10 million men, women and children silently die. The bodies are picked up each morning from the streets and the deaths continue until the next harvest, which, everyone hopes, will be better than the last one.

Socialism Is An Ideal

Socialism is an ideal to these under-fed peoples. It is part of the science of material progress. They don't want any part of the Western systems under which they have suffered. They are told that in the Soviet Union no man exploits another. They see that the Soviet Union has a higher standard of living than their own. That is enough for them, even if they are not Marxists; even if they are opposed to the atheistic and materialistic aspects of Communism. They are attracted to it anyway by the promise it holds out of material gain.

Side by side with this admiration of socialism, there is sometimes fanatic and sometimes naive, goes a hatred of Western Powers which are lumped together collectively as capitalist dictatorships. This hatred is intense.

The most frequent topic of conversation is about the restrictions which have been placed on travel in Iron Curtain countries. The first question you are likely to be asked is: "You come from Canada? How did you manage to leave your country? Will you run into trouble when you get back?"

And then you are told long tales of the troubles some delegations had to reach Peking. The Americans come in for particular sympathy. The others know that they were forced to leave the U.S. secretly and that they will run into difficulties when they get home. So everyone is particularly nice to them.

No one wants to know if it would be possible to get peace conferences in Washington that non-Communist delegates from Russia, China and the other People's Democracies would be allowed to attend. If you ask that question, you are looked at in astonishment, as if to say, "Is this fellow mad?" Because the socialist countries are the cradle of liberty and the capitalist countries are the concentration camp of oppressed peoples.

IVANHOE

Rev. B. Beckel Gives Farewell Message

Ivanhoe — "I thank my God upon every remembrance of You," Philipians 1: 3, was the text chosen by Rev. Boyd Beckel in a farewell message to his people of Beulah United Church on Sunday evening. This service was largely attended.

Mr. Beckel spoke of the memories he cherished, of the fellowship and the happy times enjoyed on this charge and also the sorrow shared. The associations with the young in the teen-age and other groups had been a source of inspiration and great joy to him.

In closing he urged that all would continue to serve with even greater consecration and zeal, that the work of the church might go forward with a strong and steadfast faith in the power of Jesus Christ.

Baptismal Rites

During the service three babies were baptized, Eric Malcolm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm MacMillan; Stephenie Elleen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stephens; Bryan Keith James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Bray.

Special music by the choir was under the direction of Mrs. Stanley Mather, Anthem, "Draw Me Nearer," duet parts taken by Mrs. George Wood and Mrs. Earl McMaster, and solo part, by Miss Marjorie Pyett. Anthem, "God Will Take Care of You," duet part by George Wood and Earl McMaster.

BANCROFT

TB Director Outlines Work To Lions Club

BANCROFT—Dr. Allan Ideson, director of the Ontario Tuberculosis Association, addressed a meeting of the Bancroft Lions Club on Monday evening. His address was illustrated by a film dealing with the rehabilitation of patients discharged from sanatoriums. The director stressed public education in methods of prevention as the main factor in combatting the disease. This work is supported by public purchase of Christmas seals.

Reports were heard from the chairman of committees dealing with various aspects of the club's work. Alex Smith reported the purchase of a wheel chair for an invalid child of the district and other cases under investigation.

Cecil McAlpine announced that the club's annual Santa Claus Parade will be held on December 13th and promises to be a bigger and better event than ever for the kiddies.

Leo Fritzberger, on behalf of the Civic Improvement League, outlined a list of projected activities designed to improve the village, one of these is the proposed skood tyring clinic, the exact date of which will be announced shortly.

Plans are being formulated to provide older persons with Christmas boxes under the direction of Dr. Irwin Fonger. The annual New Year's Dance this year will be under the chairmanship of Jim Schram who has plans under way. The meeting concluded with the usual raffle of a merchandise certificate, which was won by Gordon Fresque.

CHRISTMAS TURKEY

GALT, Ont. (CP)—Civic board of works employees will receive one annual Christmas gifts of turkeys this year, but other city employees may accept $10 in lieu of the turkey.

Misdirection of Law Argued As Suchan, Jackson Ask Right Of Appeal to Supreme Court

TORONTO (CP) — Steve Suchan and Leonard Jackson, sentenced to be hanged Dec. 16 for the murder of Toronto detective Edmund Trag, will know soon — likely next week — whether they may carry an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Mr. Justice J. W. Estey reserved decision Thursday on their request for leave to make the appeal. His decision will hinge on whether there was any misdirection of law at their trial in Toronto.

In a two-day hearing, representatives of the crown and defence argued whether the trial judge should have admitted certain evidence that came before the jury.

Question Evidence

The evidence dealt with the capture of the two men after gunfights in Montreal and the target practice they engaged in on a dummy force the night before detective Trag was shot on a Toronto street March 1.

Defence counsel John J. Robinette and Arthur Maloney argued that the trial judge, Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Ontario Supreme Court, should not have admitted this evidence.

Robinette argued there be had admitted it, he should have made clear to the jury that it was to be put only to "limited use" since it was not totally relevant to the charge of murder.

They also argued that Mr. Justice McRuer was wrong in refusing to grant an adjournment to give newly-appointed defence counsel a chance to consult with the accused.

In reply, W. B. Common, Ontario prosecutions director, said the question of admissibility was a matter of "discretion" and not of law. He said Mr. Robinette had been experienced lawyer even before the preliminary hearing, County legal aid was available to Jackson but he did not ask for it.

Instead, said Mr. Common, Suchan and Jackson "fouted" the law by engaging their own counsel of the notorious Boyd gang just before the trial was to take place.

The evidence of the Montreal shooting and the Toronto target practice was needed by the crown to show a consistent pattern of action and association by the two men.

Loneliest Lifer Married to Widow Who Was Friend

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Ernest Lindquist, 63-year-old man known as the lone state penitentiary's "loneliest lifer," was married Thursday to the 68-year-old widow who befriended him.

Lindquist and Mrs. Addie L. Jackson got permission from his parole board for the ceremony.

Lindquist was paroled last April after serving 26 years of a life term for slaying a policeman. He got the "loneliest lifer" tag after news stories disclosed he had received no mail in prison for 30 years.

Mrs. Jackson read about it, sent him letters and gifts and finally went to see him. Then romance bloomed.

Find $200,000 in Cash In Room of Recluse; One Bill for $10,000

NEW YORK (AP)—A 64-year-old man, who had lived quietly in a Queens rooming house for years died and police found more than $200,000 in his $25 monthly room—including a $10,000 bill.

The cash police said apparently died Wednesday night of natural causes, was identified as Roger Stewart.

Police searching the room found the money in a bag. It included 127 $1,000 bills.

The landlady Mrs. Alice Flannery, told police Stewart was a virtual recluse.

OFFBOSE CPA CARGO BID

MONTREAL (CP) — Trans-Canada Air Lines will oppose an application by Canadian Pacific Airlines to the air transport board for a prosecutions to operate a transcontinental cargo service, it is learned. No date has been set for the board hearing. TCA is awaiting publication of details of the CPA plans regarding type of aircraft to be employed, rates and schedules before making its case against the application.

Senate Leader Suggests Haig Heads P.C. Party

OTTAWA (CP)—The government leader in the Senate suggested—with some sarcasm—that Senator John T. Haig is the leader of the Progressive Conservative party and not George Drew.

Senator Haig heads the eight-member Progressive Conservative membership in the 102-seat upper chamber.

The government leader, Senator Wishart Robertson, Thursday criticized remarks made last Tuesday by Senator Haig.

He said Senator Haig had appealed for less political debate in the Senate and had charged that Canada spends as much on defence as though she had 20,000,000 men under arms instead of 100,000.

Senator Robertson said a "deep reason" prompted the first statement by Senator Haig.

He added:

"With that astuteness which characterizes him, he feels that it would probably be well not to emphasize the political side of the issue hoping that the latest ability of any opposition to 'score' lies by their fighting among themselves."

Senator Haig's remarks on defence closely resembled those made in a radio address by Progressive Conservative members of Parliament, he said. He asked Robertson to think there had been some consultation on the matter.

"I was only thinking a little faster than they were," Senator Haig interjected.

Replied Senator Robertson:

"That simply confirms my view that my honorable friend is the leader of his party and that they do not know today what he said yesterday."

Hitler's Last Will Declared Valid By German Court

DUESSELDORF, (Reuters)—The will Adolf Hitler made in his last days was upheld as valid by a German court.

The ruling came Thursday as the court rejected a Swiss publisher's claim that his rights in Hitler's literary heritage had been infringed by the German publication of "Hitler's Table Talk."

The Swiss publisher, Francois Genoud, based his claim on his possession of copyrights to stenographic records of Hitler's private conversations. He made the purchase from Hitler's sister, Paula.

But the court found Paula was not Hitler's legal heir, and held Genoud's contract invalid.

Hitler's private estate left his property to the Nazi party, or, if it could cease to exist, to the German state.

Prince Charles Learns to Swim

LONDON (Reuters) — Prince Charles, chubby four-year-old heir to the British throne, is learning to swim from his seafaring father.

The young Prince already can swim six breast strokes before floundering.

His father, the Duke of Edinburgh, himself a fluid swimmer, got high diver. He holds up his son during the lessons with a long pole fitted with a rubber loop.

Committee Takes No Action On Suggested Changes

OTTAWA (CP)—A London, Ont., doctor tried to convince a Senate committee that it should change a prohibition against advertising cures or treatments for certain diseases.

Dr. Evan Shute of the Shute Foundation said Thursday the prohibition in the Food and Drugs Act may mean that doctors cannot undertake scientific educational programs on their work.

The committee took no action on Dr. Shute's suggested changes to the legislation after Dr. C. A. Morrell, director of the health department's food and drug division, said the prohibition will not interfere with Dr. Shute advocating the use of vitamin E for heart disease.

Dr. Morrell said the ban was confined to advertising to the general public by persons directly or indirectly interested in promoting sale of drugs.

Earlier, Dr. Shute said the Canadian Medical Association and the Ontario Medical Association denied him their platforms to explain his treatment with vitamin E. Canadian medical publications also rejected articles on a similar subject.

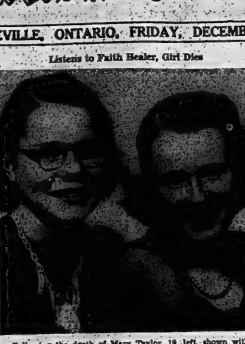
Teachers Seek Code For Student Punishment

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario secondary school teachers are looking for a code of student punishment.

A standard guide for punishment would "make the punishment fit the crime" is suggested in Education Facts, a monthly leaflet of the Toronto branch, Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

The article urges teachers, parents and educational authorities to get together to work out a formula that would guide punishment misdemeanors and list punishments. It says that at present there may be a wide variety of punishment handed out by different teachers for the same breach of conduct.

Three advantages for a standard code are listed:



1. It would impress on the pupil that a certain misdemeanor or infraction of rules brings certain disciplinary action.

2. It would serve to put a brake on the teacher who is too aggressive in disciplinary measures, and to give courage to teachers inclined toward weakness.

3. It would remove much of the source of criticism directed by parents toward teachers and the schools.

FOUR ESCAPE JAIL

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP)—Four men broke out of the provincial jail here Thursday by sawing through bars on a lavatory window. Police and city police threw up road blocks around Prince George, 400 miles north of Vancouver. The four escapees are Lorne McQuarrie, Douglas Johnson Terence Talbot and Conley Hall.

Listens to Faith Healer, Girl Dies

Following the death of Mary Taylor, 19, left, shown with her sister Joyce, legislation may be enacted to curb the preaching of faith healers. Suffering from diabetes, Mary gave up insulin following the visit to her home town of Barrie, Ont., of R. W. Holmes, a travelling evangelist of the Voice of Healing association. Two days after she refused to take insulin, she was dead. — Central Press Canadian.

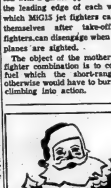
Jane's Reports Russia Develops Mother Plane to Carry Two Jet Fighters at High Attitude

LONDON (AP)—Russia has developed a mother plane which can carry two jet fighters at high altitude until they are needed for combat, Jane's "All The World's Aircraft" says.

The unofficial but authoritative aviation handbook described the flying aircraft carriers as a modified version of the four-engined TU4, a Soviet copy of the United States Air Force B29 Superfortress.

Jane's edition for 1952-53, out today, said the TU4s have been fitted with a girder-type structure on the leading edge of each wing to which MiG15 jet fighters can hook themselves after take-off. The fighters can disengage when enemy planes are sighted.

The object of the mother plane-fighter combination is to conserve fuel which on a long-range trip otherwise would have to burn while climbing into action.



The new method seems to adapt a ferrying idea used in experimental work of other countries in the past. An 1784 Montgolfier was dropped last spring from a U.S. Air Force B36. B29s have been used in launching speedy research planes such as the X1 and the Navy Skyrocket.

Jane's said a new Russian jet fighter now in production is believed to be slightly faster than the MiG15, itself in the speed of sound class doing 10 miles or more a minute.

The handbook also passed along a few new reports about the Russian type'B bomber, a six-engined craft believed by the U.S. Air Force to be capable of flying from Russia to American targets and back.

Jane's said the plane, a sweptwing type driven by either six jet or six turboprop engines, is believed to be in production in a factory in central Russia.

Jane's reported that Russia's production of fighter planes was now about 11,000 a year—half her total plane output.

Walter Reuther New CIO Head In Bitter Fight

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP) — The CIO's new president, Walter P. Reuther, today started a fight-to-the-finish campaign to keep the labor organization' an active factor in North America's industrial life.

Reuther, in a speech accepting the post as successor to the late Philip Murray, said he would strive for the biggest possible gains for workers already organized, and campaign vigorously to organize workers who are now non-union.

Election of the dynamic, 45-year-old Reuther, head of the big CIO Auto Workers Union, came late Thursday as a climax to the CIO's annual convention.

It capped a bitterly-contested fight pitting Reuther against a union old-timer and former coal miner, Allan S. Haywood. Haywood, 64, was re-elected as the CIO's executive vice-president after losing the showdown to Reuther.

The split in CIO ranks over the election apparently was quickly healed, at least on the surface. Reuther told the convention:

"We are not going to go out of here divided. We are going to go out of here united to carry on this struggle until we win."

The ballot result was announced at 3,079,181 for Reuther and 2,413,-568 for Haywood, giving Reuther a margin of about eight per cent of the CIO's claimed membership.

The new president said he was content to keep the pay at $21,250 annual salary he gets as president of the more than 1,000,000-member Auto Workers Union.

"I'm in the labor movement not for what they pay me," he told reporters. "I'm in here because I believe in what they're doing."

Reuther spoke about the proposed guaranteed annual wage — a plan to require employers to guarantee a specified annual income for workers — in reiterating that it will be his prime objective in the auto industry when present contracts expire in two years.

Shipping Season Closes

TWO HARBORS, Minn. (AP)— The head-of-the-lakes iron ore shipping season officially closed 7:00 EST Thursday when the D. M. Clemens, United States Steel Private Line's sole remaining Division vessel, cleared port here.

The last boat left Duluth-Superior harbor, about 25 miles southwest of here, at 11:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The Clemson carries 11,300 tons of iron ore to Lorain port.

Shipping of other products, such as oil and coal, will continue until the harbors become ice-locked.

Lie Expected to Fire 9 More Americans in Employ of UN For Alleged Communist Ties

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — Secretary-General Trygve Lie was expected today to fire nine more American employees of the UN who refused to answer the McCarran committee's questions about alleged Communist party membership or subversive activities.

Nine other American employees of the UN secretariat already have been fired for balking at U. S. investigation questions.

Some On Leave

The nine scheduled to be fired have been on special leave with pay — but banned from entering the UN secretariat — since they refused to answer questions by the U. S. Senate internal security subcommittee, headed by Senator Pat McCarran, (Dem., Nev.), on constitutional grounds that their answers might incriminate them.

Lie was said to have served an ultimatum on them last Monday to answer these questions to him by noon Thursday or face firing. Their answers all were reported unsatisfactory.

Advice of Judges

The secretary-general's decision was backed by the recommendation of a three-man panel of international jurists who advised him to fire any American employee who dodged questions about alleged Red espionage or subversive ring, created a "climate of suspicion."

Contents of the nine replies to Lie's ultimatum were not made public.

Of the nine previously fired, six have been let out since the McCarran committee started its probe of UN employees in October. The six had temporary contracts which were not renewed. Three others had been fired earlier for refusing to answer queries of a previous investigating committee.

Dr. Firestone Paints Picture Of Strong Economy

MONTREAL (CP)—A high-ranking federal economist predicts that Canada's national production may more than double in the next 25 years, climbing to $60,000,000,000 by 1977.

Dr. O. J. Firestone, the trade department's economic adviser, also predicted Thursday night that Canada's population, currently about 14,000,000, likely will rise to more than 23,000,000 in the next quarter century.

Dr. Firestone painted a picture of a strong economy, built on expanding consumer purchasing power, bigger exports and increased investments in the Canadian economy. The nature of Canada's growth holds a lesson for Canadian business men, he observed in a speech prepared for the Engineering Institute of Canada.

He noted that in spite of a major world depression in the 1930s, Canada in the last quarter century has expanded her aluminum production by 23 times; her zinc, 4½ times; nickel and copper, four times; asbestos, 10.

Oil production had jumped from almost nothing to more than 68,000,000 barrels and her gold production to more than 4,500,000 tons.

DAMAGES SOUGHT

MAINZ, Germany, (AP)—Bavaria's state supreme ruling family Wednesday filed a 606,895-mark ($97,341 claim against the American and French occupation forces for alleged damages inflicted by Allied soldiers at Ludwigshoehe Castle near here.

RAWDON

Many Attend Bible Society Service

Rawdon — St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, was filled to capacity with approximately 100 extra chairs needed to accommodate the large number of worshippers who gathered from all the Protestant churches in Stirling and district, for a massed community Bible Society service on Sunday evening.

The choir loft was filled with a group of choristers from the churches in the village and the centre seats were used for a massed junior choir wearing their own church gowns and these children sang "Wonderful Book of Life," with Mrs. Clarke Rodgers, junior choir leader of St. Andrew's, playing the accompaniment.

Mrs. R. H. Williams, church organist, rendered special music previous and throughout the service. The pastor, the Rev. W. H. V. Walker, presided and opened with "Stand up for Jesus" and welcomed the large gathering.

Interdenom School Children

Rev. A. E. Baker, U.E., pastor of St. Paul's United, spoke briefly and introduced the children from the nearby public schools who read the various Bible verses. They were Dawn Hubel, Glen Rose school; Carol Fargey, Ridge Road school; John Sager, River Valley school; Sally Fox and Allen Bird, Stirling Union school.

Rev. H. Sgerion Young, Toronto, district secretary of the Bible Society, was the guest speaker. He told the children a true story of his missionary work when he travelled to and fro by dog team and emphasized the necessity of a compass and then stressed that "the Bible is our compass for our life travels."

Today the Bible is the best read book and in 1954 the Society will observe 150 years of Christian service, in translating and circulating the Bible, without comment throughout the world.

The World Bible Crusade tries to remind the people of the need in the power of the Bible to search family and national life and to strengthen the moral and spiritual fibre of humanity. It tries to awaken the Christian world to the missionary significance of Scripture circulation in the various languages and dialects so that all the people will have equal opportunity to read the Word of God and to enjoy freedom.

Sound Film

Later in the service Mr. Young presented the sound motion picture film, "Bible on the Table," which was a sermon in itself.

The offering was $125 and more will come in this week from various organizations.

Rev. H. C. Secker, rector of St. John's Church, England, and Rev. R. R. Bonsteel, pastor of Rawdon United circuit, each spoke briefly and expressed thanks to Mr. Young. The service closed with the rendition of "Oh, Word of God Incarnate."

Executive Meeting

Following the church service, Mrs. Arnold Wannamaker, Grace Chapel, president of the District group of the Bible Society presided.

The resignation of Mrs. Harper Rollins, who has served as secretary for several years, was accepted and she was graciously tendered a vote of thanks for her efforts.

The officers for 1953 are: President (re-elected), Mr. Arnold Wannamaker, Grace Chapel; secretary, Mrs. R. H. Williams; St. Andrew's; treasurer, Mrs. Norah Wescott, St. Paul's.

A committee was appointed to represent all the churches. It was unanimously agreed to make this event a yearly affair and the 1953 Bible Society service will be held at St. Paul's, with each church having its turn in the following years.

To several, all in attendance this had been their first opportunity to attend a Bible Society service and they graciously appreciated the opportunity.

Labor Party Warned On Nationalization

LONDON, (AP)—Tom Williamson, head of one of Britain's biggest unions, Wednesday warned the Labor party go take it easy on its plans for further nationalization. Williamson, who leads the 850,000-strong National Union of General and Municipal Workers, wrote in the union journal: "Much more thinking on this issue of public ownership must be forthcoming than has so far been the case. The movement is to gain the confidence of the final arbiter—the electorate."

STORK CATCHES UP

TORONTO (CP)—The stork finally won a race with taxi driver Harry Firsten. The 33-year-old cabbie, a grandfather himself, had been hustling expectant mothers to Toronto hospital for 26 years. He always managed to get them in time until Tuesday, when Mrs. Sylvia Lamarche beat him to a daughter in his cab while he was speeding to hospital.

Spirituals Developed Through Negro's Love of Music, Slave-Day Misery

A speaker who illustrated his talk vocally was heard by members of the Prince of Wales Home and School Association at the December meeting held in the school.

The Reverend Keith Daniel, guest speaker, chose as his subject of "Negro Spirituals," described graphically the origin, history, and many other interesting phases of spirituals.

Mr. Daniel first sang the well-known spiritual, "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho," and then told of the actual Biblical battle and the part Joshua played. In "Deep River," which Mr. Daniel also sang, he endeavored to illustrate the extent of this spiritual, pointing out the Negro often sings to himself. He said the songs were not composed, but like Topsy, they just "growed."

Flash Back

Through Mr. Daniel's description we were taken back to the Negro and back in the old days. There would be the frock-coated, tall Sir who are being able to neither read nor write, yet knowing his Bible, "A way over yonder in the middle of the field" and "Steal Away to Jesus." Mr. Daniel used the spiritual to illustrate the deep feeling of the Negro slave.

"How these spirituals came into being is a long and old story," Mr. Daniel said, "possibly a preacher may have given a sermon on the prodigal son and urged his congregation to steal away home."

"When the average person goes to church, Mr. Daniel said, "he goes for peace and a quiet time with God. He is likely tired and low and feels by attending church he may find a measure of relief. But it was not so with the Negro slaves. Their life consisted of work, sleep and food on the churches.

"The Negro's life was limited, he had only what the white man gave him. He did not even have much to hope for, with the exception of prayer. And in this hope, he aroused himself in loud prayer and once aroused, all his fears cast out in the "A-men" at the meeting.

"If a thunderstorm arose, the Negro described it with gusto in song as the Lord's Call and when the fury of the storm was reached he sang, "Steal Away to Jesus, I Ain't Got Long to stay here." That came the corporate religious experience."

Division of Melodies

Mr. Daniel continued, "The African slave who came to North America had no inspiration, they simply developed their own melodies themselves. For that reason, the hymns of this country are different from those of England." The melodies developed here were beautiful and none were sad as he illustrated. "Sometimes I Feel Like a Mother-less Child."

"It is said, there is melody in the African Negro church, but that it is so only in South Africa. On one occasion a band leader tried to take the rhythm of certain tribes and they changed it several times so he became confused. Modern dance rhythm is never heard in the African dance."

"The Negro always sings at his work, making up songs as he goes along. The sinful makes one want to dance and stamp the feet and the religious, to rock and sway."

"Their instinct for serious rhythm is natural However, the Negro has often mured up his Emte such as in the Spiritual, "Wade in the Water Children," and sometimes the spirituals are ordinary, but the beautiful "Virgin Mary," brings the Lord to life for us all. The Negro religion hinges around deliverance, for there was little else left. The slave might be placed on auction and be separated from his family forever."

Feeling of Kinship

"Hymns of the Cross appealed to these dusky folk as they felt akin to Jesus in their common persecution. In the spiritual, "His Never Said a Mumbling Word," the Negro felt his oneness with Jesus. In "When They Crucified My Lord," the cross to these is the sins of the world, and here they have all the sympathy of the Negro.

On this note, Mr. Daniel closed his talk. The speaker was introduced to the group by Mrs. E. Price and Mrs D. Cowles expressed thanks for the rich experience gained by the group in listening to the speaker.

Earlier in the meeting Mrs. Leona Bailey had read the Christmas Story at the devotional exercises for the month. It was decided at that time, to have a social night at the door. Also in the way of Association business, the executive meeting, usually held once a month will not be held this month. It is planned that a speaker will be present at the January meeting. At the January meeting, as well, an auction will be held.

Miss E. Leddey's room won the banner for the month. A prize was also got for the girls the class usually exchange at this time.

Christmas carols were led by Mrs. Dickson and enjoyed by all present. At the conclusion, refreshments were served.

Mrs. Gerald Huff, Louise, Joanne and Larry were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Phillips.

FAST WORK SAVES LIVES

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Quick thinking by Anthony Dexter of Niagara Falls saved the lives of his wife and two young children Wednesday. Soon after Dexter arrived at work he became violently ill. He rushed home and found his family almost overcome by gas fumes. The Niagara Falls fire department revived the woman and children.

CATTLE THEFT CHARGE

BROCKVILLE (CP)M O Proulnin 47 hearing on charges of cattle theft against Mrs. Clara Medwed-zwicz and Mrs. Doris Scrimger of Montreal started Wednesday. The couple elected trial by judge and jury. The pair are charged with stealing cattle valued at $10,253 from Aaron Bojlman and Felix Grabosky last Sept. 15.

See-Saw Trend Is Developing In Living Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — A see-saw trend appears to have developed in Canada's living costs. But this has caused only the tiniest fluctuations in the new consumer price index.

For some months now, the new prices yardstick, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, has shown shifts of exactly one-tenth of a point. The experts believe there may be no marked changes for the next few months at least.

October's survey likely will be published by the bureau of statistics Friday along with the old cost-of-living index, based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100.

Both will be published simultaneously for the spell five months when the old gauge will be discarded.

During September the new index, which the bureau considers far more accurate than the old one, dropped one-tenth of a point to 118.5 from 118.1. That compared with the peak of 118.2 last December.

The tenth-of-a-point see-saw began last May. The CPI climbed to 116.0 from 115.8. It rose to 116.1 the following month, dropped to 115.9 in July, rose again to 116.1 in August and came down to the same old 116.0 the following month.

The old index took a more definite direction. It dropped 1.5 points during September to 185.0 from 186.5, the third consecutive monthly decline. It compared with the peak of 191.5 last December.

Food prices, which had been declining in previous months, continued to lend the drop during September. The price of 10 pounds of potatoes fell 11 cents.

Meat prices have continued to drop and experts believe the decline may continue well into 1953.

Parsons Scorn Santa Legend, Carol Singing

LONDON (Reuters) — Two parsons threw cold water on two traditional Christmas customs. One condemned carol singing as a racket, the other debunked Santa Claus.

In Birmingham, Rev. Guy Standbridge wrote Wednesday in his parish magazine that kids who sing one verse of a carol outside private houses, then beg for money, run a profitable racket.

In Abergavenny, Wales, Rev. Malcolm Riley said he wished the legend of Santa Claus could be banned. Then children might learn about the Babe of Bethlehem."

EATS 36 EGGS

ALVINSTON (CP — Ralph Fryer, 17, ate three dozen eggs for a bet in a restaurant in this community, 20 miles southeast of Sarnia. Fried three at a time, he consumed them as fast as they were cooked. After that, he called for cake and coffee.

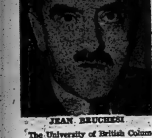
Quebec Historian Writes New Book On 'Le Canada'

By BERTRAND THIBAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer



QUEBEC (CP)—The newest book written about Canada for foreign consul, especially European—readers has come from the pen of Jean Bruchesi, 52-year-old Quebec historian and civil servant.

Mr. Bruchesi was commissioned to write "Le Canada" by publisher Fernand Nathan of Paris, for a collection "Memoires de France et du Monde." ("Wonders of France, and of the World.")

The author, who is provincial under-secretary of Quebec province and a member of many cultural societies, jumped at the chance to help make Canada better known and loved by contributing a book to the lists collection.

Well-Known Writer

Mr. Bruchesi had several historical works to recommend him for the job of writing the text and selecting the photographs for "Le Canada."

JEAN BRUCHESI

The University of British Columbia recently informed him it has selected his "Histoire du Canada" as required reading in one faculty.

A book on Canadian history, written especially for youngsters, "L'Epopee Canadienne," has been cited for several years by French-speaking school children in British Columbia.

Mr. Bruchesi's office, with its Canadian paintings, Breton statuettes and piles of books, is far from a quiet retreat in which to write books.

At odd moments between his administrative duties, numerous trips and lectures at Marguerite Bourgeoys College for women in Montreal, he finds time to write and look up archives and other works on the country's history.

Well Illustrated

"Le Canada" made heavy demands on its author. Apart from writing a 15,000-word review of leading political, religious and intellectual facts in Canadian history, he selected 132 photographs, out of 800, showing various points of interest in the country.

"This book will be translated in several languages," he said. "It is the first of its kind to give an accurate idea of Canada's achievements, past and present."

The cover of the book will show a view of Quebec City from the top of the Quebec legislature tower.

Quebec Insists On TV Control

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec government does not intend to yield without "a fight" what it believes to be the right to censor films exercised in the province.

The statement was made Wednesday in the Legislative Council —provincial upper house—by Edouard Asselin, government leader in the council, when a government bill establishing censorship of television programs was discussed.

The bill was given final reading on division and only requires royal assent to become law. No vote was called.

Two weeks ago the Legislative Assembly adopted the bill unanimously.

When the bill becomes law, the CBC will separately be required to submit films televised in Quebec board of cinema censors.

Fines up to $500 may be imposed on persons found guilty of televising unconsented films. Film and equipment may be seized.

Jealousy Ends 50-Year Span Of Matrimony

MANCHESTER, Eng. (AP) Harry and Elizabeth Almacre, both 77, had been married more than 50 years.

There were the usual quarrels, of course, but Mrs. Almacre was a bit jealous.

The other night the wife had just gone upstairs to bed and Almacre was waiting to hear the end of a concert on the radio.

"Who has come in?" I can hear a woman's voice," the woman called from upstairs.

The husband called back: "No one, dear."

Moments later he heard a thud. At the bottom of the stairs was his wife, dead.

At a coroner's inquest, the husband said she must have been hurrying down to see if there was another woman where she stumbled and fell.

The voice was that of a woman radio announcer.

Million Dollars Worth of Pelts Sold at Auction

MONTREAL (CP) — Approximately $1,000,000 worth of mink pelts and Alaska sealskins was sold at Canadian fur auction sales yesterday in a one-day auction.

Bulk of the skins offered consisted of 30,000 pelts of ranch and imitation mink and 6,500 sealskins.

A. C. Prentice, auctioneer, said prices offered in the sales averaging $100 each for sealskins and $36.50 for regular mink would set a price basis for the season, in this area at least. Demand seemed to be for better quality furs this year.

Another special sale will be held Dec. 22 and the first general sale this season will be held Jan. 5, when the first wild furs will be offered.

Condition Critical

WOODSTOCK (CP)—Condition of Jessie McDonald, Woodstock teenager found unconscious in a car in a lonely cemetery with the body of an 18-year-old Bright district boy, remains critical, hospital officials said.

The boy was James E. Capling, who is believed to have died of carbon monoxide fumes.

The parked car with the girl and the boy was found in Chesterfield cemetery, about 13 miles northeast of Woodstock.

Provincial police said investigations indicated the incident was accidental.

Intercontinental Guided Missile Just Over Horizon

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—J. H. (Dutch) Kindelberger, board chairman of North American Aviation, said today the development of a "true intercontinental guided missile is "just over the horizon."

Kindelberger, in a prepared address to the California Chamber of Commerce, said that such a missile will be capable of accurately delivering to any point on the surface of the earth in a few hours a warhead carrying infinite destruction, and which because of its speed and altitude will be impossible to intercept."

Technical problems make it impossible to predict how soon the extreme long-range missile will be available.

"We are working on it, and I have no doubt that Russia, aided by captured German scientists, is also working on it," Kindelberger said.

"If there was ever an argument for the unity of the free world, this world peace, we now have it in this weapon just over the horizon."

North American, builder of the famed F-86 Sabre jet, also is active in secret missile development work.

Was Not Good In Translation Editor Is Out

BERLIN (AP) — Walter Grieperau, assistant editor of the Soviet sector National Zeitung, was reported to have been fired today for allowing an anti-Stalin statement to be published.

Grieperau's name was removed from the newspaper's masthead in this morning's edition.

The National Zeitung, organ of former Nazis who collaborate with the ruling Communists, published a sentence in Albanian last week as part of the Kremlin's "friendship for the Albanian" campaign. Experts on the language discovered the wrong translation of the sentence was "The people of Albania will find a way to free themselves from the Stalin yoke."

Still 'Pretty Sick', Ava Back to Africa

LONDON (AP) — Ava Gardner, pale and still "feeling pretty sick" from dysentery, flew back to Africa and movie making today.

Miss Gardner's plane left for Kenya colony to continue making the movie "Mogambo" with Clark Gable. Shooting was interrupted two weeks ago when she flew to London for treatment. She spent four days in a London nursing home.

She took with her a 25-pound supply of beef and lamb chops to help rebuild her strength.

Sources in London said the meat was flown from the U.S. as a gift.

He Staggered, But Not Tight

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Edward Tillman, Jr., 27, denied he'd ever took a drink when he appeared in court on a drunkenness charge.

"How come you were staggering then?" asked Judge Andrew A. Glenn.

Tillman explained his employer had told him to mix two quarts of wood alcohol with three gallons of water for a window washing chore and he got the formula wrong.

Case dismissed," said the judge, after learning from a doctor that the fumes from three gallons of wood alcohol most certainly would make a man stagger.

WED 50 YEARS AFTER

PRESTWICK, Scotland. (AP)—Landscape gardener James Jarvis, a widower from Bellingham, Wash., arrived by plane Wednesday to marry his Scottish childhood sweetheart. Both are 72 now and last saw each other 50 years ago. The bride-to-be is Mrs. Agnes Mathieson, a widow.

Noronic Victim Says Nightmares Still Haunt Her

DETROIT (CP) — Mrs. Jane Meiser, 42, of Toledo, O., showed Commissioner of Claims Ralph Vince the scarred palms of her hands and said she still has nightmares because of her experience aboard the cruiser Noronic when it burned three years ago in Toronto harbor.

Some 119 passengers lost their lives in the tragic blaze.

Earlier Mr. Vince held similar hearings in Cleveland where claims valued at about $10,000,000 were filed.

However, the Canada Steamship Lines' offer of $2,150,000 to cover all liabilities have been accepted and it now is up to the commissioner to determine how the money should be divided among the individual claimants.

Mrs. Meiser, the mother of four children, said Wednesday she suffered rope burns to her hands when she slid 36 feet to the water and then swam to a dock.

He Didn't Like Cop's Attitude

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) An irate motorist had to be driven from his car with tear gas Wednesday after he refused to accept a traffic ticket.

Patrolman Larry Taylor said he wrote a reckless driving ticket for Hal Long, 34.

"He wouldn't take it," Taylor said, "so I reached in to take his key out of the ignition. Then he slugged me."

The officer said Long then rolled up all the windows and locked himself in the car.

Taylor radioed for help and deputies dropped a tear gas pellet through an opening in the canvas top of the car.

That brought Long out and he was booked on a charge of assault and battery.

Long denied that he slugged Taylor.

"He's just a tyrant," Long said. "He gave me a ticket once before. I acted the way I did because I don't like his attitude."

Franco Likely To Head Spain For Long Time

MADRID (Reuters)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco, with two recent diplomatic successes to his credit, celebrates his 60th birthday today with no serious rivals in sight on the political horizon.

Observers here believe that, barring unforseen developments, he is set to remain at the head of Spanish affairs for a long time.

His supporters, toting up the credit side of his balance sheet, listed high Spain's success in November in being elected a member of the United Nations educational, scientific and cultural organization.

Almost simultaneously new agreements signed in Tangier among Britain, France, Spain and Italy virtually restored to Spain the administrative privileges taken from her after the Second World War.

Listed, too, were the abolition of food rationing this year the expectation that electric power production will reach 10,000,000,000 kilowatt hours compared with 8,

Grant Increase

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The government has granted a temporary increase of 10 cents a gross ton in selling rates for transportation of iron ore by 27 Great Lakes contract water carriers.

The office of price stabilization said Wednesday the increase was made retroactive to last July 30 and will expire Dec. 31. It was reported here the increase applies to U.S. shipping companies only.

The agency said that iron ore transportation is highly important to the national defence program. In granting the raise, OPS said it took into account normal cost increases for the carriers.

850,000,000 in 1951 and 3,272,000,000 in 1952; a wheat crop of about 4,000,000 tons coal production of 12,000,000 tons (compared with 7,000,000 in 1945 and industrial activity index at 188.1 on the basis of 100 for the years 1935-39.

France's critics, less well-placed to air their views, list against him: wages have been kept far too low industrialization has been given undue preference over housing, and heavy spending has more than doubled the public 'debt.'

Bruins Cut Black Hawks' Top Spot Margin As Detroit Wallops Rangers

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

What should be a rip-snorting, bone-jolting, spine-tingling battle of the ice-laces takes place tonight down Kingston way, where the up-and-coming Glen Rays of this village are the guests of the powerful Kingston Goodyears. That is if the wild, woolly, and sometimes wacky battle staged by the squads here last Friday can be used as a barometer.

Readers, that joust was one for the archives. The boys let go with everything they had, and it wouldn't have surprised the 900 faithful had they appeared for the third period with artillery, tanks and the odd mortar.

They tossed out bodychecks that would have rocked a dinosaur. They lambasted one another on and off the boards in sheer abandon, and something like a few feet of adhesive tape was used to patch up cuts, bruises and bumps. Twenty penalties handed out by Referee Herb Payne and he could have used more if he had seen a little more.

A report from Kingston says: "Last Friday the Glens squeezed past Kingston in Belleville. The score was 3-2 and the injuries for Kingston multiply. Bob Loseby had a shiner and only Nick McKeown was cut around the eyes and Ken Parris received a nice-inch gash near an ear. The Goodyears are out to avenge the defeat and the game could be the most exciting played in the Community Centre this year."

So it would appear the Glens have given due notice they, they can play it rough if that's what the opposition likes, or they can play it nice and gentle if the foeman desires it that way.

It should be a rollicking rumbustious bout if, and there is every reason to believe it, the Goodies are out for revenge. Should be a jolly old battle of give and take for the Glens' sagely demonstrated they're not going to be pushed around in any team, head of all the ancient feuding from Reddenville.

A win for the Glens will hoist them into second spot in the eastern division of the group with eight points, two ahead of the Peterborough Petes. The Littlelords are currently another stalwart at the hands of the Orillia Terriers on Wednesday night, losing by a 7-3 count. Their record to date is three wins and seven losses. The Glens have chalked up three victories as against five defeats, while the Goodies have five wins and four setbacks.

With big Vera Geyer back in harness and playing on the defence and the possibility of Bill Tarrand seeing action, the Glens will be bolstered behind the blueline. Even with the forward divisions are in good shape and show little effect of the bumps received last Friday. . . Tony Farid has come up with two brilliant exhibitions in his initial appearance here and that fact has boosted the team's morale no end.

LINDSAY TONIGHT!

Meanwhile the speedy Lindsay Warriors will be on tap here tonight to take the ever-loading Black Hawks. Coach Don Barrett, who came through with a 5-4 victory in his debut against Kingston the other night, says his charges are in good shape and ready for the fast-skating kids from the Sunrise district. They lost a close 4-3 battle to the Cobourg Jays the other night, so it looks like the lakeshore town youngsters will be no "pushovers for the rest of the bash."

The Hawks broke the three-all deadlock for top spot by defeating the Kingston crew and at the moment are out in front with four wins, and two losses for eight points. The O.H.A. Intermediate and group representatives decided to call the first round games of Cobourg and Oshawa, with the rest of the pack, four-point affairs. This is not proving satisfactory and don't be surprised to see a change in the near future.

The Hawks will be at full strength tonight and are not selling the speedy Lindsay kids short by any means. The Scuppers are a bevy of hard-skating, hard-checking kids who in no way to speak say applecart in the loop. They defeated the Kingston Vics. 2-1 in their last meeting, so tonight's show should be a fast, hard-fought affair. Game starts at 9 o'clock, not 8.30.

LOST IS FOUND!

The mystery of the missing birth certificates has been cleared up. Twenty-four mammas and pappas can relax, now for the certificates which disappeared last summer have turned up.

They arrived in the city yesterday in a letter written by Walter Bent, late of this city. Bent said he found them in a suit of clothes he had not worn for some time. The letter was postmarked Montreal.

Here is a list of the certificates which are being held by Recreational Director "Ted" Doran. Donald G. Bishop, Glenn A. Bennett; Gerald M. Dell, Charles Kingston, Walter Douglas Asselstine, Robert L. Vaughan, John R. Matthews, Allan R. McCann, Peter J. Young, George E. Ferguson, Joseph F. Ryan., Albert M. Wright, Garry Durne, Arthur W. HAS NEVER SEEN SONS PLAY

Venerable Bill Bentley, elderly father of hockey's famed brother act of Doug and Max, has never seen either Doug or Max play a game in the National Hockey League. Now that Doug is out of the League, his only hope is of seeing Max with Toronto Maple Leafs. If Torrey makes the playoffs, old Bill plans to motor down from Delisle, Sask. with several members of the family to watch hockey's dizzy deedle dandy in action.

IAY WEAR TOQUE

Boston Bruins have bought Lee LaBine, rookie winger, a black and gold toque, and are hoping he will wear it in regular National Hockey League games. LaBine, who is being billed as the "Prairie Magnificent Screwball" in Boston, is very proud of the toque and has been wearing it in practices. Lynn Patrick, Boston coach, is all in favor of LaBine wearing the toque in league games, figuring it will add a flash of color to the Bruins.

Hand Tobin Crew 5-1 Setback As Wings Score 5-3 Triumph; Leafs Topple Canadiens 2-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ted Lindsay, Detroit Red Wings' cracker-jack left winger, is knocking on the door of the National Hockey League's select club of goal scorers.

The 27-year-old sharpshooter needs only one more goal to become the 25th player in the NHL's modern history to hit the double century goal mark.

Lindsay, now in his ninth season with the Wings after jumping from junior ranks with Toronto St. Michael's College, Thursday night fired his 12th goal this season and his 192th of his pro career as Detroit defeated the last place New York Rangers 5-3.

The victory brought the Wings to within three points of the leading Chicago Black Hawks, who dropped a 5-1 decision to Boston Bruins while Toronto Maple Leafs bombed Montreal to score a 2-1 win over the Canadiens. The Wings and Leafs moved into a third-place tie, three points behind the Wings, and the Canadiens fell to fifth place, two point behind Toronto and Boston.

Second Player

Lindsay, runner-up for league scoring honors last season with 69 points from 30 goals and 39 assists, will be the second player to reach the 200-goal mark this season when he does pull the trigger. Elmer Lach of the Canadiens did it earlier.

Only 9,841 fans—the smallest crowd for a Detroit game this season—saw the Wings outclass the Rangers, only a few hours after the second-death Chicago or owner Jim Norris. The Wings jumped into a 3-0 lead early in the opening period on Lindsay's goal and the first of two markers by Marty Pavelich.

Lindsay scored at 1:04 and his 40-foot shot beat Chuck Rayner cleanly. Pavelich's first goal followed a 150-foot solo dash up the ice side.

Less than four minutes remained of the second period when he got his second, deflecting a pass from Glen Skov. That goal came after Reg Sinclair and the Wings had fired 4-1. Dea Prentice having scored for the Rangers in the first period.

Nick Mickoski's goal less than two minutes after the start of the third period cut the margin to 4-2. Gordie Howe boosted Detroit's margin before the midway mark, but Allen Stanley reduced it with a goal for the Rangers less than three minutes later.

Two second-period goals by Rudy Migay and Ron Stewart were all the Maple Leafs needed to beat the Canadiens before 14,186 in Montreal.

Rocket Scores

The Montrealers caught fire too late, Maurice Richard seeing their marker less than four minutes from the end. It was the 329th goal of his NHL career.

The game blew up in the third period with two fights. Bert Olmstead and Tod Sloan drew major penalties for one brawl and minors were handed out later in the period when Olmstead tangled with Kennedy.

The Leafs, with Max Bentley, Howie Meeker and Gordie Hamilton missing from the line-up because of injuries, came through with their first win in eight starts, in their preceding seven games they had lost five and tied two.

Boston's win over the Hawks was their fourth straight. Ed Sandford was the spearhead of the Bruins' attack, netting two goals to help in handing the Hawks their first setback in six games.

The other Boston scorers were Real Chevrefils, Joe Klukay and Dave Creighton.

Chicago's lone goal was counted by former Bruin Pete Babando.

Greenshirts Lose Three in Row To Quebec Jrs.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener Greenshirts lost the third game of their current Quebec tour when Quebec Citadelles edged them 3-1 in an interlocking-scheduled Quebec-Ontario Junior Hockey League contest at Quebec.

It was the Greenshirts' fourth game of the tour. They lost to Montreal Canadiens and Three Rivers Reds and tied with the lastplace Montreal Royals.

The Cits' win Thursday night took them within two points of Montreal Canadiens, leaders of the four-team Quebec loop. Kitchener stiff'n in eighth place in the nine-team Ontario league.

The Greenshirts pushed ahead in the first period and led Quebec 1-0 on a goal by Horne. In the second, Camille Henri notched one and Gerard Lacroix scored the winning goal.

Quebec goalie Marcel Paille managed to hold the Greenshirts in the final period as they tried to tie the score.

Quebec drew seven of the 12 penalties, but a 10-minute misconduct went to Kitchener.

In the Ontario league tonight, Toronto Marlboros play at Guelph and Windsor visits Barrie. No games are scheduled in the Quebec loop.

Central Ontario Bowling League

Belleville Recreations took the measure of their intra-city rivals, the Bowl-O-Dromes by a 7-0 score in the Central Ontario Bowling League played the other night.

In the other game the Trenton Guay's won over Trenton Bowl-O-Drome by a 5-2 score.

Guay's racked up a single game score of 1311, the highest rolled in the league this season. Ron Saylor of Recreation topped the scorers with a triple of 806 (72). Other good scores were: Pappas 788, Lemault 786, Greenfield 771, Lennox 640, Whitney 707, Larelle 660, Carr 649, Ormerod 791, Northrup 740, Tyler 704, Furnia 706 and Milne 854.

Trappers Move Into 2nd Place; Hogan Gets Two

North Bay Trappers moved into second place in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior southern group when they routed Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Indians 13-4.

The Trappers' victory in the only senior game Thursday night put them two points behind the pace-setting Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Greyhounds.

Top scorer for the Trappers was George Gosselin with four goals. Bill Dwyer had three, Ab DeMarco and Don Hogan two each and Fred Balenti and Dan Wilks one apiece.

The Sault goals were notched by Gordie Kerr, Lorie Peterson, Jim Farelli and Cicki Waters.

Match misconduct penalties were given to the Sault's Johnny Baby and North Bay's Bo Elik for a third-period fight.

Tonight the Trappers play at Sudbury, while in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, Stratford are at Brantford, Hamilton at Chatham and Kitchener at Sarnia.

Jim Norris, Wealthy Promoter, Business Colossus, Dies at 73

CHICAGO (CP) — James (Big Jim) Norris, Jr., wealthy grain operator and sports promoter who headed the National Hockey League back on its feet after the 1935 stock market crash, has died of heart disease. He was 73 years old.

One of the most respected, yet least publicized, figures in basketball history, Norris was the owner of Detroit Red Wings, four-time winners of the Stanley Cup championship. He also was the most influential stockholder in Chicago sports arenas in the United States.

Norris entered Passavant Memorial Tuesday for treatment of a heart condition. Doctors said he died Thursday of a heart attack. Funeral services were scheduled for Saturday at the 4th Presbyterian church in Chicago. Burial will be at Mattituck, Long Island, N.Y.

Born in Montreal, Norris developed a love for hockey in his early school years and kept it all his life. To him hockey always was the best sport.

Built Rink At Home

Big Jim loved the game so much that he built a standing rink in the backyard of his suburban home in Lake Forest, Ill., and one couldn't help but feel the builder of modern facilities could make the private hockey rink pay.

"A giant of a man who stood six feet, two inches, and weighed 240 pounds, Norris' personality controlled or had interests in a business empire worth an estimated $200,000,000. It included a railroad, a fleet of 40 freighters and lakers on Lakes Michigan and Huron, a Florida cattle company, operating three of the largest cattle ranches in the U.S.

Norris had been president since 1932 of the Chicago Stadium, which is one of the Midwest's largest grain concerns. His business interests were at the Board of Trade.

As a student at McGill University he acquired a reputation as a lacrosse player. A defenceman, he played with Montreal Victorias.

When he branched out into sports promotion, Norris put it with the same gusto he showed on the ice.

With real estate selling at 10 cents on the dollar after the stock market crash, Norris bought up vast acres in Indiana, numerous grain elevators, a large interest in the Chicago Furniture Mart and the bankrupt Olympia Stadium in Detroit and the Madison Square Garden, the Red Wings.

Bought Arenas

He became one of the largest stockholders in New York's Madison Square Garden and when the $15,000,000 Madison Square Garden bankrupt he bought it at a fraction of the original cost. He also had big interests in arenas at St. Louis and Indianapolis.

He was joined in the arena business by his son, James D., Jr., now president of the International Boxing Club, and together they set out to protect the Norris interests by seeing that the sport was clean.

With Arthur M. Wirtz, the Norrises helped organize Louis Rexinger Hollywood Ice Revue and bought the Cole Brothers Circus.

Norris' grandfather founded the old Chicago Shamrocks of the American Hockey Association in the 1926-27 season after he was denied membership in the NHL. Big Jim Norris' chief rival in his early days of sports promotion was Maj. Fred McLaughlin who owned the Chicago Black Hawks.

Norris' interest in colorful feud McLaughlin refused to approve Norris' bid for a second NHL team in Chicago. Nothing used to please Norris more than to have a feud going. When he founded the NBA in 1937, defeat the Black Hawks.

Last summer Norris withdrew his controlling interest in the Chicago Stadium and a syndicate headed by Arthur Wirtz and Norris' two sons, James D., Jr., and Bruce, assumed the helm as chairman of the stadium board.

Belonged to Rechoy

Although doctors warned Norris several years ago not to attend hockey games or even listen to them on the radio because of his heart condition, he insisted "my heart belongs to hockey."

Members of the Red Wings hockey should always dress like champions, Norris often said, and none should go to dinner on the road without coat and tie and clean shines.

Norris built a home in his home Olympia Stadium and often called Adams from his 107-foot two-storey yacht Commodore anywhere from Miami to Nassau for a play-by-play account of Red Wing games.

Cleveland Brass At Loggerheads

CLEVELAND (AP)—The Cleveland News says President Ellis Ryan and General Manager Hank Greenberg of the Cleveland Indians "are at loggerheads and it is a good bet the season opens" one or the other "will be out."

In a dispatch Thursday from the baseball league meeting at Phoenix, Ariz., Ed McAuley, baseball writer and columnist, said it appeared "the high command of the Tribe is about to crack wide open."

The story said Ryan, president of the baseball club since a syndicate which he headed purchased Bill Veeck's holdings in 1949, would ask stockholders next month for full authority to run the Tribesmen as he pleases."

Edinburgh Treads Red Carpet on Ice To Present Medals to Hockey Stars

LONDON (Reuters)—A red carpet was rolled out on the hockey rink at Wembley Stadium here and the Duke of Edinburgh walked out on it to present medals to 22 Canadian players.

The presentations followed a game Thursday night in which the London All-star team beat Wembley 9-3.

It was the Duke's third look at a hockey game. He saw games at Montreal and Toronto during the royal tour last year.

Conn Smythe and Frank Boucher, captain of the losing Wembley Lions, said the Duke told him he had enjoyed the game immensely. Boucher, who comes from a well-known Canadian hockey family, coached the RCAF team which won the 1948 Olympic title.

"I think it was an excellent game," Boucher said. "We all enjoyed it and so apparently did the Duke. His presence was a great boost for the game over here."

The Duke is president of the National Playing Fields Association, in aid of which the game was held. With him was Viscount Alexander, defence secretary and former governor-general of Canada.

The London All-stars—12 of whom are Canadians—were given silver medals as souvenirs of their victory. The losers, with 11 Canadians, got bronze medals.

Pocket Rocket Bids Fair to Become As Famous As Big Brother Maurice

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—Richard is up there again with the hockey scoring leaders. This time it isn't the Rocket.

It's the Pocket Rocket, 16-year-old brother of Richard and the kid bids fair to become as famous as his big brother.

The appellation Pocket Rocket is bound to stick with Henri Richard. He looks like his brother and skates much like him. Both play for Montreal Canadiens and a syndicate headed by Frank Selke, general manager of the Canadiens, signed Henri to a contract.

Henri is the sparkling centre of his team.

Official averages after 30 games showed Henri leading the league with 18 goals, two fewer than 20 assists for a point total of 38, tied for the point lead with teammate Guy Lafleur. Big brother Maurice would like to be cutting a two-point-a-game caper right now.

The teams in the JAHA are tough, made up of the cream of junior players in Quebec province. The league this season is playing an interlocking schedule with the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior division, Canada's top junior loop.

Henri weighs 145 pounds and is five feet, six inches tall. He began skating when he was four years old.

From the time he started school he couldn't be kept from the games in which Maurice played. Now it's the other way around. If Maurice isn't on a road trip when the juniors are playing at home, he's in the Forum watching Henri.

Henri hasn't yet acquired the blasting, point-blank shot of his big brother but he's a burning threat around the nets. Like Maurice, Henri is a quiet, unassuming and likeable fellow who will never be capable of talking.

The little Rocket, of course, wants to play in the NHL some day. And, of course, with the Canadiens. What does Maurice think of that?

"Well, he's just a youngster and still has to grow more and get more experience," said the big Rocket. "Maybe we can tell better a couple of years.

Found Gait Tough

What does Henri think of the Ontario teams compared with the Quebec teams?

"They're bigger and heavier players and are the toughest team we met in Ontario was Galt."

Except for Maurice, of course, what player in the NHL does the Pocket Rocket particularly like?

Henri thought in one word: "Kelly."

Well, what do you know about that!" said Maurice in surprise. "I've always considered Red Kelly of Detroit one of the best hockey players I've ever played against."

Lack of Competition Major Reason For Canada's Poor Olympic Showing

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian Olympic contestants should be free to sink their teeth into more good international competition if they want team more preparation in Canada for it.

This was reported in an opinion survey compiled from sport in Canada presented Thursday to the second annual meeting of the National Sports Advisory Council.

The 55-page report, compiled by the National Council on Physical Fitness, is to be studied today at the closing session of the two-day meeting.

The survey, which makes no recommendations, polled 224 persons concerned with Olympic activity and found a general plea for more international competition.

Lack of competition is the major reason for Canada's poor showing in international competition, one person said. "Money to support this could come from taxes and from fees for professional sports groups."

Persons interviewed also felt Canada can't hope to face international contests until competition on the national level is improved. They suggested competition at all levels in all sports, continual use of trained sports and a grouping of Canadian championship meets for several sports to cut expenses, attract more spectators and earn more money.

The report kept those interviewed anonymous.

It polled up the already-known dissatisfaction of many Canadians with the country's Olympic showing, but revealed many ideas to correct it.

"It is extremely disheartening to see sick-looking athletes trying to "read in the papers that the team has a disgrace, even before we leave."

One part of the report voiced a demand for a proper "send-off" and "welcome home" for the Olympic team, regardless of how well it did.

Maintenance of a national team in each sport was suggested, with selections for international competition made eight months to a year before the event and a training camp set up speedily after the selection is made.

Of those polled; 126 felt Canadians in the Olympics had at most will to win and morale as those who won or placed in the events. Only 25 thought they hadn't.

Lindsay Rink Wins Bonspiel

HAMILTON (CP)—Percy Silich and his Lindsay rink won the Seniors' trophy bonspiel, defeating R. A. (Ross) Tartion's Hamilton Thistles rink 11-9 in the final.

The Silich rink it was their fourth victory. They won the trophy in 1942-43 and after nine years the competition came back to win last year.

In Thursday's final Silich jumped into an early lead only to have Tartion staple a strong finish to toss by two shots.

The Hudson-Ross trophy final between Ivan Eastman of Hamilton Thistles and A. McCowan of Royal Canadians, Toronto, was not decided until the final rock was played.

The Doolittle trophy saw a battle between two Galt rinks and it took an extra end to decide the issue. J. C. Marritt's four defeated F. G. Light's team 16-15.

Results:

Seniors' trophy, semi-finals, classification. The games are permitted to pay $5,000 in salary and bonuses. A major league bonus player must be kept two years. A minor league bonus player cannot be moved up for a year, at the end of which time he becomes subject to the unrestricted draft.

A major league club violator can be fined $2,000. A minor league violator can be fined $1,000. Any individual responsible could also be fined.

The high school rule permits scouts to be signed but forbids contracts to be signed until their class graduates.

In an effort to stop major league clubs bringing up promising athletes from their farms by the time season, the minors voted unanimously to prohibit the recall of players after July 31. A player sent out on option must stay with the minor league club for at least 19 days. Only in an extreme emergency, such as a player on the parent team getting hurt, can a big league club request and receive permission to recall a player.

The minors squelched a proposal by Bill Veeck, president of the St. Louis Browns, that would have forbidden major league clubs to sign a player without previous experience, and would have made all minor league players eligible to draft after their first year in professional baseball.

Minor Loops Adopt New Bonus Rule, Vote Down Revolutionary Measure

By JOE REICHLER

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—The minor leagues wind up their convention today after having adopted a new bonus law, passed the old high school rule, put in a waiver rule designed to put an end to their star players and voted down a proposal that would have revolutionized the entire structure of baseball.

The minors unanimously voted to accept the bonus rule proposed by the executive council that was designed to curb payments of $25,000 to $100,000 to untried youngsters. The rule provides for fines and possible suspension of violators. It must be ratified by the major leagues at their joint meeting next Sunday to become effective.

Bonus Rules

The rule designates a "bonus player" any free agent who has received in excess of $4,000 from a club and any player who $4,000 from a class A club or, one of lower classification. The players are permitted to pay $5,000 in salary and bonuses. A major league bonus player must be kept two years. A minor league bonus player cannot be moved up for a year, at the end of which time he becomes subject to the unrestricted draft.

A major league club violator can be fined $2,000. A minor league violator can be fined $1,000. Any individual responsible could also be fined.

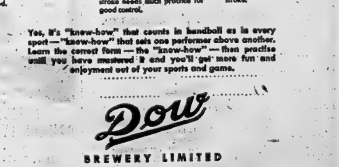
Taylor Gets 4 In Flyers' Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Harry Taylor scored all the St. Louis goals as the Flyers defeated Buffalo Bisons 4-3 in an American Hockey League game.

Another oldie, Ed Litzenberger, had two assists for the Flyers.



Taylor, who is 34, scored at 1:08 and 16:15 of the first period and added his second at 2:08 of the third. His fourth came on a penalty shot at 15:15.

Litzenberger's assists came on goals by Taylor and Bill Gadsby.

Buffalo's goals were scored by Ed Kullman, Jim Thomson and Ed Ingram.

It's the 'KNOW HOW' that Counts!

HANDBALL THE WRIST SNAP STROKE

1 Body stands erect for the stroke. Power and direction depend on the snap of the wrist. Full stroke is a circular movement, beginning with "cocked" arm at top of swing as illustrated.

2 Ball is hit at a height ranging between the knee and hip. On stroke, forearm passes close to body. Wrist snap and short left step forward give ball speed and hop. The stroke needs much practice for good control.

3 Circular movement of stroke is completed as follow-through brings arm across in front of the waist. Proper body positioning and control of arm movement is essential in this stroke.

Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in handball as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form — the "know-how" — then practise until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and game.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

My pearls of wisdom never cling to End-of-Chapter Glances. The reasons never cause a thing. He only reads the answer.

South was declarer at four spades in this deal:

NORTH
♠K 6 4 3
♥10 9 6 3
♦K 10 4
♣10 9

WEST
♠A 10
♥8 5
♦A J 8 7
♣A Q 8 4 2

EAST
♠J 9 2
♥K Q 7 6 4
♦9 5 3 2
♣J 10 3

SOUTH
♠Q J 8 7 5 2
♥A J
♦A 6
♣K 8 2

West had doubled for takeout and east had bid twice in hearts. So, south may expect west to have both black aces while east may be expected to have the unseen high hearts.

The opening lead from west was a heart, the suit bid by his east partner. It looks as if declarer may lose four tricks. Which would be enough to defeat the contract.

What are the tricks he may lose? The second round of hearts; a trump trick to the ace of spades; two club tricks if that suit is led from east or from dummy hand.

To make his contract, therefore, declarer must save a trick somewhere. His hope of doing this is to prevent east from getting into the lead so that a club cannot be led by east.

So, south wins the first trick with his ace. Then he takes two tricks with ace and king of diamonds. Then he leads the diamond ten from dummy, which he does before leading trumps.

When the diamond ten is led from dummy and east does not show up with the queen or jack on it, south should not ruff this diamond. Instead, he should sluff his heart jack on it.

Of course, west wins this trick. But his return of a heart is now ruffled by south and east is thus kept out of the lead. Now, when a trump is led, west wins it with his spade ace.

What will west return? If a club, south saves the king. If a diamond, dummy's ruffs a club and south ruffs. If a trump, dummy wins and leads two hearts on which south dumps two clubs.

After all, maybe all you need is the answer.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—John Lund came crashing into a frontier action with his pistol shooting like the officer characters were firing back at him and he finally slumped to the floor, a goner.

This was Lund's stirring death scene for a western called "The Woman They Almost Lynched."

"Now I know why all western heroes have that same grim look. That's because they're flinching from the sound of gunfire."

Lund has had a wide experience since leaving Paramount. He has portrayed a rodeo star, a cavalry officer, a steel worker, a plumber and a spy.

"I am entirely different world," he commented. "Before, I was identified with westerns and love comedies like 'Miss Tatlock's Millions' and 'A Foreign Affair.' The audience was up for pictures like those don't see the kind of pictures I have been making recently. And the fans of outdoor pictures don't see the other kind."

Capsule Review: "Face to Face" is a good coupling of two short features. The first is a period piece about a new captain. (James Mason) of a sailing vessel. The Joseph Conrad story tells how the captain finds himself by helping a runaway sailor. The second tale concerns the death of the old west. The sheriff (Robert Preston) brings his bride to town and quells an over-age desperado. It's a delight-ful mix of comedy-drama.

TO-AID TEDIOUS PLAYERS

LONDON (AP)—British business men have been asked to help produce Wimbledon champions. Viscount Templewood, president of the Lawn Tennis Association, told the organization's annual meeting today that the LTA wants employers to give promising young players some time in addition to their tennis so that in addition to their tennis they would have a job to depend on.

Commission Strips Sugar Robinson Of World Title in Surprise Move

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York State Athletic Commission stripped Sugar Ray Robinson of his world middleweight title in a surprise move early today.

The action brought this retort from George Gainford, Robinson's manager: "Somebody is screwy somewhere. A title is won in a ring and taken away in a ring."

Robert Christenberry, commission chairman, declared Robinson's title was vacated because he had not met the rule which requires a champion to defend his title every six months.

"We had given him an extra month to decide whether to continue his boxing or go into a career as an entertainer," said Christenberry. "Up to now we have not had an answer."

To this, Gainford, reached on a train en route to Boston, asserted he had mailed a special delivery letter to Christenberry before he and Robinson left New York.

"It is our understanding that we were only to notify the commission that negotiations were under way for a fight," Gainford said. "In the letter, which Christenberry should receive today, we explain that we are negotiating with Jack Solomon, the British promoter, for a title fight with Randy Turpin in London next June."

Robinson lost his middleweight title to Turpin in London in July, 1951, but won it back in a return bout the following September at the Polo Grounds, New York.

Robinson now is the featured dancer and master of ceremonies in a night club act that opens in Boston Sunday.

Sugar Ray, 32, regarded as one of the greatest boxers of the current era, last fought June 25 when he failed to lift the lightheavyweight crown from champion Joey Maxim. He lost on a TKO.

Sport in Brief

TORONTO (CP) — Dischord, owned by Luciene Dugre of Sherbrooke, Que., and driven by Jim Larente, and James R. Direct, owned by John Taylor of Toronto, had a heat victory in the featured BB pace, seventh harness race at Dufferin Park Thursday.

John McKillop, owned by Dr. F. E. Hoodless of Cookstown and driven by Albert Hanna, and Dixie Taas, owned by Floyd Milton of Hamberg, N.Y., and handled by Bob Givens, were the heat winners in the sixth and secondary featured event.

VANCOUVER (CP)—An East-West five pin roll-off, a sort of Grey cup for bowling, is the aim of Charlie Hill, president of the Canadian Bowling Association. Bill visiting here this week on a tour of Canada, says there are some 1,000,000 bowlers in Canada and Canadian bowling championship would probably be held in Winnipeg.

HAMILTON (CP) — McMaster Marauders Thursday edged Upper Canada College from East Orange, N.J., 73-71 in an exhibition basketball game. Rookie Don Nelles won the game for Marauders when, with less than 15 seconds of play left, he hit the target from well out.

LONDON (AP) — The Jockey Club, British ruling body of horse racing, said Thursday an inquiry failed to show evidence of doping gangs operating on race tracks. The club said 21 cases of alleged doping of horses had been reviewed. The investigation stemmed from newspaper reports alleging horses, particularly some favorites, had been doped.

NEW YORK (AP)—The Orange Bowl-bound Syracuse football team was selected Thursday as the winner of the eastern college football championship. Syracuse, unbeaten by an eastern rival and loser only to U.S. champion Michigan State and a professional-packed Rolling Field team, was chosen by the vote of a committee of eastern sports writers and broadcasters.

LONDON (AP)—Harry Matthews of Seattle, Wash., who will fight Johnny Williams, British heavyweight boxing champion, in London next Wednesday, pulled a muscle in his back during a morning session Thursday. Matthews left the ring after one round but said there was nothing to worry about.

TAX VIOLATION FINES

GALT (CP)—Three income tax violators Thursday were fined a total of $115 and costs. Each plaintiff also be allowed to ride free in these days of heavy expenses, Magistrate J. H. L. Kirkpatrick said in passing sentence.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SATURDAY, DEC. 6, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Fine for astute action, for matters closely allied to your particular endeavors. Heart interests rank.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Mildestep needless risks, matters that could spoil your other fine efforts. Have faith in yourself and associates.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Better lean toward the prudent or conservative in loans, contracts, any obligations. Romance favored in late afternoon.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Some surprise in outlook. Have you asked yourself, "Does done better yesterday?" Smart study and knowledgable people will help you.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—Use your ability, sell your ideas. Execute quality rather than quantity. Calmness brings more lasting results with less confusion.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Friday factor today is promptness with accuracy. In money, business or professional affairs show thoughtful judgment.

September 24 to October 22 (Libra) — Unity of purpose will further your advancement, lessen strain and help eliminate repeating which is waste. Appreciate help, kindness, harmony.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—You are tops in sense of perception, have little trouble sensing right from wrong, so there is no need to miss on this or suspicious day. Be natural, control temper.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Take it easy! Crowding your schedule depresses. Be aware that those around you are striving as hard as you.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Influences rate careful study. Be advocate preparatory thought and action. An unbearing attitude will hamper. Avoid that.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—You'll need all the intelligent thinking you can muster this somewhat uncertain day. Be not too sure of self. But don't be upset!

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Most business and financial matters can be handled without much complexity this moderately generous day. Tackle with real boost trio.

YOU BORN TODAY have a meditative yet decisive disposition; are sound in judgment, a quick thinker, resourceful person. You could achieve notably in such as selling, advertising, working in public or professional activities. Try new ideas, you will enjoy working or original ones. Avoid being blunt, too short in manner at times. Birthdate of: Warren Hastings, first Governor-General of British India; Jos. Louis Gay-Lussac, Fr. chemist-physicist.

MISLEADING MASK

OXFORD, England (CP)—Police rushed to a local bank after a citizen reported he had seen a "masked bandit" on the premises. They found a worker sandpapering the floor, wearing handkerchief tied over his face to keep the dust out.

BANCROFT

Rev. A. Laverty Special Speaker At Commencement

Bancroft — The annual Commencement Exercises of the North Hastings High School were held last Friday night in the auditorium of the school which was filled to capacity for the event honoring the graduates.

The guest speaker was the Rev. A. Laverty, chaplain of Queen's University, who was introduced by Mr. D. F. McKinley.

Miss Shirley Creighton, Bancroft, was valedictorian and gave a splendid address in which she paid tribute on behalf of the graduates, to the staff and the splendid facilities offered by the school. She urged the present students to uphold the school's traditions and the graduates to continue to work to raise the standards of their own ideals. Miss Creighton was the president of the Bancroft Theatre Award, presented by the donor, Gordon Broughton, as the school's most outstanding all-round student.

The gathering was also addressed by Principal Gordon Wragg and Mr. G. Bentley, chairman of the North Hastings High School Board.

Many prizes were presented to outstanding graduates for academic, athletic, agricultural endeavors as well as many proficiency awards to members of the school Cadet Corps.

Presentations by Mr. Gordon Crosby, with Roger Cole at the piano, was enjoyed by all.

A list of graduates and the exercises chosen present were favored with selections from the Glee Club under the direction of Mr. C. N. Monteith.

IVANHOE

Women's Institute Holds Bazaar, Tea

Ivanhoe — A successful Christmas bazaar was recently held in Ivanhoe town hall, sponsored by the Ivanhoe W.I. and was well attended in spite of the wind and the weather.

Mrs. William French, president of Ivanhoe W.I., presided, with Mrs. Reg. Haggerty at the piano, all joining in singing old favorites.

Mrs. Earl McMaster on behalf of the W.I. extended a warm welcome to the visitors.

Program

'Moira, reading, "A Cow," Mrs. William Collins; Madoc, duet, "Glory to God," Mrs. Wesley Shuin and Mrs. Archie Adams; Madoc, solo, "Just For Today," Mrs. Archie Adams.

Greetings from Moira and Madoc W.I.'s, readings were brought by presidents Mrs. Gilbert Thompson and Mrs. Dave Kennoham.

Mrs. S. R. Beatty district president, congratulated the Ivanhoe W.I. for planning the bazaar and for graciously inviting the neighboring societies to join them on this happy occasion. The fact that the dishes on the program were not rehearsed or planned was then last month, made it enjoyable.

Mrs. Beatty concluded her remarks by reading a poem "The Faithful Few."

After the singing of the Queen the bazaar was officially opened. Mrs. John Day and Miss Edna Tanner convened the fancy work and knitted articles. At this booth we found knitted mitts, children's woollen gloves, mittens and socks, smocking pillow cases, towels with crocheted trim, pin cushions, child's plaid shirt, pot holders, egg warmers, handkerchiefs and lingerie.

Many Aprons

The apron booth was in charge of Mrs. J. A. Bailey, Mrs. Jack McIlroy. Here on display were aprons of many shapes and sizes. From work aprons to dainty tea aprons with ribbon bands.

The White Elephant booth displayed dishes, glass ware, comedies, pictures, house plants, novelties and what-have-you. This was convened by Miss Helen Kerby and Mrs. Andy Cross.

The vegetable table in charge of Mrs. R. Barnard, Mrs. Milton Shaw and Mrs. George Woods displayed carrots, potatoes, squash, pumpkin, cabbage, jams, jellies, pickles, eggs and cream.

The Homecooked booth was convened by Mrs. Barton Haggerty, Mrs. Percy Conway and Mrs. Earl McMaster, was attractive with a variety of delectable concoctions: Homemade bread, buns, rolls, biscuits, lemon and taffy tarts, chocolate cakes, white cake, macaroons, cup cakes, drop cakes, pecan pies, lemon pies, lemon, apple, and pumpkin pies, fudge, maple cream and popcorn balls.

A delicious afternoon tea was served.

The proceeds amounted to $64.30.

GIFTS TO KOREA

SEVEN DIE IN FIRE

YOUNGSTOWN, O. (AP) — A family of seven was wiped out tonight when flames swept through a one-storey frame house just north of the city limits.

Dead were Henry Iochman, 34, a bakery route salesman; his wife, Catherine, 32, and their five children. Henry, Jr., Patricia, 11, Carol, 8, Mary Grace, 4, and Joan, 2.

ELDORADO

Women's M. S. Installs Officers

The November meeting of the Eldorado-Union W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Reg Peate with a good attendance. The president, presided, using as her call to worship, "Father of Mercies in Thy Word."

Mrs. Reg. Peate, as Baby Band leader, gave an interesting talk to the mothers.

The highlight or sectional rally at Cooper was given by Mrs. Cecil Blackburn.

Mrs. Chambers opened the worship service.

The meditation on the Bible by the leader was followed by Scripture reading from the new version of Bible by Mrs. Reg. Peate, Mrs. Raeburn Hollins and Mrs. Cecil Blackburn rendered a lovely duet, "Silent Night".

Mrs. Arthur Robinson gave a chapter from the study book.

Report from the nominating committee was given by Mrs. Leonard Blackburn.

Hard Acres

by

Harry Meldrum Moore

The nomination meeting on that last Friday evening in December drew a capacity crowd. Township Clerk Dan Caswell asked the former members of council to give an account of their stewardship; Reeve Bill McTaggart was asked to tell what had transpired at county council. Nominees for the next year's council were asked to speak and pretty soon it was Curly's turn.

Curly, who had been sitting at the back of the platform, stood up slowly and walked to the front. He was an imposing, well-dressed man; six feet tall, weighing under two hundred pounds. He was calmly confident and he spoke in a clear voice. He was given a noisy reception, but when he started to speak complete silence fell over the hall.

Curly Brown made it plain at the outset that he was about to say something that would upset the views of his listeners—it might well be something that they would not care to hear. But he was going to say it anyway, and in consequence ask him. He asked them to remember that he was as much to blame for present conditions in the village as they were. He had not played his part. He spoke of "that unseemly scattering of buildings we call a village" and of the low standard of living which prevailed, the lack of proper sanitation, a village cemetery and so on. He pointed out that the village property-owners, the businessmen, had been paying taxes into the township for many years, yet all they had in return was the questionable privilege of "paddling around the streets in the mud." He demanded that the township's council take immediate steps to build walks, repair streets in the Depot, in return for the thousands of dollars taken from the village to repair roads, build bridges, install culverts, in the township. "Fair is fair," he said. He pointed out that the village had a population of about three hundred persons when it might just as well have five times that number and be separated from the township, but for the indifference, the complacency of the people themselves. He accused them of lacking civic pride, or not taking an interest in their village. He said the Depot should have a jail, a magistrate, a division court.

He referred to the townships' roads as those "long narrow stretches of unpaving, the primitive trails of a primitive people." Yet there was much gravel, much stone, in the townships that could be used to fill them in and level them off. "And, why do we suffer such conditions to exist in our village, you townsmites?" he asked, "well, let me tell you. It is simply because no one has ever had the courage to stand up in meeting to tell those people, who are responsible for these conditions, that we will not stand for such neglect any longer."

"In conclusion, friends, I advise you to seriously consider what I've said here tonight." Curly said, "from yourselves into a civic improvement society, or club, if you will, and with the betterment of the village, and township, always in mind, you must not fail; and then you'll be mighty proud of what you've done."

After the applause, which followed Curly Brown's speech had died out, Father Finucane was on his feet.

"Mr. Chairman" he called, and there were cries all around him of "Platform! Platform!"

With a broad smile on his face, the priest acceded to their wishes and faced them from the platform.

"Mr. Chairman," he said, "I could have said all I wished to say on the floor of the hall, but at present it is not often that you good people have a chance to feast your eyes on a handsome man—"

"Oh, oh!" the crowd laughed, and Father Finucane's face soured.

"I just wish to say a word in praise of the maiden speech of my used-to-be-across-the-street neighbor, Curly Brown," he said. "I wish you, my good friends, to take this thought home with you. Tonight you have heard a new voice, the virile, vigorous voice of the north. Praise God we have found at last a man who dares to speak his mind, who dares to tell us wherein we lack, wherein we have fallen down to the obvious detriment of our village, our community. Let us resolve here and now, to get in behind Curly Brown, to a man. That's all I have to say. God bless you."

The chairman announced that the council for the new year had been duly elected my acclamation and the members were Reeve William McTaggart; councillors Curly Brown, Peter Dauphinee, George Kilmer and George Riley.

As Curly Brown drove into the Depot the next morning, he was wondering what he might expect from the people he had tongue-lashed the night before. As far as he was concerned, he was prepared to stand foursquare on every word he had said. He had left the villagers with two choices, either to agree with him and get in behind him, as Father Finucane had suggested, or to rise up against him, to spurn his advice.

During that day, and the days to follow, Curly was to know in no uncertain manner that the villagers had accepted him as their leader, and that from now on, they expected him to see that the Depot was a no-longer neglected part of the united township.

But that when the inaugural meeting of council was held the following week, Curly was to learn that asking for something, and getting it were quite different matters. When he suggested that council provide money to build walks, improve the streets in the Depot, he was asked how he was going to get the money. He was told that council had no money to throw around. And not knowing yet just how a municipality finances itself, all he could say was that the village lagers should at least be given back some of their taxes in improvements.

Curly came away from council meeting with the knowledge that hereafter if he wanted anything for the village from the township, he must be prepared to fight hard for it. Three of the five-man council were farmers. The reeve, by the nature of his business, would undoubtedly side in with them. And if the farmer members of council would sooner spend township money on road improvement than on village improvement, the village would have to wait. However, he had been chosen chairman of the roads and bridges committee and he would have something to say at least on the proper fixing of county roads. Then, at every council session, the building of a small jail. But there was a catch in that—"when funds were available." Curly suggested that since the reeve was a Liberal, and his party was in power at Toronto, he recommend the appointment of a man in the Depot as justice of the peace and division court clerk, to Lex Barrard, the riding's representative, in the hope that he would get some action.

Thus Curly Brown had begun his political career, and he was already being made acquainted with the fact that it was going to be an uphill battle all the way.

When spring and summer came to Hard Acres, Curly and Hazel had interesting things to do. There was the vegetable plot for him and the flower plot for Hazel. When haying time came, Lige Larter gave them a field of hay for the cutting, and while Hazel couldn't handle a fork, she could drive a team and it was fun.

Hazel was enjoying her life immensely. It was never uninteresting. There were the flower beds to look after, there were chickens that must be securely locked at night against a raid from fox, skunk or weasel.

Hard Acres, too, was never a lonesome place. During school days there was the noise of children at play. Peter making as much noise as any one of them. During the summer holidays, hardly a day passed without bringing some woman or group of women from the village to go berry picking or just to visit the woods. On Sundays the Browns were at their church, and very often in the afternoon they had visitors. But on account of the distance Peter was not going to Sunday School any more.

Synthetic Applause Grates On Nerves of Observer At Communist Peace Feast

By Gerard Filion

A peace congress is a slow worth seeing. I had seen movies of the Warsaw Peace Congress and the Youth Congress at Berlin. They had impressed me. The Peking Peace Congress confirmed my impression that the Communists are past masters in the art of bending large crowds. They are wonderful at creating an atmosphere, at warming up an audience, at the business of putting feeling—and passion—into meetings where we would have trouble injecting anything more than the atmosphere of cold reason.

"I have already explained how solicitious our Chinese hosts were of our comfort. The detailed organization of the conference lived up to these high standards of thoughtfulness. Each delegation had some one to look after it, to interpret. Sheets of honor were given special, chauffeur-driven cars. Buses and cars were always there when we wanted them. There wasn't the slightest hitch throughout the entire congress. Even if you weren't a guest of honor, all you had to do was ask for a car if you wanted to see the city or go for a ride into the countryside. You only had to ask for what you wanted. It was provided immediately.

MEET IN PALACE

The congress took place in one of the palaces of the Imperial City. The main assembly room was stupendously Oriental and had just been completely redecorated. More than 2,000 persons could be seated without crowding and the room opened onto a court surrounded by miniature palaces and temples.

Peking's palaces are the city's one of the wonders of the world. The gardens, the lakes and the hills make it a place of sweetness and calm. It must have really been wonderful to be a Chinese emperor in the old days. Today, the palaces are used to house some of the government departments. Others are open to the public as playgrounds and parks.

A huge dove designed by Picasso dominated the congress hall and the speechmaking. The 37 flags of the countries taking part in the congress were lined up in rows, like a guard of honor for the dove on its white background. The dove was the center of attention. Most of the presidium were seated there. The word "presidium" sounds strange to western ears. It has a special Soviet ring to it. When you hear it, you think immediately of Russia. And I think it was the word that was used by allusion and made to the Marxists' mother country during the entire congress.

Members of the Presidium were picked by each delegation. They sat on the stage throughout the proceedings and took turns acting as chairmen. They also held frequent and lengthy meetings to decide the daily agenda.

12 Tunisian Nationalist Leaders Held, Tension Mounts

TUNIS, North Africa (Reuters) French colonial authorities arrested 12 Tunisian nationalist leaders here overnight as tension mounted over Thursday's political murder.

Among those arrested was Mahmoud Materi, the man who had placed the political murder victim, Fehrat Hached, at the head of the General Union of Tunisian Workers.

Another arrested was Fathi Zouhir, legal adviser to the Bey of Tunis.

Authorities refused to disclose any details. The arrested men were sent to the southern camp in the remote south of Tunisia. Authorities said the arrests were temporary, taken as a safeguard against reprisal attacks by terrorists.

Battered Body Found

Hached was a moderate nationalist. His battered body was found early yesterday.

A general strike, called over his murder, continued today with most civil services still away from work and all stores closed. Most buses and wiltitles were almost normal, manned by French volunteers.

The French believe Hached was killed by extremist nationalists because his moderate Tunisian independence were too moderate.

The Tunisian view, as expressed by nationalist Salah Ben Yussef in the United Nations, is that French colonial authorities had Hached killed by a French ex-servicemen's organization known as "The Red Hand."

Prayers Banned

Tunisians allege that the "Red Hand," has the help of certain police officials and army men in carrying hand-in-glove with the government authorities, particularly the foreign Legionnaires.

French authorities banned Hached's funeral in Tunis to avoid demonstrations. They ordered an immediate burial in the afternoon at the small island of Kerkannah, off Sfax, where he was born 44 years ago. The body was placed aboard a ship for there this morning.

5 DIE IN CABIN FIRE

NORTH CREEK, N.Y. (AP)—Five young children perished Friday in a fire that destroyed their parents' log cabin home. Mother, Mrs. Harold Olden, 31, suffered severe burns in trying to rescue the five, whose ages ranged from five to 13. The mother and father escaped with two other children, aged 1 and 2.

6 Children Die As Blast Wrecks Pittsburgh Home

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A natural gas explosion ripped a two-and-a-half storey frame home to a pile of rubble and killed all six children of a Pittsburgh family.

Fire Chief Stephen Adley said the blast Friday night in the semi-industrial north side section of this steel manufacturing city was an accident.

Adley said it resulted from an auto skidding into a retaining wall and breaking an exposed natural gas main leading into the house.

The explosion was sheeping when the blast rocked the neighborhood and frightened nuns saying their night prayers in a nearby convent.

Hours later firemen, carefully picking up bits of the house with auto wrecker cranes, recovered the last of the bodies of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mollis. The victims:

Robert, Jr., 13; Richard, 12, Lois, 12, James, 10, Geary, 8, and Robert, 5.

David, 14, Richard, 13, Lois, 12, wife, Rose, literally were blown from the house. They were in a state of shock and nearly incoherent as they crawled from the wreckage, their faces blackened like coal miners.

Scandinavian Airliner at Thule After Eight-Hour Radio Silence

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — The Scandinavian airliner making a trans-polar trip from Los Angeles to Copenhagen arrived safely at Thule, Greenland today dispelling fears that it had crashed during an eight-hour radio silence.

The radio flash reporting the arrival was the first received since early this morning when the pilot reported everything well over the icy wastes of northern Canada's Baffin Island and Hudson Bay.

Four-motor DC-6 is on the second airliner trip across the pole, blazing a trail for regular service projected by the Scandinavian airlines. The first DC-6 made the trip safely last Nov. 26.

The plane carries no passengers. It is taking 15 aviation and technical experts to open polar flying conditions. It has a crew of eight.

The Viking's last stop was at Edmonton last night where it refuelled for the long pull across northern Canada to Greenland.

From Greenland, it will fly on to Oslo, Norway.

Poor radio conditions over the Greenland area are blamed for the eight-hour radio silence.

EISENHOWER ON WAY TO HAWAII RETURNING HOME

Tropical Storm Blowing Up in Path of Cruiser

By DON WHITEHEAD

OFF GUAM, (AP)—The battle-scarred heavy cruiser U.S.S. Helena, carrying President-elect Eisenhower home from a three-day tour of the Korean war theatre, was heading today toward a tropical storm or near-typhoon proportions.

The Helena, a veteran of duels with Red Korean shore batteries, was cutting through the water at 32 miles an hour toward tiny Wake Island.

There it was expected to pick up John Foster Dulles, Eisenhower's choice for secretary of state.

But in the cruiser's path the tropical storm raged. Rough seas and some seasickness were in prospect. The ship should run into the storm Friday night. However a big cutting was expected to ride through the storm without difficulty.

Eisenhower left Korea with a heartful of impressions and a mindful of suggestions on what to do about the war. His schedule provided for a Friday night broadcast an intensive review of the whole Far Eastern problem around the world.

This was the climax of his Korean visit, honoring a political campaign promise to go and see for himself what the war was all about and how to bring it to peace.

There are "no panaceas, no tricks up my sleeve," he said, of ending a war that has drawn in 17 countries on the Allied side and North Korea and Communist China on the other. Russia supplies fighting the sinews of the Red armies.

He said he would devote much time after he should return to Hawaii to studying this first great problem of his approaching administration.

Eisenhower made it clear, in a press conference Friday before leaving Korea, that the task confronting the United States in the Korean theatre to world peace is enormous.

Content of Victory

But Eisenhower is confident of ultimate victory. "I am far from a defeatist," he declared.

Eisenhower flew the 3,170 miles from Seoul to Guam in less than an hour and a half down early Saturday at the navy's Agana air station. Then a Military Sabre jet was whisked eight miles to Apra harbor, Guam's seaport.

During his entire three days in Korea and its approaches, the President-elect was guarded by a blanket of jet planes.

The Military Sabre jet was shot down in air combat during the protective patrols from the Helena. The air force, in its weekly summary of Allied air losses, said the aircraft was probably MIG's were shot down in the period.

The Helena is scheduled to arrive at Pearl Harbor Dec. 14. Eisenhower will stay there for three days there before flying back to New York.

GETS DIPLOMATIC POST

OTTAWA (CP)—Arthur J. Andrew, 37-year-old wartime infantry officer and former newspaperman, has been appointed Canadian charge d'affaires at Vienna, the external affairs department announces. Mr. Andrew, native of Toronto, is the first pre-war employee of The Canadian Press at Halifax, will be resident officer for Canada in the Austrian capital on Switzerland, who also is minister to Austria.

Delegates Agree to Take Some New Steps Toward Freeing Pound if U.S. Will Help

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

LONDON (AP) — Ranking delegates to the Commonwealth conference said today the nine-country group has agreed to take some new steps toward freeing the pound if the United States will help.

The reported arrangement would allow sterling to be exchanged without restriction for urgently needed dollars as well as machinery.

Two pre-conditions have been set:

1. The United States would cooperate to build up gold and dollar reserves in the British-led sterling area, presumably by entering into term price-fixing pacts on some scarce commodities such as rubber and tin.

2. The United States would aid in applying delicate administrative measures to control various sorts of pound sterling transfers.

The Commonwealth countries long ago set the goal of a convertible pound sterling that could be freely turned into any other foreign money.

Distress Surprise Switch

One informant disclosed a surprise switch in Britain's financial thinking toward increasing the world price of gold. He reported that gold-producing South Africa "no longer stands alone" in her campaign to have the world gold price increased from the present $35 an ounce.

The argument on gold is that a higher price will strengthen the sterling area's reserve funds, especially before the pound can be traded safely with dollars.

Earlier this week, British officials said the South African demand appeared to have little support.

Essentially, it is the United States, holding about two-thirds of the world's gold supply, that sets the gold price.

The new plan for freeing sterling was first tried in mid-1952 if the new Republican administration of President-elect Eisenhower agreed to go along.

Prime Minister Churchill, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and the chancellor of the exchequer, R. A. Butler, expect to visit Eisenhower in Washington before long to talk over some agreed aspects of Commonwealth policy.

Other Commonwealth prime ministers have made similar trips previously to Washington soon, among them Australia's Robert Menzies and New Zealand's Sidney Holland.

Another conference of Commonwealth finance ministers is arranged for next May or June in London to map economic progress since the end of World War II. U. S. administration's intentions. Major actions have been deferred until the spring meeting.

Canadian Troops Will Not Come Home on Leaves

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian troops in Germany will not be given permission to come to Canada on leave, a defence department spokesman said.

The announcement Friday sight was in response to a request from Canadians that nearly 2,000 American soldiers will fly home on commercial airlines for Christmas leave. The round-trip tickets cost $484.90.

The spokesman said he is certain that members of Canada's 27th brigade—many of whom have arrived there from Canada—won't be given a similar privilege. They will likely be home next year to visit relatives and friends on the continent and Great Britain.

Prime Minister Studying Problem Of Queen's Title

LONDON (Reuters) — Commonwealth prime ministers took another step here today in studying the problem of a new title for the Queen.

Prime Minister Churchill, under study for some time but has acquired urgency because of the Queen's pending coronation. Some Commonwealth countries are known to feel strongly that changing times require a modernization of the monarchy.

The formula they have worked out remains a secret, but it is understood that it must first be approved by the Queen and then by the Commonwealth parliaments.

The Queen's father was known as "George VI, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith."

At his coronation the title "Emperor of India" also was included, but this was dropped when India became a republic but remained independent in 1947. India, the only republic in the Commonwealth, has no allegiance to the Queen as such, but only as head of the Commonwealth.

Some countries now have their doubts about such phrases as "by the Grace of God" and "Defender of the Faith," which applies directly to the Protestant faith.

Others look askance at the word "Dominions," as it is felt that it may be taken to imply that Britain has a different status from other Commonwealth countries, which Canadians feel strongly on this point.

Other critics object to the reference to Ireland, since Southern Ireland has become a republic outside the Commonwealth and several constitutional links with the "own. Northern Ireland remains part of the United Kingdom.

A hint of the solution which may be found is in the title used in the proclamation of the Queen's accession. It includes the words "and of her other realms and territories, head of the Commonwealth."

Mayors Urging Ottawa to Give Municipal Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities urged the federal cabinet today to provide, in the case the financial burden of Canada's roads and cities.

A delegation led by Mayor A. J. Mackenzie, Calgary, K.C., federation president, placed before the retiring prime minister C. D. Howe and a representative group of brief prepared in two days of executive sessions in Montreal.

It requested, except for three steps long sought by the federation:

1. Exemption of municipal purchases from the 10-per-cent federal sales tax.

2. Full municipal taxation of all federal properties, or equivalent grants in lieu of taxation.

3. Creation of a federal-provincial-municipal conference to review the functions and responsibilities of the three levels of government.

The brief also urged the federal government to solicit "more actively" the interest and participation of provincial and municipal governments in facilities provided for by federal municipal loans.

For civil defence, it suggested the primary responsibility for this activity rested with the federal authority, though municipal governments were prepared to bear a share of the local administrative costs.

Witness Testifies She Lost Singing Voice in Fire

DETROIT (CP)—Mrs. Margaret Ann Hutton said she lost her contralto singing voice as a result of her terrifying experience aboard the burning Canadian Pacific steamship Noronic in Toronto harbor three years ago.

She was testifying today in hearings before hearing of claims against Canada Steamship Lines was adjourned indefinitely.

Mrs. Kolodnicki said Thursday that the ordeal of the disaster affected her voice. She is seeking $21,267 damages for personal injury and property loss.

"The fire made me so nervous, I lost my self-confidence completely," she said. "I used to sing it the... I can't sing it now. Now when I try to sing. I can't hear anything come out."

The fire took 119 lives.

Commissioner of claims Ralph Wood said damages of claims by residents of the Detroit area will reopen next spring.

WARN DRINKING DRIVERS

TORONTO (CP)—A supercrackdown on drinking drivers was announced Wednesday by Toronto police. It will reach its peak during the Christmas and New Year's celebrations. Acting traffic inspector Ted Hall also said the methods used last year will be followed this year, with emphasis on major hotels where parties are numerous.

CLAXTON DENIES BRIGADE SUFFERED HIGH CASUALTIES

Minister Answers P.C. Member on Statement

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's 2,000-man 5th Brigade in Korea has suffered fewer casualties than any comparable Canadian formation in the Second World War, Defence Minister Claxton says.

Making exception Friday to an opposition member's statement in the Commons that Canadian casualties are comparable to those suffered in the Dieppe raid of 1942, Mr. Claxton added:

"I am informed by the chief of the general staff that the casualties to the 5th Brigade have been relative to the actions in which they have been engaged, much less than any comparable formation in the war in Europe or in the Second World War and that has been due to the finest possible equipment, most thorough maintenance, strength and good leadership.

"There is a total of 2,363 of 4,963 3,371 were casualties in eight hours. In Korea the 5th Brigade have been engaged for a total of 1,900 man years. The total number of casualties has been 3,371 per cent per a year as opposed to 68 per cent in eight hours at Dieppe."

Makes Statement

Mr. Claxton, making his statement before leaving by air for the Atlantic Pact conference in Paris, was replying to a speech Thursday by Lt.-Col. Charles Arthur Power (PC—Winnipeg South Centre), a veteran of two world wars.

Col. Power had declared:

"Had there been no rotation of personnel in the 5th Brigade it would have remained in Korea from February of 1951 to the present time without replacement, the fighting strength now would...be one battalion, not three.

"In other words, the casualties have been approximately 68 per cent, the same heavy casualty rate as at Dieppe. The only difference is that at Dieppe the casualty rate of 60 per cent was suffered in a single day, while the present casualty rate of 68 per cent in Korea has been spread over 18 months."

Mr. Claxton said Col Churchill's statement might have had effects "upon the troops and among their families.

Stressed Different Claim

When the statement was concluded, Col. Chu chill said he had stressed the difference between the casualties at Dieppe and in Korea.

Answering other points raised by Col. Churchill, Mr. Claxton said Canada has always been ready to make her views known in Korea, and no Canadian casualties can be attributed to lack of ammunition.

Mr. Claxton's statement preceded the throne speech.

In the debate, Dr. W. G. Blair (PC—Peterborough) said that if his party is elected to form a government it will be "armed with a completely new health insurance" plan. The Perth, Ont., physician said the government should call a federal-provincial conference to set up a system of contributory health insurance.

Arthur Laing, L-Vancouver South supported a request by David Croll, L-Toronto Spadina, for establishment of a joint parliamentary committee to study health insurance.

Western Farmer Regales House On All Sides in Barbed Speech

OTTAWA (CP) — A Saskatchewan wheat farmer has let fly with a barbed back-bench speech seat a salty blast at Opposition political parties generally and CCF members in particular.

The speech Friday of 52-year old Percy Wickman, Liberal member for Maple Creek constituency, put the House in a fit of laughter at desk-pounding.

Acting Prime Minister Howe pounded his desk with both hand. Justice Minister Garson jumped to his feet to cheer. Even the CCF's Progressive Conservative and Social Credit benches joined in the fun of Mr. Studer's homey but effective barbs, couldn't repress smiles at the sallies at each member's opinions about the various political groups.

The CCF: "East of the Great Lakes they are wolves in sheep's clothing, west of the Great Lakes, sheep in wolves' clothing."

The Progressive Conservatives: Specialists in double-talk. They don't say the same thing in English as they say in Quebec.

The Social Creditors: A "restless" conservative technocrats."

conscience with ginger, pepper and a liberal sprinkling of holy water who call themselves Social Credit. I think we should be protected from that."

The Liberal government: "In opposition to the policy of the Socialists, who are always trying to get the State into the pony, this government is going to make all the poor rich."

That one just about brought down the House.

He has been critical of Liberal policy in some respects. He urged government aid to build a new system of taxation not "so damned complicated as it is now." Western Canada." This was Canada, not Russia, and he didn't like the policy that is in effect out there where the farmers were put through the wringer, through the grindstone, you might call it. . .

He also suggested the government might appoint farmer-members to the wheat board and set up a system of unemployment insurance for farm labor to keep farm hands on the land.

Cuban Airliner Plunges Into Sea Believe 36 Die

Line's President Says Six May Have Been Rescued

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — The Cuban airliner "Star of the East," with 42 persons aboard, crashed into the sea about three miles off this island today, shortly after taking off from the U.S. Air Force base, Kindley Field, near St. George's.

The president of the Cubana line, operators of the plane, said reports in Havana indicated an explosion occurred aboard just before the crash. He said the plane, outbound from Madrid via Bermuda, was carrying 34 passengers, including a baby, and a crew of eight.

A U.S. Coast Guard vessel directing rescue operations said four survivors had been picked up by a choppy sea about three miles northeast of Kindley Field.

The Cuban air president in Havana said later he heard six survivors had been picked up. The survivors were taken to Kindley Field's hospital. None was identified immediately.

Aircraft and crash boats from the big Atlantic base also joined the waters for further survivors.

The plane, a DC-4 operated by Cubana Airlines, a subsidiary of American Airlines, left Idlewild Airport, New York (PC—Winnipeg South Centre), a veteran of two world wars.

Col. Churchill said:

"Had there been no rotation of personnel in the 5th Brigade it would have remained in Korea from February of 1951 to the present time without replacement, the fighting strength now would...be one battalion, not three.

"In other words, the casualties have been approximately 68 per cent, the same heavy casualty rate as at Dieppe. Airborne Beaver Provide Nucleus For New Trade

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Two groups of airborne beaver are providing the nucleus of what the Newfoundland government hopes will become a profitable fur-trapping trade in northern Labrador.

If the experiment pays off, it will bring a new income source to Indians and Eskimos in an area which long has been barren of the furbearers.

Wildlife authorities began working on the beaver project after a decline in the price of foxes, long the area's major fur producer, made foxing unprofitable.

They had a good precedent in their own island. Between 1925 and 1946, a series of trapplantings built up the beaver population from a few hundred to a point where 14,700 were taken during the last open season.

Two years ago investigations were started and scouts found several areas which looked like potential beaver territory.

Forty-six beaver were trapped after a Newfoundland's east coast Avalon Peninsula and flown to Micmac lake. This year 94 more made the trip, 50 going to Micmac and the rest to St. Martin's lake 90 miles farther south.

The plantings are still in the experimental stage and authorities are not making any predictions. A game warden toured the Kaipokok-Mimmac area last week and spotted 23 beaver houses, about half of them in use for the two seasons.

The northern territory has not yet been surveyed. Thick brush hampered an aerial survey and prevented count of beaver, but flying spotters located two dams.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synoptic: Light snowflurries are affecting most of the Great Lakes and will end in most localities by dusk. Relatively mild overnight conditions and may even become milder by Saturday night. This is because southerly winds are expected to set in throughout the province by Saturday morning.

These southerly winds are in advance of an area of low atmospheric pressure developing this evening over the Great Lakes.

NURSING CONSULTANT MAKES INSPECTION

The health department had another visitor this week in the person of Miss Sarah Wallace, industrial nursing consultant for the division of industrial hygiene. Miss Wallace is here to observe district industrial nurses at the various factories throughout this area.

She hopes to create a better understanding locally between public health nurses and those employed in industrial nursing. As Miss Wallace wound up her four-day district stay Friday she reported everything to be satisfactory.

PLEASE RETURN FIREMAN'S CAP

If anyone has found a fireman's cap within a short distance of the Moira Street fire station, it belongs to a member of the local fire department.

Thursday night firemen were answering a fire call when a fireman's cap blew off within a block or so of the station. The cap cannot be located and Fire Chief Gerald Vance would appreciate the finder returning it to the fire station.

CUSTOMS RETURNS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Customs returns at the Belleville office went over the million dollar mark for November of this year, it was announced yesterday by Customs Collector Gordon Miller. Returns for the month were $1,013,883.73, as compared with $883,052.50 for the same month last year.

Free Skating To be Provided For Children

Through arrangements between the Arena and Recreation Commissions, public school children will be given free skating at the Memorial Arena on two and possibly three afternoons a week from four until six o'clock. This action was taken after many requests had been received from parents, taxpayers and others, they feeling that although ample room done to provide indoor hockey for free, that the children were not getting all the use of the arena through free skating.

The members of the several House and School Associations throughout the city have volunteered to assist in the supervision of the children at the arena so that none of them will be injured in any way. The Recreation Commission, at their meeting on Friday afternoon, felt that the matter of open air rinks would be left in abeyance to see how the rink at the arena went and if the allotted time at the arena does not suit the bill, the open air rinks will be put in condition if the parents wanted such action. Both the members of the Arena Commission and the Recreation Committee feel that the children will get free skating to be inserted in the schedule of the arena.

The Recreation Commission has had a most successful year and the chairman, Councillor Mrs. William VanTassell the chairman, for his efforts to the position during the year.

Interest Lags in Second Nomination Meeting in Town

Trenton (Special)— A decided lack of interest in municipal affairs again dominated at the second meeting of the year for council nominees making speeches as in the town hall last night.

Of the 11 nominated for three council openings yesterday only two showed up to speak to a handful of ratepayers. Town clerk O. W. Larry presiding seemed disappointed at the interest shown.

Both of the speakers however, vowed they would qualify by 8.00 p.m. tonight.

First woman to aspire for a council seat in Trenton's history outlined a platform based by economy and better relationship between council and ratepayers. Laura Cummings win, lose or draw will go down in town annals as the woman who first placed her name before the electorate of Trenton.

Miss Cummings active in social and welfare work for years is a descendant of one of Trenton's original families. Her forebears provided the first hospital the town hall under the agreement that when it was no longer needed as a market place it would revert back to Cummings estate.

Lyle Church, Front street merchant and progressive citizen was the only other nominee on the platform. He expressed a desire to qualify.

Watchman Joshua Tym, another nominee, in a letter to Mr. Larry apologized for his absence while indicating that he would be a candidate in the council field. Nominee Ralph Weaver was right-row earlier.

Others nominated who did not appear at the ratepayers meeting and made no public statement as to their intentions were: C. V. Graham, C. Ashley, J. MacDonald, R. J. Whitley, Sheldon, Robert Smithrim, Don MacPherson.

In the event four nominees of the 10 qualify there will be an election January 2 in the coming year.

Kiwanians Hold School

Over 100 came to school for 78 Kiwanians from between Toronto and Kingston here at the Queens-way Public School.

The grown-up pupils taught like conditions during the three "Rs" an incoming Kiwanis officer should know. Representatives from 16 clubs were in attendance.

Speaker Governor-elect Mel Osborne of Dunnville talked about "What Kiwanis Means to the Individual Club." Past Lieutenant Governor Bruce Lattimer of Belleville outlined the duties of a club vice president.

Past Governor Walter Stewart of the Trenton York Club introduced the speaker. The vote of thanks was tendered by E. M. "Ted" Parker, president-elect of the Trenton club. Salvation Army Lieutenant Phil Gardiner led the Kiwanians in singing.

Clubs close by in the district were represented by Belleville, Frank G. Creeggan and Robert Irvine, Madoc, Kenneth B. Holmes and John A. Kincaid; Tweed, Clay Godfrey and James Scott; Trenton, E. M. "Ted" Parker and Allan W. Coulter.

Albert College Football Team HonoredbySchool

At the Lattimer Town Room on Friday evening, the members of the winning Albert College football team were feted at a turkey dinner, the school being hosts. Dr. Ross McKenzie, principal of the College, chaired the informal gathering, with "Red" Townsend, the coach of the B.C.I. staff, being on hand to extend congratulations to the team. Ald. Claude D. Tice represented the city, Mayor Hugh being unavoidably absent in Toronto on city business.

Mr. Tice on behalf of the city, congratulated the team on their excellent showing and hoped the Albert many more athletic awards in the years to come. Mr. Townsend spoke for the staff of B.C.I. team, and Mr. Bradley for the junior section of the same school. Johnny Hyman, teacher at Albert, gave a resume of some of the games played by the team expressed his appreciation of the fine effort. The team gave Percy Beach, their coach, hearty applause, when he told the boys it was a pleasure to have been the coach of such a fine team.

In recognition of his services to the team he was presented with a wrist watch and also a beautiful cigaret lighter and case suitably engraved. The latter by surprise the coach thanked them sincerely for the gifts. The boys were allowed fireworks and the party broke up about 8 o'clock.

Egg Prices Take Another Tumble On Local Market

Egg prices took another tumble on the local produce market today as vendors quoted 48 cents for grade A large; 46 cents for medium and 36 for pullets. This is a two-cent drop for large eggs, while mediums dropped a nickel from last week.

Capon chicken retail at 55 cents per pound; ducks at 60, hens ranging from 45 to 50 cents per pound. Christmas turkeys made their appearance of the season with one vendor asking from 75 cents to $1.50 each for turkeys.

Vegetable prices remained steady on the counters with potatoes being bringing $3.25 per hamper. Delicious, McIntosh and Russett apples sold at 25 cents per basket. Spys were 30 and snows 75 cents. Greengages were selling at 40 cents per basket.

Pork by the quarter sold at 30 cents per pound for fronts and 35 cents for hinds. Pike were 25 cents and suckers 15 cents a pound.

F. W. Houchin was elected president of Stirling Branch No. 262 Canadian Legion at the annual meeting held on Friday night. Other officers include 1st vice, Herb Stewart; 2nd vice, George Heasman; secretary, R. J. A. Bastedo; assistant secretary, Clive White; treasurer, C. E. West and service bureau, Bert Patterson.

Executive members are Blake Faulkner, Fred Heasman, George Noble, Micky Armstrong, Harry Francis.

Committee chairmen are—membership, R. A. Herntiston; poppy, Harry Francis; entertainment, Major Fraser; property, Herb Stewart; sports, Ray Tanner and sergeant-at-arms, Chas Barnard.

The branch will operate the local skating arena this season naming a rink committee including Russ Hicks, T. P. Mayhew, Ross Kirn, D. M. Armstrong, Stan Boyle, Ray Tanner and Blake Faulkner with R. A. Herntiston, as chairman.

It was pointed out that considerable repair work has been done to the arena and it is being readied for flooding. Plans are already under way for a gala opening.

The retiring president in a brief address reviewed the three main lines of branch activities, service, membership and public relations. He said the branch was fortunate in being able to the post of service bureau officer on who had brought the activities of the office to a new high level.

Membership, he said made a gratifying increase and was at a new high.

He paid tribute to the 1952 executive for the co-operation given him during his tenure of office.

The treasurer's report showed good credit balances in each of the three accounts, poppy, building and general.

Peewee Hockey League Results

Canadiens romped away from Barons 5-0 in the first game played in the Peewee Hockey League at the Memorial Arena this evening. In other tussles, Black Hawks downed Horjets 4-2, Maple Leafs thanked Rangers 2-0 and Bruins and Red Wings played to a scoreless tie.

Bill Latimer, R. Hull, K. Rosalie, R. Finkle and R. Morris potted Canadiens' goals. Johnny Brennan paced the Black Hawks to their win, notching a pair. Ivo Regent and Earl MacDonald got the others. Claud Asselstine scored the twine for both of the losers' tallies.

Ronnie Kellar and Larry Westfall supplied the ammunition as the Leafs swept past Rangers.

Obituary

MRS. ANNIE M. SPRACKETT

In failing health for some time, Mrs. Annie Maria Sprackett, 11 Ferin Street, died at her home early Saturday. She was in her 89th. year.

Born at Cobourg, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Pound, Mrs. Sprackett had lived in Belleville for the past 35 years. Prior to that time she had lived at Gilmour. She was a member of Tabernacle United Church and when health permitted was an active member of the Woman's Association of that church. She was a life member of the Women's Missionary Society.

With her husband, the late George Sprackett, she had celebrated her 60th. wedding anniversary in 1946. Mr. Sprackett died in 1950.

Surviving are two sons: James H. Sprackett, reeve of Tudor and Cashel township, and George P. Sprackett, of Belleville, and four daughters, Mrs. Ernest (Eunice) Wilson, Mrs. Percy (Lillian) Orville (Susan) Lounsberry, Foxboro; Mrs. (Dr.) Gordon Saxton, Kingston, and Miss Lillian Sprackett, at home.

There are 20 grandchildren and 31 great grandchildren.

Members of the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, the funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

Union Members Not Thinking Of Strike--Hall

REGINA (CP)—Frank Hall, chief union negotiator in the current railway wage dispute, says union members are not "even thinking" about a strike.

He said in an interview Thursday night that the 144,000 non-operating railway workers want to approach the forthcoming negotiations on the merits of their case. "We are not talking about it (a strike- nor even thinking about it. We hope to settle it."

The unions, consisting of 15 international and two national brotherhoods, will sit down with railway officials next Wednesday at a meeting proposed by Labor Minister Gregg.

The unions announced last Saturday their rejection of the majority report of a federal conciliation board recommending a pay raise of 12 cents an hour for non-operating employees—those who do not actually run the trains. The unions seek 45 cents an hour.

The railways accepted the 16-cent recommendation.

Lecturer Explains Significance Of Star of Bethlehem

The educational lectures in the Y.M.C.A. conducted by Mrs. Robert Lee Moffett of Chicago, were resumed with an interesting

Last evening, Mrs. Moffett spoke on the "Christmas Record" which relates how the Wisemen, who were Zoroastrian astronomers, through their study of the stars and their observation of the conjuction of the planets, saw the star of Bethlehem and said, "It is the time!" Together they set out for Bethlehem and found the child Christ child. The astronomical and spiritual significance of this event was afterwards explained, confirming the harmony of science and religion.

Mrs. Moffett will speak Sunday evening at 8 on the subject of, "Is There Life After Death; If so, Where?" which is open to the public.

The educational lectures will continue each evening until December 21st.

Council Urges Re-instatement Of Jail Governor

A recommendation that the Department of Penal Institutions give immediate consideration to the reinstatement of Hastings county jail governor Robert Scott, was passed Friday by members of county council at their closing session.

Jail Governor Scott was temporarily suspended on Tuesday pending an investigation on a jail break by John VanDusen, 16, of Madoc, and Harold Gray, 21 of Marmora. Both youths were recaptured four hours after they disappeared from the county jail.

The council recommendation tabled by Reeve Charles Bullard of Deloro as chairman of the county committee on administration of justice, asked immediate consideration for Mr. Scott's re-instatement with all his former privileges.

Salesgirl Makes Browser Feel Rather Small

Magazine stores and counters are not lending libraries, it was made clear early this week by a young salesgirl in a local store.

A group of six or seven men were gathered around the magazines and books on the stand, idly leafing through the literature, picking up this book and discarding that book, and in general, making a nuisance of themselves. No one appeared to be paying too much attention to the sign over the counter, which advised patrons to keep their hands off unless they intended to buy.

Finally the irate salesgirl reached the end of her patience. As one of the group glanced at his watch, put back the book he was browsing through and made his way to the door, the girl asked him quietly, "What's the matter, did your card expire?"

Peterborough Links Edge Kingston 3-2

Kingston Vic's third-period drive fell short of the mark in Peterborough last night when Junior B Triple Links skated off with a three-two victory. The Vics were down 3-0 going into the third period but staged a spirited effort that netted them two goals while holding the Links scoreless. The win puts the Petes in undisputed possession of second place in the group standings with eight points, two behind the league-leading Belleville Hawks.

In Memoriam

AYLESWORTH. — In loving memory of a loving daughter Bessie who passed away December 7th, 1941.

Dearest Mother, the years roll by
Each one to us more sad and dry
God gave us a wonderful mother, yes
His memory will never grow old.
His fashioned in the smile of manhood
He moulded his heart of pure gold.
He moulded our characters,
A beautiful field to shine
Are memories that never grow old.
He chose that dear dad of mine.
He chose us remembered by his daughter and son-in-law Belle and Les Harvey and granddaughter Judy Lou. D6

CLARKE, — In loving memory of my husband, Fred Clarke, who passed away December 8th, 1946.

Loving memories never die
As years roll on and days pass by.
Memories are treasures too
Keep his memory ever dear.
Time takes away the edge of grief,
But memory turns back every hour.
It is only sleep and dream
It's just what I used to say
I will see you again in the morning
At the dawn of a beautiful day.
Remembered by his loving wife. D6

BELCH. — In fond and loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Belch, who passed away one year ago today.

Not dead, but passed beyond
The realm of time and space
Into the newer larger life
Of that unknown place.
Ever remembered by daughters
Helen, Edna and Grace. D6

Card of Thanks

We and Mrs. James Coleman would like to express their sincere thanks and appreciation to the entire staff of the Belleville General Hospital for their kind attention during Mr. Coleman's serious illness; also to Dr. Perry and Dr. Hooper, for their kind attention, floral tributes, cards, telegrams and friends and neighbors for cards, flowers and cigarets. Many thanks. D6

Belleville in The Year 1860

The following information was obtained from the directory of the County of Hastings, first volume, printed in the year 1860 by Mackenzie Bowell and deals with the town of Belleville and the County of Hastings. The material was selected and prepared for publication by Mr. J. V. C. Tyrrell-Clerk, former postmaster of this city. This is the 12th of a series of articles dealing with the early history of Belleville.

* * *

The Village of Stirling was incorporated in the year 1856. It is situated in the township of Rawdon and is surrounded by good agricultural country. It has made rapid progress during the past few years and from its natural position is destined to become an important inland town. It has one of the finest flouring mills in the country a substantial stone building four storeys high, 50 by 70 feet. It is carried on by Mr. William Baker. There is also a woollen factory, sash and blind factory, tannaries, carriage and cabinet and coopers shops. The factories are supplied with water from Rawdon Creek, a small tributary of the Trent. It has several churches; two well conducted common schools and a grammar school and the town has a population of some 1,000 persons.

Trenton is an incorporated village and a port of entry at the mouth of the River Trent at the head of the Bay of Quinte, containing a population of over 1,500 inhabitants. A great portion of this village before its incorporation was situated in the Township of Murray and the Northumberland County, but since that time it has formed a portion of Hastings County. It has in its confines three grist mills with one flouring mill, the latter built by the late G. Weaver where there are 4 stories. On its eastern side there is a large steam saw mill of Messrs. Gilmour and Company. The steam, grist mill, distillery and brewery of J. Flindall are all over-shot on an island in the bay are the steam saw mills of Messrs. Baker and Company.

Trenton is well supplied with merchandise of every description, tin tanneries and carding machine etc. meets the wants of the commercial men in this department. A large business is done here in the rafting of timber from Quebec markets. A large quantity is brought down the river and in the year 1859 there amounted to nearly 4,000,000 cubic feet. It is brought here from St. Mary's in the County of Perth in the western part of the province and also Lindsay and the County of Peterborough by Grand Trunk Railway. The timber when brought from St. Mary's was 175,000 feet of elm, while from Lindsay 60,000 cubic feet, one quarter of which is elm and the rest pine discharged in the river and rafted for Quebec.

The exports from Trenton in the year 1858, and also to other places were shipped as follows: 13,427,000 feet: shin'les, 193,000 feet; cord wood, 175 cedar, 1,000 pork; hides, 816: calf skins, 718: tails, 28,000; wagon spokes, 12,000; barley wheat, peas, some 19,842 bushels. There are three places of public worship in Trenton, the Church of England, Wesleyan Methodist, Roman Catholic and the Presbyterians contemplate the fourth. The township of Tudor is situated immediately in the rear of Madoc from which it was separated and erected into a separate municipality in the year 1850. The opening up of the Hastings road by the government in giving free grants has been the chief means of developing the resources of the township and has added largely to its population and wealth. Five years ago, there were but seven or eight settlers in the township, now there are nearly 300 resident landowners. The land is on a blue limestone foundation and is considered good for agricultural products. It has heavily timbered country, large quantities of potash are annually made. In different parts of the township lead or quartz has been found on the north side and is also found on the northern boundary.

The township of Tyendinaga is bounded on the north by the township of Hungerford, on the east, by the township of Richmond in the County of Lennox and on the south by the Bay of Quinte and on the west by the township of Thurlow. In Tyendinaga, is situated the Mohawk Reserve, and until now it has proved to be a serious drawback upon the settlement of this portion of the county, but a law passed at the present Parliament will bring these lands into market thereby benefiting the Indian and the country in general. It is supposed the Indian settlement will bring in from $500,000 to actual settlers. This township is one of the most fertile in the whole county, its soil is principally clay, and is vegetable loam with a sub-soil of gravelly marl. There are numerous streams and saw mills in the township. There are several villages, the largest being Shannonville which has a population of about 750. In 1839 the population of the township was about 2,000. At the last census it was 6,200 and is now (1860) about 7,000 exclusive of the village of Shannonville.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

'BIRDS' HANDS

Birds' hands do not look like ours, nor are they actually called by that word; nevertheless, there are three of them: two alike, and an odd one. The pair are on the same feet; the odd one is known as a bill or a beak; and they are all wonderful substitutes for hands.

An osprey or fish hawk dives feet first into water and catches fish in strong talons which are used as fingers, but are much better at holding slippery fish. The soles of its pale blue feet have a rough covering, and the claws are long and well curved. The fish is held in a manner unusual for birds: two toes turn forward, two backwards. With their powerful feet other hawks and the owls hold down small birds or mice and tear them to pieces with their hooked beaks.

Every bill is in two sections: an upper, and a lower which is movable like our own lower jaw. All are long, with sharp edges. But they are of different types, depending on the use to which they are put, and are of various sizes; not all are made to be employed like hands. The two sections, or "mandibles" as they are called, are not always of the same length, or the upper slightly longer than the lower. However, the skimmer has a longer lower section, because it flies close to the water, apparently "skimming" small fish off the top.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

At The Cross

Alas! and did my Saviour bleed?
And did my Sovereign die?
Would He devote that sacred head
For such a worm as I?

Was it for crimes that I had done,
He groaned upon the tree?
Amazing pity! Grace unknown!
And love beyond degree!

But drops of grief can ne'er repay
The debt of love I owe:
Here, Lord I give myself away—
'Tis all that I can do.

By Horace B. Powell

"At The Cross"

This is the hymn that converted Fanny Crosby beloved American hymnist whose gospel songs, written in blindness, have been helping for nearly a century to lead men and women to the cross of Jesus.

She accepted Christ one night in 1851 at a revival service in the old John Street Methodist Church in New York. Recalling the incident years later, she said:

"After a prayer was offered, they began to sing the grand old consecration hymn, 'Alas! And Did My Saviour Bleed?', and when they reached the third line of the fifth stanza, 'Here, Lord, I give myself away', my very soul was flooded with celestial light."

"At the Cross", written by Dr. Isaac Watts, famous English preacher and poet, appeared in a volume of "Hymns and Spiritual Songs" published by the author in 1707. There were other hymns in that collection which, through the years, have become equally precious to Christians the world over—favorites like "We're Marching to Zion" and "When I Survey The Wondrous Cross." The latter hymn was once described by Matthew Arnold as "the finest hymn in the English language."

It is said that E. P. Hammond, who won thousands to Christ in his evangelistic meetings in later years was converted through the singing of "At The Cross" one day when he was a lad of 17 living in Southington, Conn.

Bishop Raven Candler, Southern Methodist churchman, tells this story of the use of Watts' hymn in a religious service where former Gov. Colquitt of Georgia, a prominent Methodist layman, was speaking:

"Just before he arose to address the meeting, the choir sang 'Alas! and Did My Saviour Bleed?' one of Watts' greatest songs. It seems to fill him with holy rapture. When he rose to speak, his face shone with supernatural brightness, his eyes were filled with tears and his voice choked with emotion as he said: 'O how I love that song! It was my mother's song. And today, if I could hear her sing it again, I should be prouder by than if I had heard all the choirs of Heaven'".

A merganser's long bill is fitted with tooth-like affairs for holding in the fish. A kingfisher's beak is unusually capacious for the same reason. The nighthawk and whippoorwills have short, flat, wide bills to grab flying insects in the air. Species that belong to the group known as flycatchers have bristles or "whiskers" at the corners of their mouths to prevent insects from escaping.

As probing the ground for worms requires a special bill, nature supplies the woodcock with one like long pincers. Woodpeckers have bills like chisels for making holes in trees, and their excessively long tongues, used as fingers, pry out insects found deep down. The extremely long bill of a hummingbird and its extraordinary tongue, which curls over on each side to form a double tube, and also ends like a brush, drive into cup-shaped blossoms so the bird can suck up nectar.

FREEDOM'S FRONT LINE

The crux of the Korean situation is the single issue of the repatriation of prisoners. With its solution, it is taken for granted that the war could be brought to an end.

But until this issue has been resolved, either by negotiation or the dire alternative of all-out war in Korea, the stalemate there effectively stalemates progress to peace everywhere. That issue from the beginning has been become has been pointed up by the Montreal Gazette in terms which we have not yet seen discussed in public on either side of the question.

The Gazette comments: "There are times in history when a few thousand men have become of transcendent importance in the history of the world. It is not just that their fate may happen to hang in the balance; they may come to symbolize the quivering balance of humanity itself.

"So it is at this time with the prisoners of the Korean war. Their number is not great compared to the world's population. But fate has decreed that what happens to them — or what the world allows to happen to them — may become, as it were, the handwriting on the wall."

In elaborating this analysis the Gazette presents the full implications of the repatriation issue as justifying completely the United Nations demand that all prisoners must have the right to choose whether they go back into Communist hands. And while it neglects to say so, its argument must, it seems to us, justify the stubborn position of the Communists in rejecting any sort of compromise which would allow freedom of choice. Obviously, in the eyes of any Red, every prisoner seeking freedom in the western world is a traitor.

In short, the Gazette points out that if the principle is established that Communist prisoners must be given their choice, it develops that the Communist soldier on the battlefield has a better chance of liberation than the Communist civilian at home.

It would mean that every man in a Communist uniform would have a right to ask for asylum before he fires. It would mean that by simply falling into the hands of the enemy he could become a free man. In this light it is seen how important it is for the United Nations command to insist on principle of the individual's freedom to choose. But on the other hand we know that the denial of freedom to the individual is the whole basis of Communist tyranny.

It has been made difficult enough since the Communists, in the world having learned that there are many thousands of prisoners in Korea who declare that they prefer death to compulsory repatriation to North Korea or China. What a shocking prospect for the Communist command if freedom always beckoned its soldiers just beyond the enemy's lines. And while these lines are now fixed in Korea who doubts that they will some day have their counterparts on many borders of the Iron Curtain?

"What issue is at stake?" the Gazette says. "It is little wonder that the United-States resists any move to throw these Communist prisoners, as it were, to the wolves. But more than that it does not want to give up the hope of yet one more battle-line, for its enemies as well as for its own soldiers, the lines of freedom."

THE SNIPER

It is not unusual for a motion picture to get into the news but "The Sniper" is a film that provided a sensation a short time ago in Toronto and Belleville. Occurred to us then that the showing of this film might very properly have been banned. It was only by the sheerest chance that no one was killed.

This week "The Sniper" was shown in Belleville. We say it. It is good film fare in its gripping presentation but it is not entertainment. It is a film thesis on mental hygiene. The purpose of it is wholly educational. The sniper himself is portrayed as a character who deserves sympathy and understanding and he gains your sympathy. The fictional story of the unfortunate young man would not have become a psychopathic murderer if time had been provided for proper treatment of cases such as his, and all those that are codgnizance of such cases. The need for treatment, in the first instance, and detention for life where psychiatry fails to cure the victim.

The film is effective in this respect is a worthy one. But that purpose is not being served by presenting it not for wholesale consumption as a thriller. Rather its effect is one of suggesting to a person of troubled mind, as it did to an unhappy youth in Toronto that he too was under some psychopathic compulsion to commit murder. And the truth is that he only failed in murder because he did not have the unerring aim of the sniper himself.

The problem that this picture points up is one that can be dealt with only by such groups as the medical profession, the clergy, social organizations, welfare workers, members of parliament and, certainly, police and law enforcement officers. We think that its showing might well be restricted to those circles.

HOLY NIGHT WEATHER

Country people in Britain still watch the sky on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day for signs of a change in the weather, for there is an ancient belief that the weather at this time is a strong portent of that to come throughout the year. "Wise and cunning masters of astrology," we are told, "have found that a man may see and mark for the weather of Holy Night how the whole year after shall be." When Christmas night was clear and starry, it was taken that the year's crop of fruit and wine would be a plentiful one. On the other hand, if Christmas night was foul and windy, the year to come would be "very scant of wine and fruit." But if the wind arose at the rising of the sun then "it betoketh great dearth of cattle and beasts this year." And if the wind arose at sunset "it signifies death to some among the kings and great lords."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 6, 1932

In the municipal elections yesterday, Mayor George O. Tice was re-elected for a second term over Alderman R. F. White by a majority of 1899. Following are the names of the aldermen elected with the number of votes they obtained: Joseph Imlah, 2,340; Harold Armstrong, 2,239; Clinton C. Richardson, 2,177; Harry Hill, 1,716; W. A. Woodley, 1,633; W. Donahue, 1,562; C. R. McCreary, 1534; Ardleman R. V. Sills, 1,467; F. B. Foley, 1,463; G. A. Pallister, 1,459; James C. Walker, 1,416; John B. Harker, 1,283; Thomas A. Marshall, 1,261. For Hydro Commissioner Geo. A. Reid was elected over M. E. Hamilton by a majority of 244. Reid obtained 2,147 votes and Hamilton received 1,903 votes. Nine of the 1932 council were re-elected and the new members are Joseph Imlah, Harry John B. Harker, William R. McCreary and Benjamin Sidney Ald. Imlah headed the poll for the second time. Mayor Tice received a majority in advance. There was no election for school trustees; all were elected by acclamation; they are Charles C. Steward, Reginald Moncrief, Victor E. Graves, H. J. Allin, Geo. F. Lent, William J. Harrison and E. A. Green.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

INTERESTS

I believe one of the greatest ideas for the prolongation of a useful and happy life is everybody is to have a variety of interests. We often hear, "So-and-so is spoiled to a man that he is "many-sided". It could just as well be applied to the mind of a man. The many-sided mind takes in and retains all sorts of useful confession, or daily scheduled duties.

A person with many interests is constantly inspired. He is like a fruitful forest, for they are forever learning something new about him. He is alive with enthusiasm. His personality is colorful. People search him out and usually give off a stimulating spirit. His interests blot out any dullness of life.

Collectors are usually happy folks. It doesn't matter much as to what they collect. The interest is there, and it is educational to some extent. It may be books, art, canes, or buttons. There is always a search that remains alive. Millions collect stamps. The late President Roosevelt's hobby of collecting stamps became known all over the world, and this interest gave to him needed strength and happiness during the years.

People's interest in sport is one of the healthiest of interests. This is evidenced by the great crowds that fill big stadiums. Sports are in the main a care for their bodies and a love for good sportsmanship. The love of sports is not confined to youth. All ages are included. Physical fitness is the concern of the part of everyone interested. Our thousands of acres of land are an investment no matter where reserved.

One's interest in life itself is always augmented by many a hobby or interest that contributes to one's special bent or happiness. These interests relax the mind and lessen tension on the nervous system. Fishermen understand this. People with many interests live, not only longest, but happiest. People with interests are never bored.

ADOPTED

Long years ago my country found the boy I used to be
And taught me in her schoolrooms and then adopted me.
Though I'd another motherland the care that here I've known
Could not have been more gracious if I had been her own.

She sheltered me and tutored me
and opened wide her arms.
She let me make her hills and streams, her orchards and her farms,

And looking back across the years, 'tis plain as plain can be No motherland could kinder be than this has been to me.

I've always called her "Mother" and I've thanked the Lord above
That I was born to come to her and share in all her love.
Now that adopted son of hers,
at last to manhood grown.
Has learned he'd not have had more care if he had been her own.

Through Space To Christmas

(Ottawa Journal)

Having been dragged (our plaintive cries ignored)— through the electric-train, cowboy, bow-and-arrow and sky-hill skiing phases by our children, we read with the utmost apprehension the news about the interplanetary Christmas now at hand.

We hear from the United States —and every rumor from that republic usually becomes an established fact — that Junior interplanetary may be expected to demand the equipment for making a large rocket ship, a ray gun with colored lights flashing from the muzzle, an interplanetary phone to allow him two-way conversation over baffle-mile, a rocket pistol with three rockets darts with a "warhead" to carry secret messages, a flying saucer device and a radio-active set of space suits.

In these toys, and the progressive thought they represent, we have the most unfortunate interval when they are kept at a proper distance. Our problem is that in our home there is room for a rumble a device as a jet airplane, some sort of rocket without our aid, and, having been constructed with our uncertain fingers, are a less unsatisfactory and hear no resemblance to the pretty picture on the cover of the box.

In our advisory capacity we have failed even to make clear the principle of the steam engine and the propeller. In a rocket ship is a problem we have no hope of comprehending. In these pre-Christmas bitterness of our fears of the interplanetary age we think longingly of the days when an orange, a home-made doll or a 32-cent book would in the Christmas stocking were received with blissful satisfaction.

Meantime, we are taking home a few books on the solar system and German rockets, hoping we will at least be intelligent when confronted by our brats in space suits come December 25.

Very Thinly Disguised

(Winnipeg Free Press)

The "Labor Progressive" party at last convention in Toronto, changed its name to Communist party. The words Labor and Progressive are merely the green glass in which the Communists hide their identity.

Likewise Mr. Joe Zuken, the nominated candidate, is neither a labor man nor a progressive. He is straight Communist. Communist complete with diploma and all the usual credentials from Moscow.

The Wife Collaborates

The kid in the bathroom had just finished washing his hands for supper, the kid in the dining room had just dumped a bowl of cereal on the table, and the kid in the living room were engaged in a screaming hair-pulling fight in the middle of it wife paused at her husband's study door and called out, "Now's the novel coming along, dear?"

"Fine" her husband replied. "Bob has just proposed to Anabel."

She sighed. "Well, tell her to say no," she counselled.

U.S. Tribute To George VI

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

The New York Times—bespeaking the best opinion of United States public thinking—said the fine thing by way in recent editorial on the project of a memorial to King George the Sixth.

"There are many monuments to King George VI of Great Britain. None is more impressive than that which lives in the heart of every person who was privileged to come under his reign. We Americans feel differently about that of course, but we recognize the unique qualities of a great British Sovereign, who was our friend and ally.

The English-Speaking Union of the United States is undertaking to make its own special contribution to the Memorial Fund. This plan of contribution, which was presented to the American public for the first time in the Beacon-Herald, takes the form of establishing scholarships open under rigid tests of the Commonwealth citizens may study in the United States. Any fine memorial to King George could be more w'l thy of gratefulness and appreciation than those who recognize the singular greatness of Anglo-American understanding."

A Wise Old Man Speaks

(Peterborough Examiner)

We are impressed and heartened by the wise and good words of Dr. R. W. Ross, a clergyman of Brantford, who has spent 50 years in the ministry, and who is an assistant at St. Columbe's Church there.

Dr. Ross is quoted as saying: "Too many ministers are thinking about current problems and our modern way of life; that's nonsense. You can't get excited about things we cannot help; people want to hear about the same old truths given their freshness. Jesus did not fallen victim to the Fashionable Temple of worship."

Ninety years is a long life, and a man who lives such a life honestly for such a term may well find, as has Dr. Ross, that honest with himself is growing old worse. Many people begin to feel this feeling, and every thing that is wrong in the world can be put right in a short time.

Neither New Nor Fancy

(Edmonton Journal)

An Associated Press dispatch from Wassington describes as "fancy" breakfast of "fruit cocktail and 're-embus." The implication is that they are not fancy.

Not to anyone who served in the army in the First World War or since! For "fruit cocktail" was used freely to move troops from the line to rest billets and training areas. And always when the men eligible on the buses they ordered fruit when they climbed off they debossed.

The second dictionary-dates embus' from 1915, and defines its first meaning as "to put troops on a bus," while 'debus' is "to set down, or get down, from a motor vehicle." Old stuff, we'd say.

Personal Health Talks

IMPORTANT NOTICE

We regret to announce that effective at once, due to exchange problems, mail difficulties, etc., Dr. Brady can no longer answer personal letters from readers nor furnish pamphlets or booklets. However, Dr. Brady's health column will continue to give up-to-the-minute information on health matters as heretofore.

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THE RA-BI-ES IN SHEEP-DOG-HAM

From 17 years of experience in dealing with the rabies problem in Birmingham, Jefferson County, Alabama, Dr. C. Dowling, health officer, and Dr. George A. Denison, director of laboratories, concluded that—

"Rabies is primarily a veterinary problem. Regardless of its prevalence among dogs, it will probably never cause sufficient morbidity or mortality among human beings in this region to allow the classification as a public health problem of importance."

This, mind you, nineteenth century doctors and misinformed folks, is not the opinion of experts who probably had more experience with the hydrophobic dog than any doctors or health authorities in North America. Birmingham is also called the "rabies capital" of North America.

Through the years from 1922 to 1939, the Alabama experts reported, 11,818 animals had received a positive laboratory diagnosis of rabies in and around Birmingham.

Boy, that's a lot of ——. It must be a real adventure to visit Birmingham in the dog days —dogs of all descriptions, wildly raving, frothing at the mouth and attacking citizens and strangers indiscriminately.

While the bright young men or women writers in the health department laboratory were peering through the microscope at the brain tissue of the victims of the suspected dog and magisterially proclaiming "Negri bodies" in 11,318 instances — Drs. Denison and Dowling omitted to mention how many such microscopic tests were negative in the 17-years period, probably total of 42,947 persons were given anti-rabies vaccine (Pasteur treatment).

This story grows more horrible with every paragraph. The mad dog menace is not the only one three persons each as they prowl the streets and alleys of the stricken city.

According to Drs. Denison and Dowling, "of the 46 persons who died of rabies in the same 17-years period, twenty-three were judged to have received prompt and adequate treatment. The persistence with which fatalities continue to be equally disregarded among the treated and untreated affords ground for wide speculation."

Before you begin speculating, however, let me remind you that the Alabama medical officials of rabies in man is necessarily a matter of opinion and not a matter of fact. Any person or health officer who has seen the results of the examination of tissue from the brain proves that the man or woman had rabies is deceiving himself or trying to deceive the public.

Every Birmingham experts tell us also that "in advising treatment we must carefully weigh the possibilities of death or permanent disability from treatment (Pasteur treatment) "against the possibilities of death from rabies."

If I were bitten by all the mad dogs in Birmingham I'd have no Pasteur treatment.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Three Perennial Potted Plants

Recently a lady told me that she read that potted plants in the house in the winter are injurious to health because they rob the air of oxygen . . . (S. I. D.)

Answer —Lady, eh? Growing plants use carbon dioxide and give off oxygen. So they are beneficial to health. More important, if potted plants are not given adequate moisture to the air and that is always desirable in the artificially heated room. Cut flowers have no effect upon the air. Flowers should be kept in a sickroom or not, as the patient prefers.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

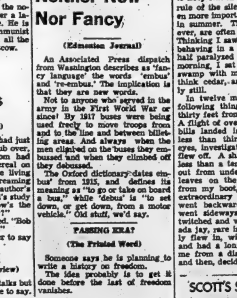
Nearly 75 years ago, Ernest Thompson Seton wrote: "The silent watcher sees most." He was referring to animals who take pleasure in observing country life and wild nature. One of the difficulties in connection with writing on wild life or on out-door interests in winter is that it is hard to keep still in the cold. Anyone rule of the silent watcher is that one more important in winter than in summer. The rewards, however, are often far richer. Thinking I saw a snowshoe hare sitting in a very curious and half paralyzed fashion the other morning, I crept down to within twenty with my back against a think cedar, and kept absolutely still.

In twelve minutes, I saw the following things: A crow passed thirty feet from me, all unaware. A flight of over thirty red crossbills landed in the trees and less than thirty feet from my head investigated the cones, and flew off. A shrew, which weighs less than a ten cent piece, came out from under the snow and leaves on the ground six feet from my head, on the same errand extraordinary skinny dance, went towards, went towards, went sideways, shook, shivered, twitched and vanished. A Canada Jay, and a brown perk swiftly flew in, with a low whistle, and had left, unnoticed, a dead rat from a distance of ten feet, and then, deciding I was alive after all, flew regretfully away. Then something else ran by me, white snow caught my eye. It was the half paralyzed snowshoe hare, who turned again on the same track on which I had come. Before, it had been very paralyzed, more labored than ever. Its fur, previously lily over, appeared half closed. It took three constricted hops, stumbled, tumbled up, fell and died back. Suddenly, it gave a hoppity-skip and was gone. I think were the same stiff, labored ones as before.

I was all the corner of my eye, I saw a small black object moving up to the right. It was the tip of a weasel's tail. Coming busily and steadily in the snowshoe hare's tracks, while weasel was taking long jumps and writhing through the snow. It was fated, of course, to win the chase.

All this in twelve minutes of motionless silence, eighteen miles from the core of a big city.

FREE PARKING



(Vancouver Province)

Ottawa has a lot of nerve asking for free parking privileges when it is annually side-stepping tax payment on its vast properties here. The value of Federal holdings here exceeds $40,000,000, and if Ottawa would taxes like anyone else it would contribute around $1,800,000 a year to the city treasury.

And yet the government won't put a nickel in its parking meter.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Some Ideas Suggested to Revive Ailing Cheese Industry

following is the text of an address given in Tuesday by R. Nicholson, superintendent of the Kemptville Dairy School at the 25th annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association which was held here this week:

Many readers will find Mr. Gibson's speech interesting as he delves into the history and difficulties of the cheese industry since its commercial inception in Canada.

"The history of the cheese industry in Canada is one which we have every reason to cherish. Although the story may have been told many times I make no apology for briefly reviewing the accomplishments which have been made. At the present critical period of the cheese industry, it is opportune that we should look into the past in order that we may benefit from previous experiences and take courage for the struggle which lies ahead to regain the high prestige of former years.

"From 1860 to the turn of the century, during the pioneer years of this country, cheese industry was the principal production of a few million pounds to over 230 million pounds with an export of 186 million pounds. During this pioneer period Canada produced over three billion pounds of cheese and exported over two-and-three-fifths billion pounds with a total value of over $256,000,000. These figures were mighty big in the early history of this country. They were made at an average export price of only 9.8 cents per pound with a maximum price per pound of 14.8 cents in 1874 and a minimum of 8.13 cents in 1879.

"Soon after the turn of the century in 1904 we attained our maximum production of 270 million pounds with an export of 236 million pounds, following which peak production and export the fortunes of the cheese industry have varied. Up to 1925 the decline in production was what might naturally be expected with the growth of other branches of the dairy industry. Better fluid milk and concentrated milk production were able to prosper on a home market by offering a more attractive price for milk through surplus milk being exported in the form of cheese. Since 1925 there have been the main setbacks in production and export. The first came in the thirties when cheese production dropped below 100 million pounds and export was less than 90 million pounds. This decline was undoubtedly due to the depression which was only slightly over 10 cents.

Great Recovery

"Notwithstanding this serious decline a wonderful recovery was made to meet war requirements so that in 1942 we produced over 206 million pounds and exported over 141½ million pounds. During the war every branch of the dairy industry took pride in the grand effort put forth by the cheesemen. How soon it seems to have been forgotten.

"Since the war the second and most disastrous setback has taken place and this year our estimated production will be down to that of seventy years ago and the British export market practically non-existent. Apart from these setbacks, however, the cheese industry has a glorious record for since Confederation, 1867, the estimated total production equals two and eleven billion pounds with a total export of over nine and a quarter billion pounds valued at one billion, three hundred and twenty-eight million dollars. Truly this is a record of which young Canada and especially Ontarians, may be justly proud, for nearly eighty per cent of this export has been made in Ontario. It is well to remember as you travel through the glorious countryside of the cheese making districts of Ontario that the farms were settled and established on a prosperous basis from the revenue obtained through cheese production.

"But while we cherish the past we must face the future, not with gloom but with the optimism and courage of the early cheese pioneers. Although the cheese industry seems to have reached a low ebb this year there is a similarity to the condition which existed during the pioneer years but with greater advantages and possibilities. Seventy years ago cheese production was about equal to the present level. There were signs of yearly increase in production requiring greater market outlet. Contrary to the opinions of many I am optimistic enough to believe that our cheese production will again take on an upward trend from its present low level. The milk production possibilities of this country are practically unlimited. During the years 1942-1945, when there was no embargo restrictions of cattle from this country to the United States, our yearly production of milk was one billion pounds more than will be produced this year, 1952. This milk production will be recovered and if the increase continues at the same rate as from the turn of the century then it is reasonable to expect that the present annual production will be more than doubled in the next fifty years. No matter whether we have an export market or not, cheese will continue to be an outlet for an important percentage of our milk production.

"Likewise, just as the production of cheese required increased market seventy years ago, so today we must create a greater demand for our cheese. The main difference is that whereas we sought an export market years ago, we must now create a greatly increased home market. With these two similarities in mind, an increasing cheese production and the need for a market, let us recall what the pioneers did to meet such a situation.

Information Exchanged

"During the early years of cheese making, practical information was passed from one cheesemaker to another and from time to time practical demonstrations would be held at centrally located factories. The methods used varied considerably, resulting in a lack of uniformity in the cheese made. This variation in product and the desire of cheese makers to understand the sciences involved in a cheese making led to the establishment of three dairy schools, at St. Hyacinthe in Quebec, and Guelph and Kingston (now Kemptville) in Ontario. These schools not only gave instruction in cheese making and the applied sciences but also accumulated practical data by operating throughout the year. Instructors were trained to follow up the work in the factories with the result that Canadian cheddar cheese soon became recognized as second to none on the British market. In other words we supplied the market with a superior type of cheese, so that previous to the First Great War sixty per cent of cheese imported by Great Britain came from Canada.

"To create and capture a greatly increased home market we must follow these two main lessons of the past, namely: Produce the highest quality of cheese, by making what type it may be, which the public desires, and our cheese must be advertised in such a manner as to create the striking impression across Canada as was created by the Mammoth Cheese of Perth in 1865-94.

Great Asset

"In meeting the requirements of the home market we have a great asset in our well-established Canadian cheddar cheese made from clean raw milk. I need not dwell on the quality of this cheese except to say that its superiority is recognized the world over. There is no cheese which will retain favor with the public in general, equal to our best Canadian cheddar. We must therefore take every precaution to guard against any step which would jeopardize the reputation of our standard Canadian cheddar in the slightest degree. It would be easy to make something worse but we cannot make anything better. If the accepted and long established high standards for cheddar cheese are in any way changed then we no longer have the typical cheddar that fastest a spacious type of which no good Canadian cheese maker would be proud. It is true that mechanical cheddar cheese does not suit all tastes and in this respect we must meet public requirements with cheese of milder flavor. Formerly, so-ely-made cheese largely suited a mild flavored taste, but the 60-day holding regulation of the Food and Drugs Act, handicapped the sale of such cheese. One way to meet this regulation and still have a mild flavored cheddar would be low temperature ripening (now Kemptville) in October. Cheese should not age gave instruction in cheese making and the applied sciences but also accumulated practical data by operating throughout the year. Instructors were trained suggested and to a limited extent practised in order to bypass the 60-day holding regulation. This, however, involves considerable higher manufacturing expense and does not bring an improvement of typical cheddar flavor. It does give uniformity. Washed curd cheese meets with a popular sale in New York state and its increased production might very well be encouraged in Ontario. These and other modifications of cheddar cheese should be experimented and perfected. Only by such practical demonstration can correct information and accumulation of positive data be obtained.

"Let me again emphasize that whatever modifications of cheddar cheese are made they should be so designated in the grading, and thereby avoid confusion and misinprgement on the good name of our famous Canadian cheddar. It may be that in due course we should try other varieties of cheese, especially the native cheese of the British Isles. For the present, however, it would be folly to try and make with cheddar of which our makers are expert and can reasonably be expected to master any modifications which may be considered desirable. In any case whatever varieties or types of cheese may be decided as best for our home market they should be proven and the best procedure of manufacture demonstrated from our dairy schools.

"Having been associated with the conduct of the Eastern Dairy School at Kingston and Kemptville for the last eighteen years I realize you may well ask me why the educational has not continued to carry on practical demonstration as formerly. I can only say that since the change of policy when the school was operated as a model cheese factory and creamery in Kingston and moved to Kemptville in 1930 there has been no appropriation or staff to conduct such demonstrations. You will be interested to know, however, that with the changed situation which has developed this year serious consideration is being given and meetings of provincial and federal dairy officials are being held to decide on the best possible future policy to meet new conditions.

Advertising Campaign

"With the kinds of cheese available in uniform and constant supply attention must be paid to developing an increasing demand on the home market. The maintenance of a profitable price for cheese will ultimately depend on a steadily increasing home demand. To do this Canadians must become more cheese minded in their daily diet. The question arises, can we inaugurate as effective a campaign to capture the home market as the cheesemen did in 1865 to capture an export market when they built the biggest cheese of all time and displayed it on the journey from Perth to the World's Fair at Chicago and across the Atlantic Ocean to be paraded and displayed in the thickly populated centres of Great Britain? I cannot claim to be an advertising expert but I give you my ideas for what they are worth.

"Next year, 1953, will be the Diamond Jubilee Anniversary of the making and display of the mammoth cheese. On the fiftieth anniversary a monument was erected in the form of a replica of the cheese in cement at the C. P. R. Perth Station. Surely the erection of this monument was not a passing fancy which would in the course of time disintegrate and disappear. Rather I think it was intended as a memorial to those early pioneers and as an ever present reminder of the wonderful dairy accomplishment of that day.

"Why not make the 60th Anniversary in 1953 A Canadian Cheese Year in which the people would be induced to eat Canadian cheese — the complete nutritious and most economical of all solid foods. In all our leading provincial fairs such as the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and the exhibitions or fairs held in Ottawa, London, Peterborough, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and the Maritimes, I would like to see an attractive cheese luncheon pavilion operated by the best catering management. In such cheese luncheon pavilions an attractive cheese meal would be provided at nominal cost. It is at these exhibitions and fairs where the masses of people congregate in holiday mood that good sustaining foods appeal.

Best Salesmen

"For my holidays during the past summer I journeyed to the Pacific coast. Throughout my travels I asked for cheese in the dining rooms of steamships, pullman cars, hotels and restaurants. I regret to say that throughout six weeks itineraty I was not served a single helping of good Canadian cheese. We need the best salesmen from coast to coast to place our cheese in an attractive manner where the public can readily buy.

"Real good Canadian cheese seems to be a rarity if not unknown in the West and Maritimes but once people have eated of the best at their exhibitions they will surely ask for and buy more. Printed advertising without good salesmanship will not get very far. Whatever scheme of advertising is adopted the main purpose to keep in mind is to get the people eating cheese rather than reading about it.

"It may be that the loss of the British market may turn into a blessing for the Canadian cheese industry. The days seems to be gone when we could be satisfied with the price of cheese set according to an export market in competition with other cheese producing countries. The chances of a more favorable price for cheese would seem to be better on a vigorous home market. Let us therefore keep two main objects in mind, 1953, namely:

"To make the highest quality of cheese that suits the tastes of the public, and

"By an effective scheme of nation-wide advertising create and capture a greatly increased home market."

Mrs. Frank Brown, Institute had a showing of rugs which members recently artified in the district. The meeting opened with a display in native costume, gave a talk on Holland and several Dutch families joined in the singing of Dutch and native songs. At the Kingston area conference in the spring, the banquet was provided by a trio of Dutch women, singing their native songs in their native dress and garb.

The Institutes are learning that people who come to Canada from countries behind the iron curtain" can tell us a lot about certain world events. Vandorf reports a moving address by a newcomer from Czechoslovakia who used to wake up every morning with dread, saying to myself, "What will happen today?" In Canada nothing can happen to have our farm. We can work. We have our freedom again. It is the freedom to work and live, after enforced slavery in Communist Czechoslovakia which makes us so thankful." What our new Canadian friends could contribute to our knowledge of international affairs!

International Days have been arranged by several institutes to give newcomers a public welcome. Welland County Institutes arranged a special luncheon and each institute presented a gift as a guest a new Canadian or more than one. There were guests from England, Denmark, the Netherlands, Hungary, Germany, Switzerland, Wales, Ukraine and Serbia and each was introduced individually to the gathering. Also, through a well planned program various arrangement, greetings were read from country women's organizations in almost every European country represented in the Associated Country Women of the World.

Pumps With Scalloped Throat Lines Shown in Parisian Displays

By PEGGY MASSON

PARIS (Reuters)—Paris is putting its best foot forward in the winter fashion scene with pretty pumps with scalloped throat line.

This basic classic is shown in striking new versions with dipped and irregular bandings and as ever as three deep lines worked in on each side from the front of the vamp, and terminating at the heel in a bow.

The low cut irregular side treatments lends a dashing effect of a lengthened leg, contrasted by the high swept point at the back.

Some fashion houses concentrate the scalloped throat on one side only, with the inside shank contrasted by a straight broken line. Other variations

Other variations stress side-swept or asymetrical movements in both basic and new forms. Cross straps and open cutouts as well as dressmaker bow treatments exemplify this oblique effect.

More uses are found in higher vamps contrasting the slim, tapered and quite pointed toe. Heels are lower than three inches.

Popular Pumps

For street and day wear favorites also include the winged vamp back pump, most often used with a contrast. Here the wide heels and open shank bandings are used with halter backs, or one sided asymetrical treatments, contrasting one bare side to the opposing closed shank.

W.I. Welcome New Canadians

TORONTO — Ontario Women's Institutes are finding very practical ways of welcoming new Canadians and giving them a place in the life of the community.

Our women find that women from other countries have their own crafts and music and their own ideas, all of which make valuable contributions to Institute programs, and that taking part in a program, or leading a community activity, is one of the surest ways of making a newcomer feel at home. So we are constantly hearing reports like these: At a Windsor Institute meeting a new member from Jugoslavia demonstrated lace making. Falkland had an address on the customs, resources and religions of Holland by a member from Holland. Bowmanville arranged to have two Dutch women talk about their native foods. The women not only talked about food, they brought to the meeting two of their native dishes—cucumber in butter sauce and green peppers and served them to their Canadian friends. A woman commenting on the Dutch cookery says, "It was really good and we were glad to have the recipes. He hope to have our new Canadian members tell us more about the food and customs of their countries."

WEST HUNTINGDON UNITED CHURCH W.M.S.-W.A.

Mrs. Alex McCurdy was hostess for the December meeting of West Huntingdon United Church W.M.S. and W.A. on Thursday.

The president, Mrs. Grant opened the meeting with the call to worship, using an editorial from the Missionary Monthly.

Mrs. A. Wright read the Scripture from the 2nd Chapter of Matthew.

Mrs. Hammond gave a reading on "Stewardship".

Mrs. Grant thanked the society for their loyal, support during the past two years as president.

Mrs. C. Wright read from the study book concerning agriculture in Africa and was followed by a reading by Mrs. Albert Asselstine and a duet by Mrs. and Mrs. Noonan, "Have You Any Room For Jesus?"

Mr. Norman gave the Christmas message.

Mrs. Russell Sills and Mrs. George Ashley were asked to prepare lunch next month.

The January meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Clayton Wright.

Mrs. Grant thanked all who assisted with the program, also Mrs. McCurdy for the use of her home.

Mr. Norman closed the meeting, after which Mrs. McCurdy and her assistants served refreshments.

PROTEST SUGAR IMPORTS

MITCHELL (CP)—Members of the Perth county federation of agriculture passed a resolution Thursday protesting the importation of cane sugar into Canada which, they said, was threatening the future of sugar beet in western Ontario. Another resolution asked the federal government to find a market for surplus farm products in "iron curtain" countries. The federation reelected all officers, including President Harold Peterson of Uxro, for another year.

Sydney Building Rest Room In Heart of City

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—Sydney's city council is building a £20,000 rest room for women in the heart of the city, but it won't be just for mothers and children. It will have bathrooms and dressing rooms and irons and ironing boards for women who want to change before going to dances or the theatre.

In addition, of course, there will be a creche and feeding rooms, a children's bedroom and an open air playground for children—but there will be a three-hour limit on leaving children there. Four nurses will be on duty as well as a maids to help. In the building there will be a refreshment room and a drug store, with a taxi rank outside.

SUNBEAM MISSION BAND

White's District — The Sunbeam Mission Band held its Christmas meeting at Quinte View School on Friday afternoon with the motto repeated by the members as guests.

The theme speakers were Mrs. Fred Wilson, 1st vice president of the Belleville Presbyterial, and the Rev. R. W. T. Middleton, minister of the Bayside pastoral charge.

The president, Grace Goldie, presided.

The Christmas Story based on Luke 2:1-14 was read by Marilyn Bowers and demonstrated on the flannelgraph by Mrs. Leonard Young and W.M.S. pictures. The Rev. R. W. T. Middleton, guest speaker, told the story the grey spider has a cross upon its back. It was of service to Mary and Joseph, and they were fleeing to Egypt with the baby Jesus to flee from the cruel King Herod.

A country expression in the World was acted by Donald Bowers who was "Old Mr. World" and the children were "Barbara Christmas maker, as Youth; Sylvia Bilhan as Love; Donna Dale as Peace; Janice; Marilyn Bowers as Truth; and Glingrsa as Work; Heather MacKenzie as Hope. Donald Bowers as Joy and Nancy Hockaday as Peace. All sang "Happy Times" a happy Christmas song.

Mr. R. T. Middleton sang a comic song which was well received.

Gift Boxes

The Mission Band gift boxes were handed in and the proceeds were dedicated for mission work by Ronald Ferguson.

"Rudolph-the-Red-Nosed Reindeer" and "Young Belly" accordion solos were played by Nancy Brunger then a piano and accordion duet by Mrs. Ray Mason" by Nancy Hockaday and Charles Brunger.

White gifts were prebented by the children to be sent to Erinsdale hospital. Marilyn Castle, Farrar offered a Christmas prayer.

The senior girls and boys sang, "Hear Ye Not Merry Christmas Bells", accompanied on by Mrs. Campbell their teacher. Little Susan Hockaday gave a humble recitation, "The Goblins Will Get You," and Anne Brunger and Charles Brunger recited "Bright Little Stars."

Mrs. Fred Wilson told the children a story about Chissmbs hospital of Japan, Africa, where their autumn Thanksoffering was to be sent.

Rose Anne Brunger played accordion solos "Jingle Bells" and "Christmas Bells".

A treat of homemade candy was provided by the grownups.

WEALTHY VAGE' T DEAD

TORONTO (CP)—Patrick McCarthy, 55, who, police said, is believed to have inherited $20,000 recently, died Thursday night in the Don jail while under arrest as a vagrant. McCarthy came originally from Mitchell and until recently worked for a construction company in Oakville. Police said he had slept in parked cars and trucks and Wednesday night he was arrested on a vagrancy charge.

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

We can all expect to live longer, according to the Dept. of National Health and Welfare. In 1900, the expected life span of a Canadian was only 50 years. By 1950, this had increased by almost 20 years. A Canadian boy who has reached one year, may now expect to live 68 years and a girl 70 years . . . Why is it we are all living longer? The reason is the result of good maternal and child care.

Medical experts say that infant mortality is a more certain guide to the general state of health of a nation than the death rate of grownups.

Maternal mortality is also a good indication of the advanced progress of our medical services. Maternal mortality for Canada in 1930 was 58 deaths per thousand live births, according to government records. In 1950 this was reduced to 1.1 per thousand live births.

Last year 74 per cent of babies brought into the world were born in Canadian hospitals where expert medical care and equipment were instantly available.

On Advertisements

English people who come to Canada seem to be startled by our forms of advertising. They are quite disgusted with many radio commercials and soap opera high pressure salesmanship.

Reason for this is perhaps that English people, in a government controlled medium which allows no commercials. One newspaper advertising hits the Englishman in the eye because his home ads don't carry the same persuasion to buy.

With all this in mind, we were quite astonished the other day when reading over the latest edition of that stately old weekly "Burkes Peerage," to see not only the type of ad accepted, but the way they are placed in the book.

FAMILY TRAGEDY

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — A mother recently treated for a mental condition drove her car in front of a speeding train Thursday, then left her three children were killed. Police, who made the one note in Mrs. Sedora Wilson's purse and more at her home, recalled it suicide. Killed with their 37-year-old mother were John, 10, Sedora, 9, and Cirica, 7.

ANGRY BULL KILLS MAN

OTTAWA (CP)—An enraged bull dragged and trampled 60-year-old Edgar Dodd to death Thursday night on his farm near Ashton, about 25 miles southwest of here. Edgar Dodd, 61, attempted to distract the usually placid bull after it attacked his father in the field. When this failed he ran for help but Mr. Dodd was dead before neighbors arrived.

Jubilee Evening Auc. Elects 1953 Officers

Nearly 200 members and guests met in Bridge Street Sunday School for the Christmas meeting of the Jubilee Evening Auxiliary.

Special guests were the members of the Explorers' Group and the C.G.I.T.

A splendid supper was served by the combined groups of Mrs. Selden and Miss Pyre Young.

Mrs. Campbell thanked all the guests most graciously and conducted the business of the meeting.

Two members of the Explorers and C.G.I.T. expressed their thanks in a way that spoke well for their training and future work in the church.

Floral Tributes

Flowers used in decoration had been placed in the church on Sunday by Miss Martha Hamilton in honor of the founder of the Jubilee Mission Circle (now Auxiliary) in 1887.

Miss Gertrude Lazier's group was in charge of the program. Young members of the C.G.I.T. read from the Scriptures the story of the first Christmas and a number of familiar carols were sung.

A beautiful pageant, in four scenes, entitled "Worship" was then given. The scenes showed the shepherds on the plains, the coming of the wise men: the wise men before Herod, and the manger scene. Narrator was Mrs. Jessie Jeffers and reader made the beautiful story realistic and a splendid solo, "The Magnificat" was used as introduction.

Others participating were:

Mrs. Morden presided while the following slate of officers were presented by the nominating committee and accepted by the society as whole:

Past president — Miss Pearl Campbell; president — Mrs. Kay Jones; 1st vice-president — Miss Grace Kenny; 2nd vice-president — Mrs. J. Mahoney; recording secretary — Mrs. Bonter; treasurer — Miss H. Cook; 3rd secretary — Mrs. A. C. Wilkin; supply secretary — Mrs. Dorothy Hockaday; literature — Mrs. Dorothy Hockaday; assistant pianist — Mrs. Nichol; press secretary — Mrs. W. Woman Claims To Have Secret For Domestic Bliss

LONDON (CP) — Mrs. Helena Normanton, a former lawyer, claims to have the secret of domestic bliss and lasting marriage.

Mrs. Normanton said the secret is "independence in theories and a specific spending allowance for the "little woman" does the trick.

The recipe was offered to the royal commission on marriage and divorce by the 58-year-old president of the Council of Married Women, who practised law for nearly 28 years before retiring in 1950.

Mrs. Normanton said the last thing she would suggest would be anything unkind or unfair to the husbands. But appearing in the courts is something like 3,000 matrimonial cases had convinced her that many homes were broken up by mothers going out to work.

The royal commission could do more to build up happiness in marriage by making the home independent and otherwise contributing to economic justice in the ordinary household.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A little "sumpthin" would help

One of the things that I say about every again, in the hope that it may sink into the hearts and minds of some of the women who need it most, is that a few down-trodden wives would get further in solving their problems if they would just acquire a reasonable amount of gumption. In hill country language, gumption is usually translated as "git up and git", and that's a good way of putting it, too, even though it is not necessarily to be taken in its literal sense.

The more I read letters from wives who complain that their husbands take them for granted, ignore them, neglect or belittle them, the more it seems to me that such wives need to this kind of treatment of two ways. Either they wallow in self-pity and keen begging for a kind word like a dog for a titbit, or else they constantly nag at their husbands, dinning their grievances into their ears day after day, until it is to wonder whatever that they fail on deaf ears.

Take, for example, the following letter from a wife of seven years standing:

"During our courtship my husband was always very attentive and kind, everything, in fact, that a man should be. Since we've been married, however, he tells me that I should take all those things for granted, and just be thankful he gives me a home and the necessities of life.

In a Quandary

"But I can't get along with just that, and I get so lonely sometimes that I just don't know what to do. I'm not the kind to go out and find male companionship elsewhere, for I love my husband, but he never gives me a kind word, or appreciates anything I do. In fact, according to him, everything I do is wrong, and he is always running me down. Once I asked him to teach me to drive and he said: 'No woman can drive.' He'll never go out with me and tells me to go alone if I want to go out. If I get some new clothes, he says, 'What are you wearing that old rag for?' Yet he makes it a point to say nice things about her other women look. He never even offers me a chair, or helps me carry packages, and he is always saying mean little things that hurt me. I try my best to forget, but sometimes it is just too much to bear.

"Sometimes he goes upstairs and lies down on the bed and listens to romantic music on the radio. If I come up and sit by him, he turns it off and goes downstairs. Every time I sit near him or caress him, he just brushes me away and says not to bother him because he's too tired. He has even gone so far as to tell me I have no sex appeal.

"We have two little girls. I care for them and keep the house very well. Our home is always clean, and meals are always on time, but he never speaks a word of appreciation. Maybe I have too many ideals about marriage, or maybe men just naturally act like this after marriage. Am I right in thinking marriage should be a continuous courtship?"

Needs Gumption,

Now here is a woman who, to my mind, quite obviously needs a good-sized injection of that gumption I was talking about. She is going around loaded down with a burden of self-pity which is to get some expression of appreciation or affection out of her husband by throwing herself and all she does for her family before his eyes every chance she gets.

Because I say these things, it does not mean that I think her husband is not at fault. On the contrary, he seems to me like a selfish, inconsiderate, mannerless boor, and cold as a dead fish into the bargain. He is certainly nothing I would like to have sitting around my house listening to romantic music, nor would the idea of going to sit by him while he does so have any appeal to me. Nevertheless the man hurt have at last, since he was able to persuade a woman to marry him, and possibly that something is merely lying in a coma somewhere inside him and can be breathed into again if the proper restorative measures are applied.

No "Coolishness Courtship"

What I would consider the proper restorative measure, would be for this wife to find in herself enough "git up and git" to make herself into a more attractive and interesting person. For she will never be able to get her husband's attention by pleading for it. She will get it only when she is so appealing that he wants to give it to her. It's a rare marriage that's a "continuous courtship" anyhow, but certainly never, if the wife isn't all she was as a sweetheart.

I don't deny for a moment that it is not only hurting but maddening when a husband makes cracks about his wife's clothes while admiring the appearance of other women, and when he belittles everything she does. But he will never change his approach because she lets him see plainly that she is badly upset by it. The only thing for her to do, therefore, is to try and ignore any such remarks and put all her attention on the business of developing her personality.

If she will, as I have suggested, find that so-essential gumption, she can have a very good time making herself over. There are many good correspondence courses today by which a woman can do herself over in looks, in the way she dresses and in developing those intangibles which constitute charm. If she does not know where she can get any of these, she can write to me again, giving me her name and address, and I will tell her. She will need also, to make more friends, and to take more interest in sharing all sorts of community activities with them. In other words, she will have to become a dynamic and purposeful woman who radiates the charm that always comes with an active interest in people and things. That, I will wager, is the sort of woman who will make her husband sit up and take astonished notice. Undoubtedly, he has become accustomed to having a wife who is sorry for herself and feels herself ill-used, who reproaches him by looks, manner and words; who makes it quite plain that she is unhappy and that it is all his fault.

If, without saying a word to her husband of what she is doing, she lays herself out the kind of program I have suggested, and stops all calling upon him for attention, appreciation and affection, I believe she will have a very good chance of eventually getting all three of these things.

Readers' Saturday Column

By Mary Moore

QUESTION!

Would you be so kind as to help me with my cooking problems? I am moving to northwest Canada where food is expensive there is just powdered milk, probably powdered eggs, fresh meat though, canned goods and some frozen foods, but I have not been able to find out exact details. My problem is to eat as inexpensively as possible on my budget of $13.50 per week for two adults and one year old baby, and yet get all essential food values. So— (1) Can powdered milk be whipped? If so, how? (2) Can you give me some casserole dishes that utilize canned goods? (3) My baby is eating canned strained baby food. How can I prepare the meat for her myself and would it be less expensive but just as valuable? She refuses eggs, and alas, lumpy food. (4) Can you give me any hints on buying food that will make my shopping more economical? (5) Can you give me some easy-to-prepare company dishes that is cans that can be fried and put away and brought out in an emergency to make an attractive meal? I have a pressure canner and will have the use of an electric refrigerator. . . could you give me a few desserts for entertaining?—Margaret G.

ANSWER:

I think I have a capital idea for you. I am mailing to you a copy of a column published on July 23 which contains a letter from a girl who is wife of an airman stationed in Whitehorse Yukon and who gives a vivid picture of her experiences there with shopping incidents included. I hope Y.K. sees your letter and will send me her address again. Who knows? You might turn out to be neighbors.

Yes powdered milk may be whipped. Put 1-2 cup water in bowl, add 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1-2 cup skim milk powder. Beat with rotary beater (or until thick (about 10 minutes), then add 2 tablespoons sugar and 1-4 teaspoon vanilla. The two following meat dishes are current favorites with me for emergency meals.

CORNED BEEF HASH

(Serves six.)

Two cups (1-16-oz. tin) corned beef (or leftover ground roast beef), 2 cups cold or hot boiled potatoes chopped, 1-3 cup milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, dash of Worcestershire Sauce, 1 tablespoon onion juice, 1-2 cup finely chopped onion, 2 tablespoons butter or fat. (Chopped parsley or green or red pepper or pimento are good additions.) Melt fat in frying pan. Mix all other ingredients but milk. Spread evenly over fat and fry slowly over low heat until it is well-browned underneath, adding milk slowly over surface about halfway through. It requires about 30 or 40 minutes over very low heat. Fold over, as you would an omelet on hot platter. Garnish attractively.

SALMON CASSEROLE

(Serves four.)

Flake canned salmon and measure 2 cups. Add a little salt, generous amounts of pepper and freshly grated nutmeg. Place in greased baking dish. Pour over 1 can condensed mushroom or tomato soup. Cover top with buttered breadcrumbs. You may add border of mashed potatoes if desired. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. until top is golden and dish is bubbling.

You can make your own pureed vegetables and meats for the baby without losing nourishment if you steam the vegetables and meat and puree and serve them at once. It is exposure to air that injures vitamin content. I am sending you the copies of the three columns I printed recently in answer to a reader who had to manage on $20 per week for four. Watch this column for company desserts.

QUESTION:

. . . enjoy the column immensely . . . how does one make good cream cheese in winter. . . Mrs. W. H. Britannia Heights.

ANSWER:

I am not sure but I think you want directions for cottage cheese with which cream is mixed afterwards. If so here they are:

HOMEMADE COTTAGE CHEESE

Allow milk to sour in a covered jar in a warm, not hot, place until the whey separates from the curd. Drain the curd in a bag made of crash towelling until it is firm to the touch. Place it on ice for several hours. Remove from bag into bowl. Beat with wire whisk until it is smooth and creamy. Beat into it enough table or heavy cream to make it of consistency you prefer. Of course you know that chopped chives or ripe olives are a delicious addition, and that it is an excellent filling for fresh tomatoes.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Her son killed in Korea. . . should she send Christmas cards this year?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My only son was "killed in action" (what terribly devastating words these are) in Korea last August, and I would like to know if you think I should send Christmas cards this year. (I am a widow.) I am so sad and lonely that I certainly don't feel like I expect to receive Christmas cards from me, I will . . . of course send them.—Mary M. . . .

I most earnestly wish, my dear lady, that I could capture just the right words to answer your heart-touching question. But really you yourself have answered your own question by your deeply appealing and so-understandable words, "I certainly don't feel like sending Christmas cards this year." If your heart and spirit are too sorrowful, too heavy-laden, for you to take on such a full-of-memories responsibility, I advise that you should not even consider adding this burden of sending Christmas cards to the burden you are already carrying in your heart. Don't attempt this task if you feel it will be too wearying. Your friends, with the gentle understanding I am sure they have, could not possibly expect you to send them cards this year.

However, you may decide that the sacred meaning of Christmas, a blessed Son to another Mary, will be a particularly significant urge for you to send a few words of devoted greeting to your friends, gently to show them that you can courageously forget your own unhappiness in wishing happiness for them. Perhaps to write, either on plain, white cards or on religious cards, "I am thinking of you with loving devotion."

(May I please tell you that I most humbly bow my head and my heart in sympathy to you in your sorrow.)

I have a very personal understanding of your sorrow.) The green-le-be keeps the wedding ring until the ceremony.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:—I am going with my fiance to select my wedding ring soon, before he leaves on a business trip. His will be away for two weeks, then in a month after his return we are to be married. After I have selected the ring, should I take it to keep until the wedding, or should he keep it?—Charlotte L.

Your fiance should keep it. After you have selected it, you do not (or at least you should not) see it again until the wedding. On the wedding day, just before the bridegroom and his best man leave for the church, he gives the ring to the best man, who hands it to him at the proper time in the ceremony.)

County Council Recommends Steel Tenders be Called For Erection of Glen Miller Bridge

Authorization to call tenders for the supply and erection of steel for the proposed new bridge over the Trent River at Glen Miller, three miles north of Trenton, was given at the closing session of Hastings county council Friday.

Earlier the roads and bridges committee had received sealed tenders for the bridge. Larry Langford, county engineer, said firm prices could be secured now for the steel and if at the January session it was decided not to proceed the order could be cancelled.

Absolutely Necessary

A question of whether it was absolutely necessary for the present structure to be replaced and a new bridge built was asked by Reeve Charles Bullard of Tudor. "Could not the bridge be strengthened in some way?" he asked. Reeve Bullard was not able over this bridge.

Road Engineer Langlois admitted this was a sensible question but pointed out this had been explored and strengthening of the structure would not prove feasible. He said that such type of work would have been done when construction was first talked of three years ago.

Mr. Langlois said the design for the bridge called for the erection of two of the present piers from the old bridge and these would have to be set further out to make for a better approach.

Would Aggravate Traffic

Reeve Russell West of Stirling wanted to be assured that erection of the proposed four-lane highway would not aggravate the traffic problem over the Glen Miller bridge. He said the four-lane highway would tend to aggravate traffic as the new highway bridge would be used by more traffic.

There was considerable discussion about the section of the bridge owned by the department of transport and Mr. Langlois said assurance to replace this structure with a new one to match the proposed county bridge. It was pointed out the department would own the traffic over the bridge as mill workers for the past year lived across the river and residents of Belleville used the bridge as a shortcut to Belleville.

Said Bridge Dangerous

He said the bridge was dangerous, and claimed one life last could exist the county more than $20,000 or the county's share of the bridge cost.

Reeve Heath said the old bridge was a weak structure and needed replacing. "It would cost considerable but it is necessary," he said. "Why wait until something happens let's lock the door before the horse is stolen."

To a question by Reeve Bullard, Mr. Langlois said plans called for a bridge similar in structure and appearance to the O'Brien's Bridge over the Bay of Quinte at Picton. The load would be carried on steel girders and there would be no truss work over the bridge floor.

Cost of the bridge is estimated at approximately $87,000 with the county's share to range between $18,000 and $19,000. These estimates only, stressed Mr. Langlois.

Members Line Up

Councillors lined up solidly south against the strip on a by-law allowing the township of Tudor to withdraw from paying county road rate. This was asked by Reeve J. Spracklett who pointed out there were no county roads within his municipality.

When a vote was called on the by-law the count was a tie and as discussion started as to whether or not chairman of the committee of a whole was allowed to vote, Reeve Spracklett asked to have the matter laid over until the January session. The motion was carried.

Mr. Spracklett said it would assist his municipality greatly if it were relieved of county road rates. This amount could then be added to their road budget and they would receive 70 per cent subsidy from the province. At the present time the township had $8 miles of road and a road budget of only slightly over $8,000. He claimed they found they could not keep their roads in shape. Relief from county rates would give them more money to provincial subsidy.

Had Sympathy For Township

Reeve Bradley from Tudor started discussion on the matter. He said he had every sympathy for Sidney and Cashill but asked what would become of the money if the request if municipalities were allowed to drop out. Reeve Earl Sager of Marmora thought they should take this opinion. Both men said their townships also would be better off if they could withdraw from the county road system.

Some sort of revision of the county road system was suggested by Mr. Hunt and Reeve Bond of Rednor also felt this idea may have some merit.

Reeve T. Tryon of Bancroft argued that Tudor's request was not setting any precedent in council as several of the northern municipalities had also requested to withdraw. "Tudor is justified," he said. "Conditions are unequalities in the north have been relieved."

Reeve Jack Kincaid said councillors were losing sight of the fact that whether or not a county road ran through a municipality, its ratepayers used county roads.

Reeve Rollins of Marmora supported Mr. Spracklett. "It is a fallacy to suggest that ratepayers of Tudor," he said. "By being relieved of the county rate they can add this money to its road budget and get a larger grant from the province."

Relative Ability Discussed

Relative ability to pay taxes by residents of the north and of those in the south came up for discussion. Reeve Bullard suggested pointing out that in the north there had been a crop failure and owing to the amount of Crown land in the north supported by Reeve Davis who said in some townships only one lot in ten was under crop.

Just this particular item made seven more townships in favor of the township, according to Mr. Spracklett. He pointed out that Marmora had one of the largest timbering operations on this continent, employing many lumbermen use our roads to haul their timber. "We do not get a cent back in taxes," he said.

To make it worse the heavy trucks of the lumbermen damage and had not the money to repair them. He claimed the northern section had that 15 miles of county road had been thrown back on the township of No. 36 Elzevir after they were completed. They could not close a mile of this road and they lacked money to keep it in repair.

Wellmeton Reeve Disagrees

Reeve Mitchell referred to the fact that in the Coe Hill road the county had 15 miles of road thrown back on the township. "If one municipality in the north is allowed to withdraw from the county road system, all in the north should go off," he said.

"I disagree," Reeve Rollins returned. "The road to which Wellmeton refers is not a road between two highways. It carries a lot of traffic and costs more to maintain than a township road. It was pointed out that it had cost the county over $9,000 to maintain the Coe Hill road this year. Reeve Rollins objected to the fact that attention had been drawn to the Coe Hill road when costs on other county roads were higher. "Township roads have similar costs on all roads," he asked.

Would Require More Staff

It was explained that due to the bookkeeping system required by the highways department it was impossible to keep costs separate for each road. To do so would require double the office staff.

Warden Grills said he sympathized with Tudor, but pointed out that "after all we are a county-wide county," and as such all should take part in the road tax. He pointed out that the Foxboro-Madoc road was an expensive piece of highway to maintain and felt no more townships should be detached from the county road system until this road was taken over by the province.

Councillors turned down the usual $75 snow removal grants for five of the northern townships. Here again the provincial subsidy question was referred to the discussion. It was pointed out that when this grant was given the township was compelled to collect road subsidy, therefore, the full $75 was being spent with no subsidy from the province.

Could Get Subsidy

It was pointed out that if the township of Dummer was included in extra $75 for snow removal in their road budgets they would get the provincial subsidy on the expenditure.

Fifteen dollar grants to the district W.I. organizations in East, West and North Hastings received final approval as did $100 grants to the South Hastings Educational Association and to a similar organization in North Hastings. A request from Tudor to pay a similar amount to Centre Hastings was withdrawn when it was learned the organization had not been active this year.

Cards' Boss Gets 'Foot in Door' For TV Share

By JOE REICHLER

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Fred Saigh, baseball's battling baron, finally has broken through in his efforts to get a piece of television receipts from other ball parks.

The president of St. Louis Cardinals, unwearying in his demand that the visiting club be cut into all TV profit, got a "foot in the door" Friday when he reached an agreement with Chicago Cubs, whereby St. Louis will share in the television money the latter gains when they play at Chicago's Wrigley Field.

The Cubs also came to a reciprocal agreement with Cincinnati Reds in which the Reds and Cubs will receive a visitor's share of the receipts in their respective parks. Similar reciprocal agreements were concluded but President Gabe Paul of the Cincinnati baseball club will reach an agreement with all clubs.

Saigh was not hopeful of such an agreement with the other clubs, but the fact that the Cubs and Cincinnati Reds have taken the first step may have some merit.

Reeve T. Tryon of Bancroft argued that Tudor's request was not setting any precedent in council as several of the northern municipalities had also requested to withdraw. "Tudor is justified," he said. "Conditions are unequalities in the north have been relieved."

Reeve Jack Kincaid said councillors were losing sight of the fact that whether or not a county road ran through a municipality, its ratepayers used county roads.

Judge Anderson, S.E. Goodwin To Head Campaign for New Service Centre for The Blind

The Hastings County Advisory Board of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind announced today that early in the new year it will carry on a campaign for funds to build, associated with similar boards in five other counties, a Service Centre which will serve the blind of these, six counties. The counties included are those from Hastings on the west to Grenville on the east including Prince Edward. The building will be in Kingston, which is central both geographically and as related to the population density.

Separate organizations will be set up for the campaign in the various municipalities within the county and for the rural areas. In Belleville the campaign committee will be Judge J. C. Anderson and the chairman, S. E. Goodwin, manager of the Bank of Montreal.

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind through its local boards and its field secretaries, who themselves visited the blind, provides many services for the registered blind. One of these is the important one of the prevention of blindness, the delivery and encouragement of eyesight where, through lack of care or finances, this has been neglected. Hastings provides the supplementary assistance in the purchasing of glasses, medicine and dental care for the needy blind, radios, talking books and many other comforts for those who otherwise would be without them.

The Ontario government maintains an extensive program for the Blind and blind adults receive the Federal-Provincial blind pension which is $70 per month per person. This is subject to a means test. However, there is no government assistance for the rehabilitation and adjustment of those who become blind after they pass school age. This service is provided by the C.N.I.B. When an adult becomes blind the home teacher, a blind worker, goes to the home and instructs the blind person first how to do the simple things involved in living with himself or herself; she teaches them braille, typing, reading and men and women how to read and write braille and various handicrafts.

Training Will Improve

To go about to the homes of the blind of six counties one teacher cannot possibly do justice with any one person. The efficiency of the training will be much improved when it is possible to carry on this training at a central point in Kingston.

Moreover, where a person is newly blind there is a family tendency to be over sympathetic and to treat him as an invalid. Where the initial training is given away from home, and with other blind persons, the adjustment towards becoming again a useful and independent individual is much more readily achieved.

In almost every community there are blind persons who are not able to support themselves and whose relatives are unable or unwilling to keep them in comfort and self respect. This applies particularly to the aged blind. Our homes are for the most excellent though they are, are not designed to care for blind persons. Provision for these folk will be made in the proposed building.

Buildings Operation

Buildings of this type are now operating with gratifying success in St. Catharines, Windsor, Kitchener and Ottawa. The proposed building in Kingston will be designed, like those mentioned, to provide the maximum comfort and safety for blind persons. It will contain rooms for teaching the newly-blind and all blind persons Braille, typing, handicrafts, etc. There will be thirty bedrooms where the newly blind may find comfortable living and where blind trainees from the whole county may live while receiving training. There will be recreational facilities adapted for the blind also. The field secretary, Mr. F. J. Timmins, who has been stationed in Ottawa, will live in Kingston, will have an office in the building.

All the work carried on by the C.N.I.B. is made possible by the generosity of the Canadian citizens. The work of the Institute is recognized throughout the world as being of the highest calibre. A great deal of this progress is due to the untiring efforts of Col. E. A. Baker, the managing director, who has been with the First World War. Officers of the institute, themselves blind, have been loaned to other countries to set up similar work. Brigadier-General Critchell, supervisor of field services, is going to Egypt for a year to help the blind of the Egyptian government in an advisory capacity.

In Hastings County there are 132 registered blind persons, forty of these are residents of Belleville. The Hastings County Advisory Board consists of ten members with Mr. Geo. Wishart as chairman and Mrs. A. D. Parker as secretary. Other local members of the board are: A. D. Archibald, K.C., M.P., Mrs. J. Hale, Miss Myrtle Peck, Miss Elinor Rollin, Harry Rollins, Mrs. M. C. Ward, Mrs. Geo. Wishart, Mrs. C. G. Wright.

Further details regarding the proposed building, the site which has been tentatively acquired, the personnel of the campaign committee, the fund objective and the time of the campaign will be given at an early date.

Awaits Appeal On Prison Term Buys Jail Farm -

HAZELHURST, Miss. (AP) Armon Whittington won't have to serve 90 days at the Copiah county jail farm after all.

He bought the place at auction.

Whittington, sentenced to 90 days on the farm on a charge of contributing to the delinquency Mizzlaspp, appealed the conviction and sentence. Before his appeal came up the county governors decided to sell the farm at auction. Whittington was the high bidder Thursday.

Delegates and observers sat in the main body of the hall. Countries were arranged alphabetically with Canada appearing in between Burma and Chile. It was a good place to be sitting as the scroll of the Chilean spoke French and had an excellent knowledge of English was captivated and sensible people.

An interesting feature was a set of earphones so that you could follow the discussion through a translator. They were operating intensively translated the speaking very much into five or six languages. There were four official languages. English, Spanish, French and Russian. But it soon became obvious that English was the most practical language for communication. Even the Indian delegates were forced to speak it to understand each other. I am told that French was the official language of diplomacy and usage at the International Court of Justice at The Hague, but as it was at the Vienna Congress. But in the Pacific, French is spoken only in Viet Nam. Elsewhere English is the language of international affairs.

Anyone who wanted to speak had to go up on the stage in front of a battery of microphones. A light-button system told the translators if they were speaking too loud or too fast.

Martyrdom by Camera

An army of reporters and still cameramen was on hand. We were constantly in the glare of flashlights. You would think you were in Hollywood. Each speaker was photographed immediately from every angle. Each delegation had several photographers from the movie men. They watched you all the time, waiting to see if you picked your nose or [illegible] of the ordinary, like sneezing or [illegible]. If I did, they would [illegible] your picture in the act, without any warning.

The hall was decorated with masses of flowers, especially gladioli, which gave off perfume. Between sessions, tea and cakes were served. The flowers were just outside the assembly hall. A peace congress is easy to take in stride. Delegates are fed to their hearts content.

Even a Trumpet

Right from the back of the hall, half-hidden by a wall, a little trumpet was blown to call for the night moment to intervene. This happened twice a day. Each morning and afternoon session or another of the delegates demonstrated. Each session had friendship for a neighbor. One day Russia gave flowers to Peace and presents to North Korea. Tomorrow, India and Pakistan might exchange presents and their soldiers were meeting in neutral territory in Korea [illegible]. Another day, it might be the turn of the Americans to embrace the Chinese and then Russia and China might be in each other's arms.

This may all sound pretty ludicrous in the telling, but in the atmosphere of Peace, the exchange of presents and the friendly greetings had a particular significance. Orientals are mystics. For them, such outward signs have the force of a liturgy.

I particularly remember the hysteria which filled the hall the day India and Pakistan advanced to the sound of the trumpet to sign a joint declaration on the Korean situation. The text of the declaration was worthless, except that it showed that the will of both parties to find a peaceful solution to the Kashmir problem. The applause was deafening, pressing from—they're sharp."

With an appreciative grin, Gen. Eisenhower left it all in, stopping to chat with front-rank soldiers.

Thursday the general had an honor guard in which Canada was represented by five gunners of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, three members of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and two of the Royal 22nd Regiment. Later the same day the general met two Canadians in a field hospital.

SEOUL (AP) — The U.S. Fifth Air Force reported tonight that Allied planes and anti-aircraft fire Friday night "engaged and repelled the largest enemy night air attack of the Korean war."

The air force reported that Allied radar, in a three-hour period picked up a total of 21 "hostile aircraft" roaring toward Seoul beginning at 7:56 p. m. school an hour before Republican-elect Eisenhower left Korea.

An Air Force spokesman said "security prevents any information being released on the planes."

THIRD IN ROW!

The hockey news was good last night, from a Belleville point of view. Down Kingston way the sporting Glen Rays senior "B" crew lined up their third victory in a row when they downed the powerful Kingston Goodyears by a 5-2 score. Here in Belleville the Hawks imitated the performance of their "big brothers" last Friday night when they defeated the Lindsay Warriors 5-3 in a rip-roaring, rugged Senior "B" battle.

It would seem, contrary to some satirists, that the Glens are not "boners" after all. Any team that can go into Kingston and tack a 5-2 defeat on the Goodyears of that village after holding them scoreless for two periods has something besides uniforms and skates.

They had the Goodies on the short end of a 1-0 score going into the third period. Both teams scored a brace in the last heat but the damage was done and the Goodies re-coaled poks any more past Patrol. Incidentally we are informed Master Tony objects to visiting players parking on his doorstep, or even coming close. There's no welcome on the mat and Tony chalked up a few minutes in penalties when he objected too strenuously to doorstep callers.

The victory hoists the Glens to a top-slot tie with Kingston in the eastern division of the group and puts them in a three-way second-place tie in the overall standings. They have ten points along with Oshawa and Kingston. Stouffville is out on top with thirteen points while Orillia Terriers' win over the Petes this week gives them third place with seven points while the Petes are in the cellar with six.

JUNIORS, TOO!

If the Glen Boys had any idea they had a monopoly on the rough, rugged type of hockey, it was somewhat rudely dispelled here last night while the high-flying Hawks mix-mastered with the speedy but tough Lindsay Warriors.

It was a reasonable facsimile of that rough-backslinging tilt that we had last week by the Glens and the Kingston Goodyears with the Hawks showing, too, that they can hand it out as well as take it. Referee Scrutton dished out nine-team penalties, could have handed out more but had the chip-on-shoulder ice gladiators under control at all times. The game threatened to break out into warfare in the third when ten sinners did time.

The only serious flare-up came when Ron Halsted, speedy Hawk winger, and one of the best players on the ice, suddenly tangled with Warrior Graham. Gloves were ripped off and the boys slung fists. Halsted was tabbed with a major and misconduct and Graham drew a major.

Irate fans tossed papers on the ice in a somewhat foolish gesture and the game was stopped to allow the debris to be cleared. It happened again and the referee warned the fans through the P.A. system that a repetition would mean forfeiture of the game to Lindsay.

It could have been a good hockey game as was evidenced in the second period when both teams elected to play the puck. But too many penalties spoiled it for those who like their hockey the way it should be played. Then again, it was a tasty tidbit for the fans who love the game played in a rough, ruzzed, drag-em-out style for that is what it was in the first and third periods.

It was the fifth victory of the season for the Hawks as against two defeats, and they hung on to the top perch of the group. At time of writing the Peterborough-Kingston junior game score had not been received, but regardless of the result the Hawks are two points in the lead.

NEW SYSTEM!

There's been a shake-up in the point system in the junior "B" group of the district, one that is far more satisfactory than the one agreed upon at the meeting held here a few weeks ago following the entry of the Oshawa and Cobourg teams to the charmed circle.

O.H.A. vice-prexy Frank Buckland, after reviewing the situation, decided that the last round of home-and-home games between Peterborough, Kingston, Lindsay, Belleville and Oshawa and Cobourg will be "two-point" games. The round starts with the Peterborough-Oshawa game on January 12th, according to this department's schedule.

So those of you who are keeping game scores with your schedules can score all games between the six teams as two-pointers up to the Peterborough-Oshawa game on January 12.

• • •

Secretary Dick Beare, of the Hockey Association, here raised the point with Mr. Buckland, and got some prompt action. Buckland had the revision ready within a short time and letters explaining the new point-scoring system will probably be in the mail today.

T.V.L. MEETING

The Trent Valley Hockey League executive goes into conclave tomorrow afternoon at the Bata Shoe Company's lounge. The Valley moguls will discuss rules, regulations, and likely draw up the schedule. Twelve teams will compete for the Thomas Bata trophy this season.

PRESENT TROPHY!

The Men's Commercial Bowling League was the recipient of a handsome trophy last night. It is the Carlings-McNab Trophy, emblematic of the league championship. Jack (Chappeau Rough) McNab, company representative, presented the beautiful $100 silverware to "Sugar" Martin, league prexy, who expressed the grateful appreciation of the loop. The contribution to the league in particular and bowling in general is but another evidence of the Carling Breweries interest in clean, wholesome sport.

Fight Proposed for Next June Will be 3rd for Middleweights; Promoters Differ Over Locale

By MURAY ROSE

NEW YORK (AP)—Middleweight champion Ray Robinson says he wants to fight Britain's Randy Turpin for the third time next June and then retire. If Sugar Ray signs for the rubber match quickly nearly everyone will be happy including the New York state athletic commission.

The only unhappy souls will be either British promoter Jack Solomons or Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club. Both want the lucrative fight. Solomons for London or Dublin, Norris for New York.

Under Contract

Norris says he has Robinson under contract. Solomons has the papers with Turpin. There are going to be some interesting confabs before the match is made.

Although George Gainford, Robinson's manager, says the fight will be held under Solomons' promotion overseas and Solomons agreed wholeheartedly, the IBC raised an objection.

"We have a contract with Robinson," said Harry Markson, managing director of the IBC, "and we object any proposition Solomons makes."

Rounds Agreement

The state commission demands a "binding agreement" before it will restore Robinson's title recognition. The commission started the fuss over Sugar Ray's future when it yanked Robinson's title Friday because he hadn't signed for a title defence within the required six-month period plus an extension granted him. New York's action wasn't followed by the National Boxing Association which includes all states but New York.

In London, Solomons said he had received a cable from Gainford which read: "This confirms our conversation—Robinson to defend his title against Turpin on date agreed."

Solomons said the date would be June 9, 1953.

Intercounty Goes 'Collegiate' Will Use 'Prof's'

GALT (CP) — The Intercounty Baseball Association executive for 1953 decided to spend $650 to increase the baseball knowledge of minor league players.

The executive at a meeting Friday night suggested that one or two former ball players be hired for the purpose in each area. An alternate suggestion was that an outside tutor be hired at a flat salary for the summer. His services would be available for certain periods in each centre.

The umpires committee will be made up of Otto Manske, league president; Jack Blakney, secretary; Tim Turow, vice-president, and Tom Parker, treasurer. Manske and Blakney will attend a meeting of the senior clubs in Brantford Sunday.

Stampeders Win Over Saskatoon

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Calgary Stampeders tightened their hold on third place in the Western Hockey League by defeating the league-leading Saskatoon Quakers 8-4.

In other Friday night games, Victoria Cougars edged New Westminster Royals 5-3 and Vancouver Canucks tied Seattle Bombers 3-3.

Roy Kelly and Pat Lundy each tallied twice for the Stamps. Sid Finney, George Agar, Jim Wilkie and Bill Shvetz added singletons. George Sentick counted two for Saskatoon and Jack McLeod and John Chad fired one apiece.

Ed Mazur and Ivan Irwin paced the Cougars to their fourth straight home-ice victory with two goals each. Doug Anderson notched the other. Ollie Darobey, Pete Durban and Bob Bergeron counted for the Royals.

George Pargeter and Rudy Filion were the Seattle snipers. Bill Wylie and Walt Atanas tallied for Vancouver.

Penniston Named Cornwall Coach

CORNWALL (CP) — Don Penniston, former coach of Shawinigan Falls Cataracts of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, has been appointed coach of the Cornwall Colts of the Eastern Canada Hockey League.

Colt manager Ray Miron said Penniston will replace Ray Mahaffy, all who will be retained as a player.

Penniston, a former coach of Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League, coached the old Cornwall Flyers from 1937 to 1940.

Toronto Leafs Buy Players From Browns

TORONTO (CP) — Jack Kent Cooke, owner of the Toronto Maple Leafs baseball club, has purchased three players from St. Louis Browns of the American League for $32,500.

Cooke announced the purchase Friday after returning from Phoenix, Ariz.

The players are outfielder Cliff Mapes and pitchers Bobby Hogue and Stubby Overmire. Mapes was a .250 hitter with the Browns last year and Cooke predicted he will be in the International League's top five next season. He cost $15,000.

Hogue, whose price tag was $10,000, is a New York Yankee alumnus who had a 2-1 record as a relief pitcher for the Bayms last year. Overmire cost $7,500. He was released here last season but was called after the Leafs lost out in the playoffs.

"Toots" (the Ole Hot Stover) Holway had his bowling e70 literal dead on the target at last night's Major "A" League session at the Bowl-O-Drome. He racked up the highest triple (911) and the highest single (346) of the long season thus far, aiding his team, Upper Canada News, (3323) to a seven-point win over Lawn Bowlers (3229).

In other games Hardwick Printing (3303) and G. H. Wood's (3166) were 5-2 winners over Belleville Golf (3106) and CNR Beavers (3170) edged Schwab's (3369) in a 4-3 battle.

Hardwick Printing and G. H. Wood's share the league's top slot with 14 points in order follow Chiselers 22, Schwab's 22, Belleville Golf 11, C. N. R. 10, Upper Canada News 9 and Lawn Bowlers 7.

Other high scores were: Ted Greenfield 858 (326), Al Adams 786 (330), Dave Phelps 715, Cec. Hardwick 696, Bill Rawson 692, Joe Kirkwood 683, Art Croft 671, Sam Halbert 669, Frank Bailey 665, Wally Dingman 661, Bellville Lundeen 659 and George Bellis 652.

Football Star Clings to Life

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—In the Medical College of Virginia Hospital they keep a constant vigil at the bedside of Charles Lawson.

Lawson, 22, is a pathetic reminder of the 1953 football season. For the last 25 days he has lain in a coma in his darkened room. A tackle for Randolph-Macon college, Lawson collided head-on with a teammate, Ned Silles, during a game with Johns Hopkins Nov. 1 and received a severe brain injury.

Two operations have been performed to ease the pressure of a blood clot out of reach of the surgeon's knife. To neither operation Lawson responded.

For the last 25 days he has lain than wait. Long ago they gave up medical hope for his recovery. But he hangs on to life with fierce tenacity.

Glen Roys Crush Kingston Goodyears; Black Hawks Win Over Lindsay

Retain Hold On First Place With Bang-up 8-2 Victory In Penalty-Riddled Junior Game

By GEO. M. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

In a swashbuckling battle that threatened open warfare, the Black Hawks retained their grip on the top spot in the junior group here last night defeating the Lindsay Warriors by an 8-2 score.

It was chip-shoulder hockey especially in the first and third periods. Referee Stan Scrutton dished out 19 penalties including two majors and a misconduct but at this time threatened to forfeit the game to the Warriors if excellent hand handed on littering the ice with projectiles.

The only blow-off came in the third period when Ron Halsted fired Hawks winger cane to blows with Gerald Graham of the Warriors. Both drew majors for fighting and Halsted was tabbed with a misconduct after he skated to the penalty box.

The teams:

Lindsay: Goal, R. Truax; defence, O'Neill, McGill; centre, Graham; wings, Burns, Gibson; subs, Williams, Hutton, Packer.

G. Teal, R. Teal, Cochrane, A. Truax.

Belleville: Goal, Barclay; defence, Stocco, Green; centre, Jones; wings, Therrien, Gilmour; subs, Perrini, Halstead, Jacklin, Hall, Hamilton, Casey, Goyne, Whalen, Green.

Referee: Stan Scrutton, Kingston. Timesman, Bill Hotson, Belleville.

Sell Out, Quit Is Problem Of Cleveland Boss

CLEVELAND (AP)—The shy, nervous insurance executive who replaced Dante Lavelli to play three years ago as boss of Cleveland Indians may have had enough of the baseball job he once thought would be fun for life.

Ellis Ryan, 48, wrestled today with the problem of whether to sell out and quit as Tribe president or to fight to retain the leadership.

The showdown with those who have questioned his judgment in once found a club will come soon after his arrival from Phoenix, Ariz., today. It may be a meeting of 12 directors controlling the $4,000,000-a-year baseball corporation.

Ryan is said to own about 500 of the Cleveland Baseball Corporation's 10,000 shares stock. In addition to his own stock, for which he reportedly would have received in $300,000 offer, Ryan has support of some other holders. He has options on about 1,000 shares, a source about as much backing.

General Manager Hank Greenberg, whose contract at an estimated $45,000-a-year has two years to go, owns no club stock, but is caught in the middle of the stiff. He is said to have been told he can have asked recently for authority to be general manager as well as president. Veeck operated without a general manager, although Greenberg is his staff as a lieutenant with a vice-presidency.

Greenberg and Ryan never have freckled but it is known they fail to see eye-to-eye on how the club should be operated.

Rangers, Leafs Patch Teams For Tonight's N. H. L. Battles

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

What New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs make out of tonight's National Hockey League game in Maple Leaf Gardens should help defray some of the medical expenses the two teams have piled up this season.

Both clubs will tie a patched-up squad. The Rangers, however, have most of their men out of sick bay, with the exception of Herb Dickenson, off with an eye injury. Jack Stoddart is a doubtful starter.

Max Bentley and Howie Meeker may be fit for Leaf duty. Conn Smythe brought up Parker MacDonald from the junior Toronto Marlboros Thursday night as a replacement but the younger didn't play.

Both Need Win

Both managers could stand a win. Of 23 games played, they've won only three and tied six. The Leafs hope to win again as they did in Montreal Thursday night. A win, plus a loss by Boston at Montreal, would give Toronto a comfortable seat in third position.

But Boston had this week. Thursday night they trimmed the league-leading Chicago Black Hawks 5-1 and Montreal has gone seven games without a win. The loss of Elmer Lach last week with a fractured thumb has not helped. It was whispered around Montreal that Frank Selke plans to add Skippy Burchell, now with Montreal Royals of the Quebec Senior League, and later perhaps also Jean Beliveau, Quebec Aces strong-man, to the line-up.

Frank Selke, Laurent will be off the defence line tonight. His replacement will be Bud MacPherson.

The other teams are idle. Sunday Toronto meets Montreal Canadiens, Montreal faces New York and Boston is at Detroit.

Sports Council Urges Federal Govt. To Establish Student Coach School

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government will be asked to give a shot in the arm to Canadian participation in international track and field events through a national coaching school.

The Canadian Advisory Sports Council, closing out a two-day meeting Friday, passed a resolution urging the government to establish a "pilot" school next summer to train student coaches from across Canada in track and field.

If the school proves itself, similar schools might be established for other sports.

The resolution was one of the main steps taken by the CASC formed two years ago to encourage sports interest and participation and act as a liaison between all sports governing bodies in Canada and government.

The request will go before the National Council on Physical Fitness here Monday. This body may recommend to the federal government that it support the scheme.

The idea came up at the meeting last month of the Amateur Athletic Association of Canada, which at that time authorized its British Columbia branch to go ahead with plans for a school.

The council Friday agreed to limit its recommendations to broad principles, after opposition arose to suggestions that they should select candidates for the school.

Other resolutions the council urged:

1. Expansion of competition on local level.

2. Encouragement of provincial sport championships.

3. Federal aid for all international competitions, not just the Olympics and British Empire games.

4. That the federal health and welfare department instead of the finance department handle grants for Olympic and British Empire games competition.

Tiger Jones 4-1 Underdog Upsets Bratton

JONES UPSETS BRATTON

NEW YORK (AP)—Ralph (Tiger) Jones, 170-lb. middleweight from Yonkers, N.Y., turned in one of the biggest boxing upsets of the year by hammering out a clean-cut, unanimous 10-round decision over Jimmy Bratton, Chicago, at Madison Square Garden. Jones weighed 165½ to Bratton's 169½.

The "unknown" 24-year-old Negro pounded Bratton all the way for a brisiting battle Friday night.

Three votes, all for Jones, were: Judge Harold Barnes, 8-3; Judge Emil Heller, 9-1, and referee Harry Kessler, 5-3-2. The AP score card had Jones the winner, 8-2.

The well-schooled Jones moved the sturdy Jones squarely into the limelight, and will defend just about ruined Bratton's hopes for a title fight in the near future.

TENNIS RAINED OUT

MELBOURNE (AP)—For the second straight day, rain today washed out play in the Victorian lawn tennis championships.

The all-U.S. final for the women's crown pitting Maureen Connolly against Julie Sampson also was rained out.

Officials announced the matches will be played Monday.

Hapless 'Hams' Have Imposing Record Lose 18th in Row to Chatham Maroons

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Tigers of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League have piled up such an impressive list of woeful statistics that opponents are having trouble finding a parallel.

Friday night Chatham Maroons took the Tabbies 8-5 in Chatham. It was the fifth loss in a row for Hamilton OHA records show no equal to this since 1948, as far back as they go.

Sarnia Sailors moved into a second place tie with Chatham and Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen by taking Kitchener 9-1 in Sarnia. Stratford skidded to Stratford Bedmen into sixth place by outscoring them 12-3.

Waiters Win

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior southern group Sudbury Wolves defeated North Bay Trappers 8-4 to take over third place. In the Porcupine Mines League Abitibi Eskimos took their first of the season from Timmins-Schumacher Flyers 5-3. Hamilton was within one goal of the Maroons until the final period. Joe Carveth scored five for Chatham. George Edwards had two and Paul Stroeon, Guy Celeste and Steve Bick tallied each. Bill Hammond notched two for Hamilton. Stewart got Cord Peebles, Ron Morgan and Jack Drew.

All the damage was done in one period scored in Sarnia. Jim Wilson and Harry O'Connor scored one each for Chatham, Tatter McLeland, Mauno Kauppi and Yacker Flynn split up other Sudbury goals.

MacDonald Gets Four in Marlies Win Over Guelph

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rumor had it that Parker MacDonald of Toronto Marlboros of Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series would be kissed from their games with Guelph Biltmores. The Bills wish he had been.

MacDonald, who was supposed to get a chance with the parent Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, seized four goals as Guelph took a 7-3 lacing at home Friday night.

Barrie Flyers were badly scared by the surprising Windsor Spitfires 5-3 in Barrie before they unleashed an overtime scoring punch to win 11-5. Barrie had a field day dishing out penalties in the third period. Other Marlboros' goals were by Eric Nesterenko, Dc e Reid and Wally Maxwell. The Bakers and Maxwell worked forward Gerry James and defencemen Ted Ingram, Jack Hamilton and Bob Jackson but won handily. Bill McCreary and Ron Murphy scored for Biltmore.

Overtime goals by Tony Poeta, Sibby Martelli and Mickey Mole ttle Spitfire attack. Poeta also scored in the third period with Mole and Jimmy Robertson added the other. Windsor goals were by Martin Proulx and Don Louttit. Barrie took over second place from Toronto St. Michael's by the win.

Tonight St. Michael's play in Oshawa, Kitchener is in Guelph and Barrie is at St. Catharines. The Toronto Sunday doubleheader is at the Maple Leaf Gardens and Galt at St. Michael's, Oshawa and Windsor Spitfires are at Guelph starts a two-game Quebec tour against Three-Rivers Reds.

Goodyears Lose

Kingston Goodyears, playing his second game of the season, proved to be no match for the invaders and appears to have fully recovered from the effects of the three-month layoff due to end his athletic career. He and goalie Jim Woodrow completely frustrated the Glen Roys from dangerous predicaments while Woodrow was performing sensational between the Belleville pipes.

The surprising result boosted the Glen Roys into a three-way second-place tie with the Goodyears and the Oshawa Transports and indicated that "Red" Doran and his professional Hawks will be home. In successive starts they have beaten the Goodyears and Kingston and now all three teams are only three points behind the pace-setting Stouffville Spitfires.

Jack Wardhaugh, a "lamp lighter" on the scoring spread by tallying when he flashed the puck past Jim Jones at 1:52 in the first period, it was the only goal of a session that produced no indoor excitement. Two of them banded to Paris for misdemeanors with Johnny McAvoy near the Belleville crease. Mulvihill, who needed a rest anyway, joined the Paris sentence.

Seven minutes and twenty seconds after the initial tally, it began Wardhaugh struck his second blow, this time aiding a pass to Mulvihill. Wardhaugh's trickery in luring Johnson from his net left Mulvihill a virtual open, favorable comment. At 9:25 Doran was hurt in a collision and limped away for repairs. Goodyears quickened their pace and Woodrow made a number of scoring chances only to have Goyer or Paul Greenlay there. Then at 18:57 a Mulvihill to Wardhaugh to MacDonald play netted the latter for his third marker.

Nobber Put Out

Goodyears became early aggressive in the last round and during one of those assaults a shot by Coach Joe Watts put Doran in the Belle out of action. Ken Paris engineered some thrilling attacks but all failed until at 11:44 Myke soloed for

Grab Well-Deserved 5-2 Win In Hard-Played Senior Battle; Climb Into Second-Place Tie

KINGSTON Dot. (Special)—Belleville Glen Roys, exhibiting vast improvement over their form of previous games here this season against Kingston Goodyears, upset calculations last night when they outplayed the locals and achieved a well-earned 5 to 2 victory. Stellar goalkeeping by Tony Pavia and deadly sniping by the members of the Wardhaugh-Mulvihill-MacDonald line were pay-off factors in the result.

Wardhaugh, who has never looked more efficient on local ice, scored one of the goals and assisted MacDonald hit the webbing behind goalkeeper Johnston on two occasions while Mulvihill also tabbed one counter and had two assists, Johnny Myke and Clint Takhers were Goodyear's successful snipers.

A crowd of 2,000 fans, second smallest of the young season, saw the Bellies in sparkling action, the while Goodyears tried in vain to pull the verdict from the fire.

In two of three previous tests Goodyears had been the dominant team while in the other they had dropped a 4 to 2 in the Belleville Arena. The reversals of form were fair startling.

Tower of Strength

Big Vernon Goyer, playing his second game of the season, proved to be a tower of strength to the invaders and appears to have fully recovered from the ailment that threatened to end his athletic career. He and goalie Jim Woodrow completely frustrated the Glen Roys from dangerous predicaments while Woodrow was performing sensational between the Belleville pipes.

The surprising result boosted the Glen Roys into a three-way second-place tie with the Goodyears and the Oshawa Transports and indicated that "Red" Doran and his professional Hawks will be home. In successive starts they have beaten the Goodyears and Kingston and now all three teams are only three points behind the pace-setting Stouffville Spitfires.

Jack Wardhaugh, a "lamp lighter" on the scoring spread by tallying when he flashed the puck past Jim Jones at 1:52 in the first period, it was the only goal of a session that produced no indoor excitement. Two of them banded to Paris for misdemeanors with Johnny McAvoy near the Belleville crease. Mulvihill, who needed a rest anyway, joined the Paris sentence.

Seven minutes and twenty seconds after the initial tally, it began Wardhaugh struck his second blow, this time aiding a pass to Mulvihill. Wardhaugh's trickery in luring Johnson from his net left Mulvihill a virtual open, favorable comment. At 9:25 Doran was hurt in a collision and limped away for repairs. Goodyears quickened their pace and Woodrow made a number of scoring chances only to have Goyer or Paul Greenlay there. Then at 18:57 a Mulvihill to Wardhaugh to MacDonald play netted the latter for his third marker.

Nobber Put Out

Goodyears became early aggressive in the last round and during one of those assaults a shot by Coach Joe Watts put Doran in the Belle out of action. Ken Paris engineered some thrilling attacks but all failed until at 11:44 Myke soloed for Kingston's opening tally only to have MacDonald get it back in a space of seven seconds.

The quick thrust by MacDonald threw the locals a bit off stride and the rushing Glen Roys took command. Sammy Mulholland, who had been in the thick of the battle all the way without collecting a point, got a break when he took Pavia's fervent long pass in the mid-ice zone and outskated his pursuers in a race to the net. His shot was good and when Bob Landry protested too much the referee promptly handed him a match misconduct penalty.

Clint Thirkens, aided by Don Murray and Stewart, cut Belleville's margin at 15:40 and also brought the scoring to a close. Goodyears made fruitless efforts to rally but were held at bay even after Wardhaugh was penalized at 18:46.

The teams:

Belleville — Goal, Paris; defence, Goyer and Schreiber; centre, Doran; wings, Mulholland and Jones; alternates, Bastedo, Reeves, Wardhaugh, Mulvihill, MacDonald, DeGray, Day and Benjamin.

Kingston—Goal, Johnson; defence, Landry and Landry; centre, Murray; wings, Markle and Thirkes; alternates, McKeown, Pavia, White, Stewart, Bender, Myke and MacGregor.

Referee — Louis LeCompte; linesman, Bill Reason.

Summary

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

It is the morning after the night before that gets me. Others live and learn and the time has come for me to get wise to myself. Every time I buck my system, something happens to me. After each lecture there is usually a midnight bridge session at the home of someone in my audience. If we quit by daylight, it is still time to write a column and answer a few letters.

These are the kind of parties at which I am on the spot. All others can make mistakes and laugh it off. But let me guess wrong (and I usually do) and there goes a perfectly good reputation.

♥ J 7 5 2
♦ J 9 7 3
♣ 10 8 6 3

WEST	EAST
♠ 9 3 2	♠ K Q 3 8 7 6
♥ 9 8 6	♥ A 4
♦ Q 10 8 5 4	♦ None
♣ A J 2	♣ Q 9 7 5 4

SOUTH
♠ A 10 5
♥ K Q 10 6 3
♦ A K 6 2
♣ K

The bidding went like this:

South	West	North	East
1 K	Pass	Pass	2 S
Dbl	3 S	Pass	4 S
Dbl	Pass	Pass	Pass

After east reached four spades with this spirited bidding, it seemed the spot for me to double. And with my hand, who would not! Or, so it struck me at the time.

If I knew then what I know now, a higher heart bid by me would have been a good sacrifice. Because, all we got was my spade ace and a heart. They made their double bid with an overtrick.

If I had bid five hearts, I would have gone down one trick with a small sacrifice loss. Certainly worth it, when considering what they made at four: spades doubled.

Trying to justify my mistake, my voice was saying: "A hand like mine should always double a game." And somebody said: "Did you expect to beat a contract correctly bid by your own system?"

That took the wind out of me.

ACTIVE COMPANY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's only year-round professional drama company, "Totem Theatre," celebrated its first birthday this month. Largest group using arena-style production in North America, it has presented more than 21 plays to a total of more than 60,000 people.

ATTACK LEGATION

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—A hand grenade was buried at the Czechoslovak legation Thursday night. No damage or injuries were reported. It was believed the perpetrators were protesting against anti-Semitic and anti-Israel overtones stemming from the treason trial in Prague last week.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the setion in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

FOR SUNDAY DEC. 7, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Unless government, military or other vital matters demand your services, it might be well to rest from work that can be done during the week. Attend church; of course.

April 21 to May 20 Taurus)—Not all favorable nor is it an unfriendly day. Urgent duties can be managed quietly, without strain. Attend church; then enjoy a restful diversion.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Your Mercury and other planet configurations advise extra care in all activities, especially those involving health, the home, finances. Your church first.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Wholesome matters such as charity, community and government honored by benefic Saturn rays. Today urges serenity, tact, prayer.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Sensible caution, religious duties are musts on this day of the week dedicated especially to God. All who must work; be cheerful and trust in Him.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—Same as Gemini today, so be your kindly, conservative self, tending to spiritual needs and other duties. You and yours can enjoy a pleasant, helpful Sabbath.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Much is up to you and what day's requirements are. It is important that you not give in to emotional moods or overstrain. Be serious, smile, and pray.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Saturn only planet in really benefic aspect today. It augurs well for monetary work. And it advises extra care withal.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Your Jupiter says avoid extravagance, contention. Best procedure is: to keep even disposition, be agreeable, go to church.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—You are honored this day with your Saturn in very favorable position for material activities, talents and personal affairs. Don't neglect to thank God.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Lucky most o fus now you are requested to keep the orakes on emotions and to be up and doing where you should. Remember obligations to God, family, benefactors.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Neither unfavorable nor all helpful rays, so be aware of what is urgent, necessary so that that can be disposed of first without fussing.

YOU BORN TODAY: a combination of sagacity, foresight, and caution. These and other rare assets make for a happy career and home life. With poise, self-control and rightly allocated efforts, Sagittarius can accomplish much for definite success.

GRAHAM TO KOREA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The only true solution in Korea is the intervention of God," said Evangelist Billy Graham today as he took off on the first leg of a trip to the fighting front. "I think President Eisenhower should call the nation to a day of humiliation, repentance and prayer. It would have a profound effect on the solution of the problem." The evangelist said he hoped to spend Christmas on the front lines.

FRANKFORD

3M Club Elects New Executive

Frankford — The 3M Club of Frankford United Church held its Christmas meeting in the church hall on Monday evening, with a fair turnout. Ray Weslins and Gene Lohnes were in charge of the worship service, which was carried out in candle light.

Prom St. Luke and St. Matthew was read, with a number of selects being sung by candle light.

A poem, "Christmas Day," was read by Ray, also a reading on the "Wise Men."

On conclusion of the worship service, president Claude Moran took charge of the meeting for the business at hand. Plans were completed for establishing the floor of the church. All lady members of the 3M Club, who can be conveniently, are to be in the church at 3.00 p.m. Monday in each month, and the following evening, at 7.00, the men are to penetrate the floor. A number of the men will also be on hand to help with the scrubbing and waxing.

New Executive

Claude then asked Rev. R. MacEachern to take the chair for the election of officers for the year 1953. The slate of officers as turned in by the nominating committee was accepted with only one change, which is a credit to the fine job they did. The new officers for 1953 is as follows: Honorary presidents, Rev. and Mrs. MacEachern; president, Gene Lohnes; vice-presidents, Jim and Myrtle Poland; secretary, Claude Moran; Morse; pianist, Evelyn Martin; convenors: Ray Weslins, Arnold Stickle (January); Sid and Evelyn Martin (February); Ray and Hazel Brown (March); Harold and Ethel Vosborough (April).

Retiring presidents, Claude and Marjorie Moran, expressed their appreciation for the co-operation of the executive in their year of office. Sid Martin expressed the appreciation of the club for the inspiring leadership Claude and Marjorie had given in their term as presidents. They were given a hearty handclap by the 3M Clubbers.

Program

Myrtle Poland then took charge of the meeting for a short program. Jim Poland, Erwin Wallace, Frank Terry and Gene Lohnes favored with two numbers "Silver Bells" and "The Glow Worm." Harold Vosburgh gave a reading "A Month After Christmas."

Refreshments of chocolate cake and ice cream were served by Ruth Beech and members of her group to complete the evening.

POOR LOCATION

BARNSTAPLE, England (CP)—A famous Devon landmark, "Chanter's Folly," has been demolished because of decay. The tall tower was built in 1800 by a merchant named Chanter and intended as a sort of lighthouse, but because of the land contours it could not be seen for any distance.

DEST-FREE ARENA

BELMORE (CP) — This small Ulster community has just completed a modern arena. Started two years ago, it is debt-free. Final payment on the $26,000 building was made by Nelson Hunkin, arena committee treasurer.

WELLINGTON

The winter world is wrapped in white,
The tranquil earth is still,
The sunshine spreads a golden light
O'er lake and vale and hill;
And in our hearts we catch the strain
By herald angels sung—
"Peace, Good Will to Men" and "Good Will to Men"
When all the world was young.

WELLINGTON—As I write on Tuesday, the snow is falling, enveloping the town in white and bringing the Christmas season very near. Already the Spirit of Christmas is in the air and small boys are busy viewing the shop windows that display Christmas toys and gifts, and they are joyfully anticipating the Santa Claus parade.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ellis and Ben, who have moved into town for the winter from their home in Niles' Corners, spent the week-end in Belleville guests of her sister, Mrs. W. Baird.

Mrs. Harry Lucas and Gladys, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Campbell on Sunday.

The Salvation Army held service in the Union United Church on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Orvis McFeul and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Adams and daughter, have left to spend the winter in Florida.

A card from Anne Allison Thaler tells of her holiday in Miami, Florida, and Havana. Mr. and Mrs. Thaler travelled by plane.

Christ Church Bazaar

Christ Church Belleville was very attractive on Wednesday when the Guild of Christ Church, Hillier, held their annual bazaar. Among those attending from Wellington were Mrs. C. P. Heaven, Mrs. Mabel Bell, Mrs. L. E. Leavens, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Leavens, Mrs. A. A. Davern, Mrs. Arnold Poste, Mrs. A. Ainsworth, Mrs. W. R. Stevens, Mrs. Boyle and Miss M. Blakely. The sum of $170 was realized.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carley were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Hawley.

St. Andrew's W.A.

At the April meeting of the W.A. of St. Andrew's Church, Mrs. Heaven, wife of Rural Dean C. P. Heaven, was honored with a life membership in the W.A., the presentation being made by Mrs. Leavens paying tribute to Mrs. Heaven in an address, and Mrs. G. Upton presenting Mrs. Heaven with a membership pin. Mrs. Heaven expressed thanks very graciously. Rev. and Mrs. Beazer, Carrying Place, were guests. A social hour with refreshments brought a pleasant meeting to a close.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. MacDonald, of Mount Pleasant, who have recently come to Wellington, to reside were honored on a recent evening when a number of their near neighbors came to their home to welcome them. A presentation was spent and refreshments served.

The November meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held don Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Hewton.

Hard Acres

by

Harry Meldrum Moore

Meanwhile Curly Brown, on the grounds of his holdings in the west, was in close touch with his most intimate affairs. He knew every woman who was expecting a baby and every boy who was taking the creek to swimming when he should be at school; he knew every girl who was a parental problem and every man who was making sly chances at another man's wife.

By now the Canadian troops were making a name for themselves in North Africa. At Passchendaele, they'd captured General Crerar, his army and his equipment. After a long siege, Ladysmith had been relieved by British soldiers; Bloemfontein had been captured. More Canadian contingents had sailed. Kruger had fled when the British armies marched into Johannesburg, as the war should be over by now. But Curly, like many other men, made a miscalculation there.

However, this war was in another land, far away. It was practically over, anyway, so why worry about it?

One morning, when Curly Brown was in a playful mood, after a good day's work at the village, he was in the stable at Hard Acres, according to Peter's pressing request to show how to box.

"All right, Peter." Curly said. "He's short, and just watch what I do. First you stand like this, legs apart to balance yourself, keep on the balls of your feet, so you can move around quickly. Put your left foot ahead of the right, shoulder up to protect the side of your jaw; your right hand like this, your right like this.

"Oh—oh blast it!"

"That's the thing to be teaching your son, Curly Brown!" Hazel said lefty from the door. "Want him to be a prize fighter?"

"Ha," Curly said, "but he should be taught how to defend himself. You don't want to be a captive fighter, do you, Peter?"

"Aw, gee, mom!" Peter said disgustedly. "Can't we have a bit of fun without you coming and spoiling it?"

Curly thought a minute, then his face broke into a grin. "Say, Hazel, what becomes of his mouth or even given Curly a second look. When the men drew near, Ligs Barrier stopped, but Frost was continuing on, when Curly said: "Hello Bill," and stepped towards him, hand extended.

Like a flash Frost knocked Curly's hand aside, in the same motion drove his right at Curly's face. Prepared for such treachery, Curly slipped under the blow and as he straightened up, he pumped his left into Frost's ribs, sending him spinning backwards to the pig-pen fence where he hung momentarily, lost his balance and landed on his backside in the trough on the other side.

"I thought I told you the other day never to lead with your right, Curly laughed, looking over the ground to see that it was clear.

Ligs Barrier ran over, and grabbed Curly by the arm. Not to be outdone, Peter caught Barrier by the leg, and said, contemptuously, "you leave my dad alone!"

"Let it, Curly, Ligs," Ligs pleaded, "you might kill him."

"Kill—nothing!" Curly grinned. "I'm not in the mood to kill anything. Just keep out of this. I'm not going to hurt him. I'm only going to show him a few tricks, and if I don't do it now, I may be sorry later that I didn't, when I had the chance."

Bill Frost slowly picked himself up, rubbed his hip, and then, his face red with shame, fists flying. But his fists were flying futilely at something that was never there. Curly laughingly toyed with him and sent his opponent spinning, dodging, side-stepping, he caught Frost's wrist and blocked his right with his shoulders, he picked them out of mid-air, he played him out. And then, his own hands went to work. Never was he to close them into fists, never once was he to strike a blow. But he cuffed Frost's ears until they must have rung like a church bell; he reddened his cheeks with open-handed slaps that packed remarkable power behind them. He made Frost cover his face, made him back down to his wagon, made him plead for mercy. Finally, out of breath, Curly stepped aside, but not before he grabbed up Frost's hat and jammed it well down over his ears and eyes.

"Now then Bill," he put—"I think you better run along home. And if anybody ever says a pig-pen where a big white sow lives, I'll come and beat them through a wire fence. Curly heard voices and he said:

"We'll walk home, Peter. If Ligs has a pick, it will be in the tool room in his barn." And he started to hum again.

Around the end of the barn came Ligs Barrier, followed by Bill Frost. For a moment Ligs stopped, looked at Curly and Peter, then he let out a forced laugh, started forward again, Frost at his heels.

"Well, look here, it is isn't the Brown boy," Ligs said, trying to be smart, "and, how are you today, Councilor Brown?"

"Not suffering any, Ligs," Curly grinned.

Simple Safeguards Against Tularemia

BY JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Salmar Tables

For a good many years there have been in circulation some fairly wild stories about "rabbit fever," a disease whose correct name is tularemia. This plague among the creatures of the wild is a comparatively new ailment, particularly throughout the eastern states.

I first heard of tularemia back around 1929. Our ruffed grouse had experienced one of their "crash years" and their numbers had dwindled from a plentiful supply to a pitifully small remnant of birds, almost overnight. One of the group which was discussing the scarcity of these splendid game birds came up with the theory that the new disease, tularemia, named after Tulare County, California, where the malady was first observed, was responsible for the disappearance of the grouse.

We told how the disease attacked rabbits and other animals and insisted that birds, too, are subject to it. Then he went on to enlighten us regarding the dangers of the disease after wildlife.

Some years ago many hunters feared the disease so greatly that they refused to bring home rabbits for family consumption. They believed that even a well-cooked rabbit could infect an entire family.

Transmitted by Ticks

In a new publication of the Illinois Natural History survey, there is a bulletin entitled "Tularemia" by Ralph E. Yeatter and David H. Thompson. These men are among the world's leading authorities on tularemia and their findings are interesting.

Tularemia is an infectious disease, transmitted usually by various species of ticks which move from one animal to another. It does not by any means confine itself to rabbits. Most furbearers are subject to it so that things as squirrels, woodchucks, rats, mice, dogs, cats, and even various birds may very well have tularemia.

In the northern, cold weather states the presence of the disease among wildlife is rare after the first few freezing nights. Ticks retire from their live hosts as soon as cold weather arrives, thus minimizing the possibilities of infection.

An animal or bird usually dies from this disease within a week from the time it is contracted and, there being no ticks moving in cold weather to carry the infection to a live animal, there is little danger of tularemia during the winter months.

Human beings can and do contract the disease. Illinois, for example has recorded 3,044 cases of tularemia in human beings during the years 1936-1949. Wisconsin, a colder state, records only 436 cases during the same period.

In view of the fact that these states now have about 453,000 hunters each who take the field every year, it can be seen quite readily that "rabbit fever" is not common among human beings.

Can Cause Death

It is, however, a serious ailment which causes a lingering sickness and, in a few cases, death. It is not as serious as it used to be because the medical profession has developed new treatments which are quite effective.

The chances of a hunter being infected with the disease are rather remote. Yet people do become infected, so it is wise to take a few precautions.

Don't live in a cold-weather state if it is a good idea not to bring home any rabbits until there has been some cold weather. Even though the hunting season is open, it is far safer to leave warm weather rabbits alone until after cold weather cuts down the prevalence of the bacteria.

Before you shoot a rabbit, make sure that you can. A sitting rabbit may possibly be a sick rabbit, so start him on his life's way before you shoot him. Slow-moving rabbits provide another reason for suspicion. It is not normal for a scared bunny to run slowly, so "tame" rabbit usually is a sick one.

Wearing rubber gloves when cleaning game is apt to give a false sense of security. A man, for it is not the only contamination his face or his hands while wearing or taking off rubber gloves.

Scratches or cuts on the hands can easily provide a path for infection and there is some evidence that the disease can be contracted through unbroken skin.

Spotted livers are a clue which may tell you whether or not rabbits have tularemia. However, as much fun, but—be careful, barren-looking livers are not always spotted livers. In the same token, absence of liver spots does not guarantee that the animal is free from disease, as it requires three or four days for the virus to develop in an infected animal.

There is no point in letting the fear of tularemia spoil your fun in hunting. Meat which is well cooked is quite safe to eat.

If you use common sense and take reasonable precautions there is little likelihood that you will contract tularemia. Often an entire season will go without a report of the disease in a human being. Even the automobile accidents and shooting accidents are far greater, so go ahead and enjoy your hunting and don't worry too much about tularemia.

6 DEAD IN TWEED CAR CRASH, TRENTON FIRE

Family Of Three Dies In Trenton Apartment Fire

Passers-by Fail to Arouse Victims After Flames Seen

TRENTON (Special) — Fire took the lives of an air force family of three people here early Sunday morning — a few hours after husband and wife had talked about Christmas toys they would buy for their 18-month-old son, who perished with them.

The dead are:

LAC Joseph Louis Savage, 23; June Savage, 19, the former June Cassidman, of Malone; Robert Michael Savage, who was 10 months old on the east side of the town.

The Savage family lived in a cellar apartment at 32 Richard St. on the east side of the town. The only exit to the downstairs apartment lead up a short flight of stairs to the back door of the bungalow-styled house. The ground floor apartment was vacant.

The fire escape assortment was heated by a Quebec heater. Every night before midnight, a next door neighbor said he would hear the airman chopping wood in the cellar. On Saturday, as usual, Berard Bastien heard the chopping around 11.30 p.m.

Noticed at 12.45 a.m.

At 12.45 a.m. Sunday morning, five people returning from a bingo party at the air station, were riding in a car along Richard St. They were a family by the name of Bourgard from the cellar window of a house on the south side of the apartment house. One of the passengers had a mother living in a house close by. As they came nearer the people in the car saw red flames through the glass in the cellar windows.

Flight Sergeant Norman Andersen who lives on Weeks Ave., jumped out of the car and started for the burning house. He was closely followed by Jack McCleod. Their wives and a Mrs. C. Southwell came along afterwards.

Full Report Requested By Immigration Dept.

SARNIA (CP)—A full report on the Sarnia Dutch couple who allegedly have tried to sell their blond 40-year-old son for $1,000 has been requested by the immigration department at Ottawa, it is learned.

Although the local immigration office would neither confirm nor deny the report, information received here was that the Ottawa officials want all particulars of the case.

The case was revealed by Col. C. S. Woodcock, clerk of Lambton County family court, in an address Friday at the annual dinner of the Lambton county reeves.

He cited it as an illustration of what he said is a need for more care in the selection of new Canadians. It was evidence that the immigration department is not bringing the right kind of persons into Canada, he said. The judge declined to identify the couple involved.

Meanwhile the boy, who has been placed by the Children's Aid Society, is in a temporary foster home, likely in as to be "pitiful condition emotionally."

May be Extended

FORT WILLIAM (CP)—Shipping sources said today the possibility of the insurance deadline of Dec. 12 for lake vessels may be extended if mild weather continues.

Twelve ships carrying 3,000,000 bushels of grain cleared Fort William and Port Arthur before midnight Friday night, when insurance rates took another jump.

Last year navigation out of lakehead ports ended Dec. 15, and shipping officials believe a similar extension may be granted this year.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO: (CP) — Synopsis—Strong southerly winds are bringing even milder air to Ontario from the Gulf states. In this air, afternoon and night time temperatures may rise to the high fifties in southwestern Ontario.

By Tuesday this very warm air will be replaced by slightly cooler weather that has traversed the Georgian Bay. Several inches of rain beginning early Tuesday are expected as the transition to the cooler air.

Three Europeans, 20 Moroccans Killed In Riots

Armed Troops Gain Shaky Grip on Situation

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP)—Bloody anti-French rioting continued today in this French North African protectorate. Three Europeans and at least 20 Moroccans were killed.

Police informants said an angry mob caught three Europeans in a lone country during the morning, slashed the throats of two of them and cut off their hands. The mob crushed the head of the third with rocks. Three other Europeans were wounded.

The crowd, numbering about 600 Ore., came from nationalist agitators, moved on to the police station. There it was swelled to about 5,000. Shooting ensued and about 20 Moroccans were slain.

Then police had gained a shaky grip on the situation and the last armed troops patrolled the troubled sections. An 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew was imposed and assembles of more than 10 persons were banned.

A police official driving to work was attacked by a mob during the morning. His automobile was overturned but he escaped. A French schoolmistress fled through some children to school opened fire on a crowd which started throwing rocks at them and drove them off.

Outbreak Follows Strike

The outbreak here on the northwest African coast followed a country-wide strike call by the Moroccan General Labor Confederation, which acted in sympathy with the Tunisian Workers' Organization (UGT). The UGT has ordered a two-day walkout in Tunisia in protest against the assassination outside Tunis last Friday of Farhat Hached, Tunisian nationalist leader and general secretary of the UGT.

The disturbance here in Casablanca Sunday clashed with native troops and three Moslems were killed. Nearby military forces, backed by armored cars, took up positions and arrested 200 persons.

In Tunis Sunday some 300 Arab nationalists attempted to march on the headquarters of French resident-general, Jean de Hauteclocque, to protest the slaying of Hached but were driven back.

Search for Break In Pipe Line

TORONTO (CP) — A squeamish diver from the North York Township police was ordered off for five hours because, police said, they feared a break in a gasoline pipeline might cause fires or explosions.

Early today firemen and engineers searched for the break in the Trans-Northern Pipe Line, eight miles north of downtown Toronto and near the Eglinton Hunt Club.

There were conflicting reports as to the quantity of gasoline that oil-like substance seeped Sunday night out of the underground pipe line, a 46-mile project from Montreal to junction for branches from Montreal, Sarnia, Hamilton and Toronto.

A. J. Horner, president of Trans-Northern, said reports of the diver were "grossly exaggerated", and that he estimated only 20 gallons of gas was released.

Other reports said hundreds of gallons had leaked through the soil and were flowing into a ditch leading into the Don River. A company workman said "hundreds of barrels of gasoline escaped."

Gasoline fumes could be smelled in the Don Valley, a mile away, police said, and a reporter that along the Don the air was so heavy you felt you'd have to lie there."

Police told those who attempted to pass barricades: "It isn't safe for anyone."

Toronto lifesavers and officials of the Toronto Harbor Commission worked their way up the Don in a small boat to erect a boom across the stream and stop the flow of fuel down the river.

Covered With Scum

The ditch leading from the fields where the break occurred was also covered with a thick scum of gasoline and firemen used tons of water to force the foul towards the Don.

Officials Bow to Public Outcry TV to Cover Coronation in Abbey

LONDON (Reuters) — Officials staging the Coronation next June 2 bowed to a public outcry today and announced television coverage of the event.

The committee announced that TV cameras will be placed in the Westminster Abbey to cover much of the lengthy religious ceremony, including the actual placing of the crown on the Queen's head.

Some parts of the rites will be banned, however. The nation's television will not show the Queen's brow and palm anointed with the sacred oil, nor will they see her take communion.

The first announcement issued last month banned TV cameras from recording any of the rites inside the abbey, except the formal procession down the aisle. Newspapers and many politicians joined in a public outcry and the matter was taken up by the cabinet.

The Coronation committee gave in on another point today. It announced the procession through the streets of London will be extended so more people can watch.

The Queen's journey trip to the abbey, riding in her brilliant royal coach and surrounded by a ceremonial parade, will follow a longer route than at first announced.

The winding 5¼-mile procession will go from Buckingham Palace after the ceremony will remain the same.

The first television ban roused bitter controversy. Newspapers complained that only a handful of privileged noblemen and officials would see the actual ceremony.

Today's announcement means that the cameras will be placed in the abbey before the arrival of the peers will all, probably on a raised platform in the nave.

The bulletin added that the RAF will stage a huge flypast over Buckingham Palace on Coronation day to honor the newly-crowned Queen.

The announcement was issued by Lord Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, who has charge of the Coronation arrangements as chairman of the Coronation joint committee.

The recommendations of its 32 members was submitted to the Coronation commission headed by Prime Minister Churchill for the Queen's own approval.

Wind, Rain and Snow Pound Northern California Taking Five Lives, Strand Five Trains

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Wind, rain and snow pounded northern California taking five lives and temporarily stranding seven passenger trains with 1,370 passengers.

The storm paralyzed highway travel and communications during the week-end, flooded lowland communities and disrupted power service over most of the area. It had passed today, but rain was forecast for tonight.

Four of the stranded trains were freed after a 24-hour delay, when eight miles of snowbound, north-south Southern Pacific track was cleared late Sunday near Dunsmuir, 350 miles north of here.

Three southbound trains were held temporarily at Klamath Falls, Ore.

Rescue Motorists

The storm struck its hardest blows in the southern Siskiyou mountains on the Oregon - California border. Snowplows cut pose through deep drifts to rescue nothing.

stranded motorists and farmers.

The weather forecast called for scattered showers over northern California today, with more snow in the mountains.

Two men and two children were killed Sunday when a huge oak tree uprooted by high winds sliced through the roof of a home 30 miles north of Ukiah. A woman suffered serious injury.

They were identified as Russ Tulla, 24; his daughter, 19 months; Logan Every, 26; and his son, Bobby, 2. Mrs. Tulla suffered a broken leg and shock.

Blinded By Rain

Carl Selsher, 47, a pedestrian, was killed by a car in Humboldt county Saturday night. The driver said he was blinded by rain.

Still unsolved was the mystery of red flares reported near Tahoe City. Residents of the area saw flares dropped from a plane "which disappeared behind a mountain and exploded in a burst of flame." A

Lack of Critical Sense Among Peace Delegates One Of Many Disquieting Signs

By Gerard Filion

How many Americans and Canadians know that their soldiers in Korea are accused of having committed the most appalling atrocities? Some of you may remember having read one day in a newspaper that a commission formed by the International Association of Democratic Jurists (a Communist organization) had made a survey in Korea and had formally accused American troops of committing war crimes and atrocities. And then, we heard no more about it.

No, the other side of the Iron Curtain stories of atrocities committed by G.I's are one of the most common subjects of conversation. All the speakers at the Peking Peace Congress, including the American delegates themselves, vigorously denounced these crimes. It didn't meet a single delegate who expressed the least doubt of the authenticity of the crimes of which the American troops were accused.

During the congress we were handed a report of the commission formed by the International Association of Democratic Jurists. I took the trouble to read and analyze it. One thing struck me right away. That was the speed with which the commission had been organized. Members of the commission stayed in Korea only from March 3 to March 19, 1952, yet in the report dozens of acts of atrocity were judged when one of the acts alone would have taken several days or even weeks of inquiry.

SOME SAMPLE ATROCITIES

I was particularly struck by Chapter Four which was entitled "Massacres, Murders and Other Atrocities."

The first part of the chapter contained 27 separate and definite accusations of atrocities against the civilian population of North Korea. Let's look at a couple of them.

"On October 17, 1950, in the Boo-Joung-Ri district, the Americans forced four men and women into a cellar. On October 18, at seven p.m. the Americans covered them with oil and burned them alive."

"In the village of Sol-Ma-Ri, 2,000 persons, men and women, were captured and killed in different ways during the occupation. Among them were one-year-old children and 70-year-old men."

"An eye-witness told the commission how 950 persons, including several women, were killed in the Ma-Ri mountains on December 5, 1950, by order of the American commanding officer who was in charge of the military garrison. These persons were machine-gunned in front of a ditch they had been forced to dig. The commission saw the place where the execution took place and the graves of the victims. The graves were opened for inspection by the commission."

These charges, picked at random, give you a fair idea of the accusations which are being made against the Americans in Korea.

NEVER MORE THAN ONE WITNESS

There is one thing, however, that strikes anyone who is in the least doubtful. It is that in each of the 27 accusations outlined in the first part of Chapter Four, there is always only one witness to testify. In each of the 27 cases, by some happy chance, one person has escaped, or survived his wounds and is able to tell the commission members what went on.

DOCTOR OUT ON BAIL

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Earl B. Clouse was released on $10,000 bail Friday pending his appeal from conviction on a charge of manslaughter. He was sentenced to 10 years in penitentiary. The charge arose from the death of a 31-year-old woman from an attempted abortion. Evidence at his trial was that she was not pregnant.

FACE MURDER TRIAL

MONTREAL (CP)—Robert and Yvon Bedard, aged 16 and 14, Friday were committed for trial on charges of murdering their father and the attempted murder of their mother. The father, Philippe Bedard, was fatally shot and his wife wounded Oct. 30, when, police said, the parents reprimanded the boys for coming home late.

Londoners Get First Glimpse of Sun in 4 Days

Worst Fog in History Darkens Foggiest City

LONDON (AP) — London's great fog — worst in the city's long history — began to lift today and Londoners got their first look at the sun in four days.

The thick murk, laden with foul, choking soot from thousands of chimney pots, started to clear soon after dawn.

For the Londoners it was like the end of a nightmarish blackout —one longer than any Hitler ever inflicted on them. For three days transportation has been all but paralyzed. A number of persons were killed or injured in accidents and the underworld unleashed a new crime wave behind the dense smog curtain.

The transport tie-up blocked milk supplies in the east and e critical shortage threatened.

By 11 a. m., today buses, subways, taxis and cars were running at a nearly-normal pace and the Monday morning rush hour went off without a serious hitch. Milk and coal deliveries flowed back into the city normally and shipping in the Thames river began to untangle.

A heavy haze still hung over many parts of the city and its outskirts, however, and operators of London's two big airports awaited the signal for resuming operations.

But reports on the smog's crime wave listed dozens of burglaries. One woman was beaten to death on the outside of a fashionable Hyde Park apartment building in loot of £10,000 worth of furs and jewels.

Jet Fighter Makes Long Trip

TORONTO (CP)—An RCAF jet fighter has made the longest non-stop flight yet performed in this country, A. V. Roe, manufacturers of the aircraft, said today.

The CF100 made the 1,100-mile flight in two hours 43 minutes, an average of 470 miles an hour. The plane, piloted by Sqdn. Ldr. Douglas Morton of Moncton, N.B., left Ottawa at 12:11 p.m. EST and arrived at Winnipeg at 3 p.m. (1:3 p.m. EST). A crew man, Cpl. D. L. Barkley of Ottawa, was also aboard.

The plane, the first Canadian-designed jet fighter to fly, will undergo cold-weather tests at Namao, near Edmonton.

'Psychic' Horse 'Spells Out' Clues In Solving Baffling Mysteries

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A 27-year-old "talking" horse has been called in to play "detective" in the search for a missing Rhode Island youngster.

Nine-year-old Gary Hayman disappeared near Providence, R.I., Sept. 23.

Mrs. Benjamin Hayman, clinging to the hope that her son is still alive, called the Richmond Times-Dispatch Sunday from Rhode Island and asked that a reporter be sent to question Lady Wonder, a horse whose amazing "answers to questions" once prompted her owner to dub her a "genuine phenomenon."

The Times-Dispatch sent reporter Bill McIlwain to "interview" Lady, who pecks out her answers on a giant typewriter-like contraption. When she answers, she lowers her head to the touch levers jutting out from slots containing letters.

When McIlwain asked if young Hayman, a mute, was alive, Lady pushed out "Y-E-S."

Then she pecked out the word "hurt" and when McIlwain asked if he was dead, Lady replied "truck."

When asked where the truck was, Lady said "Kansas." McIlwain repeated the question twice and got the same answer.

Then he asked if Gary could be found.

"Yes," said Lady.

When Mrs. Hayman learned of Lady's responses, she said:

"Oh God, I hope he's safe, I hope he's safe."

Mrs. Hayman heard about Lady Wonder through a newspaper story three days ago giving the name of a horse helping to find the body of a missing four-year-old Massachusetts boy.

District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing said Lady gave the answers that led searchers Thursday to the body of Danny Matson, who lived in Chicopee, Mass., home since January, 1951.

"It's stranger than fiction," said Dewing. "And we kept it a secret because we didn't want people to think we were completely out of our minds."

In the Matson case, Dewing said a friend questioned the horse and received the same answers as the "Pittsfield Water Wheel." On the basis of that information, a detective was dispatched to Pittsfield, Mass., but learned nothing.

"We tried to mulling it over," Dewing said, "and we thought the message might have been garbled and that the poor old horse meant to say 'Pit Fields Water'."

The child's body was found Fields-Wide Quarry in Quincy was ordered. The child's father, Arthur Danny Lady, owned by Mrs. Claudis Fondap has been the subject of numerous studies and articles by medical experts. One of the first such examinations, by two Duke University psychologists in 1928, resulted in the conclusion that Lady is a "genuine phenomenon."

Cars Sideswipe On Long Curve At Chapman's Corners

Bodies of Victims Spilled On Roadway Near Scene

Three persons are dead and five others are in Belleville General Hospital, two with critical injuries, as result of the worst highway crash in the Belleville district in years.

The crash occurring on Highway No. 37 south of Tweed, early Saturday night, saw two men and a youth killed instantly as the two vehicles sideswiped on a long curve near Chapman's Corners. The left sides of both cars were ripped out and three occupants of one car were spilled onto the roadway as the vehicle rolled three times before coming to rest on the shoulder of the road 150 feet from the scene of the impact.

Killed was 17-year-old Francis Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Reid, of Sidney Township, and believed to be the driver of one car. The other two men killed in the crash were Arthur Crossley, 31, of Emily Street, in Belleville, and Robert "Nobby" Jones, 22, of Thurlow Township, near Shannonville.

Bodies Displaced

In hospital are Reginald Burbery, 22, of Tweed; Don Elvins, 20, East Moira Street, Wayne Demille, 19, of Hallaway; Edith Stone, 15, of Holloway, and Betty Ross, 16, of Corbyville. Elvins and DeMille were reported in critical condition with fractured skulls and other injuries.

The two girls in hospital escaped with minor injuries, Miss Ross with a bump on the head and abrasions, and Miss Ross with a broken hand and cuts about the face and neck.

The other girl involved in the accident, Leta Woodcock, 16, and Gladys Shaw, 17, of Tweed, escaped with a shaking up and shock and went home from the scene of the crash after first aid treatment.

The bodies of two of the victims were disfigured and it was not until 7:30 Sunday morning, nearly 12 hours after the accident, that the last of the dead was identified. Mr. H. M. Jones, Bleecker Street, identified the body of his son by a tatoo mark "Nobby" on his right forearm.

Reid, the 17-year-old Sidney township youth killed in the crash, was on a Saturday night drive with three young friends when the fatality took place.

The foursome regularly went out Saturday nights for a drive taking in a show or dance at Belleville. Last week-end they decided to take a ride toward Tweed.

Urged To Be Careful

"Francis told us that he was going to Tweed instead of Belleville," the grief-stricken father related Sunday. "Before he left I urged him to be careful on the highway."

2 DIE IN BANDCAR DIVE

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Two men were killed and a third injured Friday night when their handcar plunged 100 feet from a railway trestle to the gorge below. Killed were Heinz Schulze, 22, and Beverly Campbell, 20. Injured was Thomas Bowling, 25. The men were replacing timbers on the Canadian National railways trestle when the accident occurred.

'Well-Heeled' Yes, But Not A 'Spendthrift'

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A woman who said she has big pairs of shoes including 24 hand-made pairs from Italy denied in an answer to her multi-millionaire husband's divorce suit that she was a "spendthrift."

Mrs. Kinta Desmare Merill, Friday filed an answer to a divorce suit filed last June 29 by Charles Edward Merill, banker and a New York brokerage firm.

Merill, 6, alleged his wife was guilty of extreme cruelty and had a violent and ungovernable temper.

Mrs. Merill, in her answer and counter-claim, asked a divorce and alimony the court deems proper.

BOGUS PAY CHEQUES PASSED AT KINGSTON

Kingston merchants have been warned by police to be on the lookout for bogus pay cheques.

Two identical cheques, each for $62, have turned up at police headquarters with two merchants being the victims.

The cheques were drawn on the Bank of Nova Scotia and were purportedly issued by the "Empire Manufacturing Company." Although a cheque-writing machine was used, the work was crude in some respects. Ordinary postage stamps were used for excise, and each cheque carried only one signature.

CHILD SUFFERS FRACTURED SHOULDER, STRUCK BY CAR

James Tognette, 7, of 233 Station Street, suffered a fractured right shoulder Saturday and soon when he darted out from behind a car near the A. and P. Store on Pinnacle Street, and was struck by a passing car. He was taken to the office of Dr. F. R. Ross and then to hospital.

Stanley Addington, Napanee, said he was driving south on Pinnacle St. when the lad darted out between two cars at the curb.

DOG BRINGS HOME SILVER FOX FUR

It isn't a case of bringing home the bacon, but a pet dog owned by an East Hill resident is at least working for his owner.

Yesterday an East Hill man called the local police department to say that his dog had turned up at home carrying a silver fox fur in his mouth. The fur had apparently either been lost on the street, or had fallen from some clothes line where it had been airing. The rightful owner of the fur is being sought.

"BILL" GALBRAITH GRADUATES FROM TRADE SCHOOL

Pvt. C. "Bill" Galbraith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Galbraith, 247 Charles street, was one of a class of 25 students who graduated from the Ford of Canada Trade School Tool and Die Making course at Windsor on Saturday.

Galbraith has been associated with the company for the past 4½ years.

He will further his technical education by attending a diesign engineering course sponsored by the Windsor Y.M.C.A. A.F.T.E. He is a member of the American Society of Trade Schools.

Prior to joining the Ford Company at Canada, Galbraith was a student at St. Michael's Academy and Belleville Collegiate Institute. His father and mother attended the "passing out" exercises.

FAMILY TABBY LIKES CHOICE BIRD

It appears the family tabby likes a choice bird for a pre-Christmas snack.

Blake Sills of Halloway saw the pet cat strolling in from the barn the other day with a handsome pigeon in its jaws. The bird was dead, and apparently had been that way for some time.

Investigation revealed the pigeon to be a carrier type. On one leg was a band bearing the inscription R.L.M. 1817, while a blue band adorned the other leg.

RESCUES FOUR FROM CAR

VANCOUVER (CP)—An 18-year-old youth was lauded to death and four others were saved by an heroic companion Saturday when a car plunged into a deep ditch in suburban Richmond. Dead is Raymond Hill of Vancouver. Rescued 18-year-old Alan Don of Vancouver, driver of the car, rescued one other youth and three girls from the burning wreck. He suffered severe burns.

New Zealand High Commissioner Speaks of Close Link Between Canada and Country Down Under

TRENTON (Special) — His Excellency, Alfred Cyril Cunningham, for New Zealand in Canada, Thomas Hislop, left a lasting impression on the minds of a large gathering of members of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce at the Chamber's last dinner of the year in the Queensway Hotel. His remarks spiced with choice morsels of wit ended on a serious note tying the knot of friendship between Canada and New Zealand even tighter.

Speaking of the close link between the two members of the British Empire overseas Commonwealth the High Commissioner said: "We've got a basic ideal for freedom. Let us all remember these basic things so that in the future as in the past we can work together and face with hope and confidence whatsoever may lay ahead." These solemn words brought a lusty ovation from some 125 people present.

Spoke Offhand

His Excellency, former Mayor of Wellington, New Zealand, for 13 years, a barrister by profession served with the fighting Anzacs in World War I, spoke offhanded and relaxed, describing his homeland and the people living there. He noted to the surprise of his listeners that New Zealand encompasses two islands 1,200 miles east and south of Australia by 1,000 miles wide and 40 times smaller than Canada. "We are small a long way off in the Pacific," he said, "and without you must agree that our greatest asset is our people — from another small group of islands in the North Sea."

The high commissioner opened his remarks mentioning the fine spirit that existed between Trenton Mayor Kenneth Couch and Mayor-elect Norman Whitby who featured in a duet singing "The Old Gray Mare (implying Mayor) Ain't What She Used to Be" for the amusement of all in attendance. But his remarks soon showed that back biting interfered with useful administration.

Every Variety of Scenery

The distinguished guest speaker continued with a lesson in geography and history. "There is every variety of scenery and climate in New Zealand's 100,000 square miles of territory. The two islands are separated by 1,000 miles of water. There is skiing all year on a range of mountains 12,000 feet high in the north, oranges grow in semi-tropical conditions.

Most of the population came from Great Britain and 95 per cent of them are pure Britishstock. As an example he noted that his great-grandfather left England in 1850 on a ship that took four and a half months to reach the southern islands. The natives are called Maoris. They number 100,000 of the 2,000,000 inhabitants. They have high intelligence and a fine appearance. There are happy relations between the Maoris and the New Zealanders.

Because the climate is never severe goes above 75 in the summer and never lower in winter New Zealand farmers can pasture their stock outside year around. Therefore they have built up a strong agricultural and pastoral economy. They are the greatest exporters of dairy products in the world. Sheep is included as the second largest exporters of wool and market more meat than Australia and the Argentine put together. They are able to contribute to the world the tremendous quantities of food on the markets. They try to play a part in vital things as well.

100,000 in War

In the First World War 100,000 left New Zealand to fight abroad; in the Second World War I out of every ten people were in uniform. Remembering that Columbo plan New Zealand according to population has more troops in Korea, with the exception of the United States, than any other member country. There is nothing in being small it's the character of the people that counts."

His Excellency emphasized his people's gratitude for the hospitality extended to 8,000 New Zealanders by Canadians during the Six Qualify For Three Council Seats

TRENTON — Local voters make their second trip to the polls this year, Friday, January 2, to choose three councillmen out of a field of six candidates who qualified at the town office here Saturday night. The six who qualified out of 11 nominated were: Miss Laura Cummings, Lyle Carr, James MacDonald, Don MacPherson, Robert Smithrin and Joshua Tyas.

The extra election became necessary when only four nominees qualified for the two vacancies. Later R. J. Whitley, elected automatically by acclamation resigned, leaving the town with just three councillmen.

Farley Mowat Assigned to Write Regt's. History

Author of one of Britain's "best sellers", Farley (Squib) Mowat, Belleville, has been assigned to write the history of the famous Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Mr. Mowat was given the assignment at a well attended meeting of the regimental association held in the Church St. Armouries on Sunday afternoon.

Son of the well known Major Angus Mowat, an original "Hasty Pee", and now chief inspector of libraries, Ottawa. Mr. Mowat expects to have the history completed by the end of 1953. He will start work on it the first of the year.

He will spend three months in England, and in Italy, Sicily and other war theatres where the regiment fought, doing research and background work.

Major Bill Graydon, M.C., association president, was in the chair. Present were Lieut.-Col. A. A. Kennedy, D.S.O., Owen Sound; Lieut. Col. B. C. Donnan, Belleville, and W. A. Davern, Wellington. Majors W. and A. Broad, Madoc; Ted Nayler, Madoc; Cliff Hubbs, Belleville; Jim Walker, Stan. Ketcheson, Trenton; Captain Roger Mowat, Belleville secretary-treasurer, and many others.

Named to Committee

Major Cam. Wallbridge was named secretary-treasurer of the history committee. Major Gordon, former regimental padre, now of the permanent chaplain corps, Ottawa, heads the editorial committee, with Lt.-Col. R. F. Widdifield, commanding officer of the regiment, chairman of the finance committee.

Mr. Mowat, a professional writer, is the author of "People of the Deer," a story of the Arctic and Eskimos which at present is rated one of the best sellers in Britain. It has received much acclaim in the United States and Canada. Mr. Mowat spent considerable time in the north gathering material.

He hopes with the help of the material and background data he compiles for the writing of the regimental history, to write a war novel as soon as his historical assignment is completed.

Public Christmas Parties Can Have Firemen Present

A member of the local fire department will attend at all public Christmas parties in the city where trees and other decorations are set up, should children are attending. Fire Chief Bruce announced. Such attention would be offered free of charge where the request was made by persons organizing the parties.

The chief went on to say that the fire department would provide a fireman to make an inspection of the Christmas trees and lights prior to the party and for protection would test a man to the party if this precaution was required.

Bail of $20,000 Set for Two Men Not Forthcoming

Bail of $20,000 each was set Saturday for Mickey Metrunitz, 40, and Walter Johnston, 36, following their being committed for trial on charges of breaking and entering and having stolen goods in their possession. Robt. Knutsen, 34, a thirg member of the party was released on $10,000 bail, but bail for Metrunitz and Johnston had not been met today.

The three men were committed for trial on Friday by Magistrate T. Y. Wills on charges arising out of the break-in a month ago of the Trinidad Lesebleds office here where the safe was found blown.

Moira Beverages Open New Plant

Illustrating this city's continued expansion, the Belleville Industrial Commission has announced through James T. Davis, secretary-manager, that the Chamber of Commerce, the inauguration of a new industry. The recent addition to Belleville industry is the Moira Beverages, located at 291 Coleman St., the building which at one time housed the Belleville Steam Laundry.

According to the management of the new firm, the plant is in full operation and employing five local workers. Manufacturers of the soft drink, Pepsi Cola, a sister firm is located in Smith's Falls. Work began in the new plant on the first of this month. During the summer months, the manager expects to double his staff.

'Y' Junior Leaders Corps Is Organized

Another step to improve the quality of the "Y" Boys program was added last Friday at the Y.M.C.A., with the organization of a Junior Leaders Corps. This group is the junior counterpart of the Senior Leaders Corps and its aim is to train boys to act as leaders of boys squads and teams and to receive fundamentals and training for future senior leaders and instructors for general physical education activities.

During election of officers, the following were elected: Dave Deacon, president; Maurice Wright, Paul Kennedy, secretary; Bob Bevers, treasurer; Jim Meagher, social convener; John O'Neil, sergeant-at-arms. Other members of the corps are: Mike Tatham, Keith Brown, Jim Ramsbotham, Alex Churchill, Arnold Quinsey.

The corps will be meeting regularly every Friday afternoon. At the recent meeting a new physical education committee and approved by the Board of Directors, a limited number of nine-year-old boys will be accepted for a special nine-year-old boys' class that will start early next month.

IN MEMORIAM

ASSELSTINE. — In loving memory of my dear father Burton Asselstine, who passed away December 9th, 1951.

A beautiful memory dearer than gold
A husband's love we shall never be told.
Alone, somehow, he stands by my side;
And his precious guidance, death cannot divide.
For deep in my heart his memory is kept
Of one I still love, and cannot forget.
And though the years may fly many
I will remember.
I will remember you, dear father
Burton, of you.
—Lovingly remembered by his wife Lisa. 2M

Curved Ridge Defenders Kill Twenty Chinese

By RILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WEST SECTOR, Korea (CP)—United Nations troops defending Curved Ridge, known as "the Hook," killed or wounded an estimated 20 Chinese during weekend patrolling.

A 25-man party went out in near-zero weather Friday night and reached a Communist all-trench outpost, achieving full tactical surprise for the first time in months in this sector.

A corporal leading one section said: "The Chinese were so surprised when we appeared we could see their mouths dropping in the moonlight."

Five of the eight Communists there were killed or wounded at close range. Three escaped.

Another section pushed on and mowed down two more Chinese as they were about to flee.

Saturday night, a three-man reconnaissance patrol sent out from the Hook to check enemy activity reported 14 Chinese approaching. The battalion's artillery and mortars three times were called down on the enemy party. All were believed to have been casualties.

A communique by the United States Eighth Army Saturday night said raiders from the 25th Canadian Brigade on the village of Korangpo killed four Chinese and wounded three in a fierce skirmish.

Korangpo is near the Imjin river which flows to the sea at Munsan, some 10 miles to the southwest. It is west of Little Gibraltar, the rocky hill which for more than a year has been identified with the position of parts of the 25th Canadian brigade.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices turned mixed in early afternoon stock market trading today as the market fluctuated trendlessly.

Volume for the first three hours totalled 678,000 shares.

Papers weakened in afternoon trading, depressing the industrials list. Steels, refining oils and manufacturing companies also slipped. Foods showed strength in spite of a loss of more than $1 in Acadia Atlantic Pr.

Senior golds lost strength in light trading but support for junior producers and some prospects buoyed the list. Campbell and Dalhite were active in juniors while, among the prospects, Bevcon, Gunnar and Akaitcho gained. Holding companies were firm.

Western oils slipped lower although a few issues made good gains gridoil, New Superior and Canadian Explorers added pennies while Canadian Atlantic, Cons. Allenbee, General A. Home Oil and New Concord slipped. Banff Oil, a new listing, sold about 500 shares between $1.85 and $1.90.

Higher-priced base metals gained while other issues slipped. East Rim and Rix gained. Minda-Scotia dropped from 16 cents to 9½ cents in the first three hours.

24 Die Violently In Eastern Canada During Week-end

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fire caused the death of eight persons in Eastern Canada during the week-end. They were among 24 who died violently.

Ontario's toll was 17, Quebec's five.— all by fire — and Nova Scotia's two.

Four members of a Berthierville, Que., family lost their lives when fire destroyed their house. They were J. Alfred Dumont, 44, his wife 39, and two of their sons, Robert, 9, and Gilles, 3. Another Quebecer, Camille Marchand, 70, died in a fire which started in a back shed in central Montreal.

In Trenton, victims of a fire which gutted a basement apartment were: LAC Joseph Louis Clifford Savage, 23, his wife, June, 19, and their 10-month-old son, Robert Michael.

Two Triple Deaths

Two triple-death accidents were reported. Francis Reid, 16, of Holiday, Ont., and Gordon Ivay, 31, of Belleville, and Robert Jones, 22, of Shannonville were killed when two cars smashed head-on near Tweed, 22 miles north of Belleville.

Three Lancaster men, William Arnott, Maurice Collette and another identified as a Mr. Leroux, were fatally injured when their car went off the road 15 miles east of Cornwall.

Other Ontario traffic deaths: Henry Witzel, 76, of Kitchener, knocked down by a car; Pte. Frank Hamilton, 38, of Camp Borden, in a car that skidded and crashed into a hydro pole 20 miles west of Ottawa; Frederick Henry Forward, 56, of Sudbury, injured when struck by a truck on the city's outskirts; John Slott, 21, by an auto while riding a bicycle at Guelph; John Hockin, 75, of Brantford, struck by a car; Donald Keith, 17, when a car went out of control near London.

Skull Crushed

Barbara Barnard, 4, of Sudbury, died of a crushed skull when she leaned out of a rising elevator. William Arnold Jack, 10, was drowned in Larder Lake while playing with other children on thin ice.

At Sydney, N. S., Barbara Myatt, 6, and Renato Moeller, 7, were drowned while sliding on thin ice.

WINTER FLEET ARRIVING

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal's winter fleet of lake and river ships which tie up here during the closed season is beginning to show up in port but many are unable to dock at their regular berths because ocean-going vessels are still unloading. The winter fleet is expected to total 15 ships. The Lachine canal system closed traffic at midnight Saturday.

Woman Editor Retires After 50 Years Service

FREDERICTON (CP) — Mrs. A. E. (Annie) Mathewson, one of the few women city editors in Canadian journalism, retired Saturday after 50 years of service on the staff of the Daily Gleaner. Mrs. Mathews started her career running errands and feeding paper into the manually-operated press when the Gleaner was a tri-weekly.

She became a member of the editorial department after the late James H. Crockett, then the Gleaner's publisher, needed a reporter to cover a city council meeting. He gave her the job.

New Federation Of Labor Formed

MONTREAL (CP)—The Quebec Federation of Labor has been created here as the central voice of 50,000 union members affiliated with the Canadian Congress of Labor.

About 200 delegates attended sessions during the week-end to launch the new body and adopt a constitution.

The federation will correspond in pattern to similar Quebec groups of the Trades and Labor Congress and the Canadian Catholic Confederation of Labor.

A. R. Mosher, president of the CCL, attended the opening session Saturday.

The federation will ask the CCL for a charter. The constitution adopted is similar to that of the Ontario Federation of Labor.

WOULD MERGE COLONIES

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (Reuters) —the Capricorn African Society today proposed federation of six British colonies in central and west Africa in to one self-governing country. The six are Northern and Southern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika, with a population of 26,000,000 and a total land area of 1,000,000 square miles.

Men, Children, Women Among 37 Who Perish

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP)—A trans-Atlantic Cuban air liner exploded soon after it took off for Havana and carried all but four of the 41 persons aboard to death in shark-studded waters capped by burning gasoline.

Men, women and children were among the 37 who perished in the crash early Saturday five miles off this British colonial vacation resort. The victims were Spaniards, Cubans and Mexicans.

U.S. Air Force and Coast Guard crash boats picked the four survivors, three women and a man, from a choppy sea littered by debris, including a pair of baby shoes, a bracelet, rubber fittings from the plane's seats.

One who died, Sosa, was operated by the Cubana Airlines, a subsidiary of Pan American. It carried a Cuban crew of eight and 22 passengers.

It was westbound from Madrid.

Farmers in Denmark operate more than 1,300 co-operative dairies, plus bacon factories and slaughterhouses.

30-Cent Price On Cigarets Is Demanded

ALLISTON (CP)—A 30-cent price on Canadian cigarets was demanded by 200 southern Ontario tobacco growers at a meeting here.

A resolution passed Saturday night said it would be economically unsound for growers to cut their acreage by one-third this year while sales of smuggled and low-grade American cigarets are increasing.

J. D. Bowerman, chairman, said the Canadian tobacco crop could be almost doubled if the package price of cigarets was reduced to 30 cents by tax cuts. The government tax revenue would not be lowered and growers, workers and consumers would benefit, he said.

Julian Ferguson, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Simcoe North, said that land now available could produce about the amount of tobacco required if the price was 30 cents.

FAMILY OF THREE

Sgt. Anderson, Mrs. Southwell related, found the front door locked. He pounded on the door repeatedly and calling, "Hello, is there anybody in there?" The curtains and blinds were off the windows of the upstairs apartment indicating the house was empty. Sgt. Anderson then ran around to the back door looking for signs of life. He forced the door and tried to grope his way to the cellar.

Searched on Knees

The smoke and heat drove him back to the landing at the top of the cellar stairs. He continued to yell and bang on the door with his fist but was unanswered. Finally he got into the upstairs apartment. He got down on his hands and knees and crawled about from one room to another before he gave up the search without finding anybody.

In the meantime the people outside aroused next-door-neighbor, Bernard MacDonald, and the neighbor across the street, Gerald Penlee. The fire department was called. By this time the fire in the cellar was a red glowing mass. And at no time did Sgt. Anderson or the others hear voices or movement in the cellar.

Fireman Joe Hastings, the only fireman on night shift, brought the pumper to the scene in good time. He had taken the telephone call but was not told that people occupied the basement of the house. He saw the fire was making headway and hurried about the job of laying hose and getting a stream of water into play. Other regular and volunteer firemen arrived later, while water was being poured into the cellar.

Fireman Bob Mills wearing a Scott airpack was the first to view the tragic scene in the cellar. He came across the father sprawled on the floor between the kitchen and the living room. The mother lay on the side of the bed with her head down between her arms reaching out toward the crib. The baby was still in his night clothing. All of the three were dead.

The mother lay on the side of the bed with her head down between her arms reaching out toward the crib. The baby was still in his night clothing. All of the three were dead.

Heat and smoke charred and blistered the apartment walls and household furnishings. The baby's high chair sat between two regular chairs at the kitchen table. His playpen with water-soaked toys still strewn about the bottom of it was across the room near the Quebec heater. A burned scorched portrait of the baby laid curled up on the top of the dresser in the bedroom. There were other signs indicating that the Savages were home-loving people.

Devoted Couple

LAC. Savage and his wife were known as a fine devoted couple. They had been married in St. Peter's Church here.

Mrs. Savage was the former June Casselman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Casselman, of Malone. Her husband was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Louis Savage, of Montreal. They met in Trenton at a dance. LAC. Savage worked as a mechanic at No. 6 Repair Depot.

It is apparent that the fire was caused by overheated stovepipes. The small apartment soon became a raging inferno and the family were partially overcome by smoke and heat as they slept.

Mrs. Fred MacDonald, of College Street, a friend of the family remembers last seeing Mr. Savage on Saturday morning when he came over to her house to borrow a wrench from her husband. "He talked about Christmas with June and the baby, she related. He seemed in high spirits at the time."

Arrangements for the family funeral are in the hands of R.C.A.F. authorities who have not yet set a date for the triple burial. The bodies are resting at the Weaver Funeral Home.

CHARGE FUR COAT THEFT

TORONTO (CP)—Police arrested a 37-year-old mother of two children Saturday night for shoplifting and said they discovered loot worth $15,000 scattered in the last three years. Mrs. Audrey Hindle was charged with stealing a mink coat. Included in the haul, apparently untouched since they were taken, police said, were a mink coat and stole, other fur pieces, 31 radios, 34 pairs of shoes, a speedometer, a sink, a shock absorber, children's toys, lamp attachments and shaving soap.

MARMORA

Juvenile Boys O.L. Elects Officers

Marmora — Officers of Marmora Juvenile Boys' Orange Lodge, No. 34, held its annual election in the Orange Hall on Wednesday evening with Guardian W. J. Cottrell presiding.

Officers Elected.

The election resulted as follows:

Worthy Chairman, Geo. Horton; past Worthy Chairman, Douglas Phillips; vice-chairman, Donald Tandy; chaplain, John Brown; secretary, Carl Vilneff; treasurer, Charles Brown; 1st. lecturer, Paul Prestick; 2nd. lecturer, Beverley Osborne; 1st. standard bearer, Elwood Joner; 2nd. standard bearer, James Cross; 1st. guard, Joseph Gray; 2nd. guard, Eddie McMurray.

Assistant Guardian Frank Cole acted as marshal for the installation which followed. One new member was initiated in the course of the evening.

Mrs. Thomas Young, who lives in the sixth concession of Marmora township, was surprised to sight a robin near her home on Wednesday and noted it to be as chirpy as its mates are in the spring time.

Mrs. James Thomson and two children spent a few days in Oshawa last week with her mother, Mrs. Harding.

Provincial Officer Robert Nayler, of Hearst, has been spending a vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold P. Nayler.

CAR SIDESWIPES

Mr. Reid said Francis has worked all summer at a canning factory to get enough money to buy his car. Last week he had made the last payment on the car.

Mr. Reid said his son had left home about seven o'clock and apparently had picked up Wayne DeMille and Edith Stone before going on to Corbyville to pick up Miss Rose. At 11.30 Mr. Reid said he had received the phone call informing of the accident.

The accident had occurred at the north-bound Reid car and the southbound Elvins auto carrying six occupants crashed on the long curve.

Jones was reported to have been the driver of the Elvins auto.

Ambulance drivers called to the scene described the accident as the worst they had seen in years.

Thrown From Car

The bodies of the two dead men and of one other occupant of the Elvins car were found on the highway and in the ditch. They had been thrown from the car as it rolled on the highway. The side of the car had been ripped out by the force of the impact.

Elvins and Jones were employees of the C. N. R., the latter being a section hand at Shannonville. Brushey was employed by the Hydro in the Niagara district and had returned home in Tweed for the week-end while Crossley was co-operator of Colleges Motors, garage and service station on College street.

Police had difficulty in identifying the bodies of Jones and Crossley and the last body was not positively identified until 11 hours after the accident. Jones and Crossley were married and each had a child two years old.

Enquiry Opened

Enquiry into the deaths of the 3 men and youth was held Saturday morning.

Cpl. Jack Hatch and Constable A. Bolyea of the Ontario Provincial Police detachment office and with Chief George Spratt of Tweed investigated the accident, assisted by officers from Belleville headquarters. Police set up barricades and detoured traffic until the scene of the accident could be measured and photographed by daylight. The two wrecked cars were not removed until shortly before noon Sunday.

An inquest looking into the deaths of the two men and youth was ordered, the preliminary hearing being held Sun., morning at Tweed before Coroner Dr. M.G. Dales. The hearing was adjourned until January 8th.

FOUR TEEN-AGERS

SOMERSET, Pa. (AP)—Four high school pupils returning from a dance burned to death today as their auto skidded off a bridge near this southwestern Pennsylvania town, plunged 60 feet to railroad tracks and burst into flames.

NAB WOMAN SMUGGLER

LONDON. (CP) — A woman from Paris Friday was sentenced to one year in jail and fined $5,000 for trying to smuggle 208 contraband watches under her corset. A woman customs inspector nabbed Rosalie Silber, 45, as she landed here from Paris. The watches worth more than $14,000 were in a body belt under her corset.

Four Persons Perish in Ocean On World Cruise

BRIGANTINE, N.J. (CP)—Four persons who set out from New York on a round-the-world cruise perished in an Atlantic storm because they took to a foot dinghy instead of remaining in their 45-foot two-masted yawl which had gone aground.

The bodies of Charlotte Laberge, 30, her son, Lance, 11, and another youth, John Ahlberg, 18, were found Saturday washed up on the beach near Atlantic City. Stephen Laberge, who gave up his job in California to go on the cruise, is missing and believed dead. The trip was begun Thursday.

The four took to the dinghy after the yawl went aground on a sandbar. They didn't know the vessel would reach watertight and safe until found the next day.

LONDONERS GET

A six-man gang attacked an American airman in a suburb. They punched him in the face and robbed him of his wristwatch and money.

Cattle Choke To Death

In the city's vast Earl's Court auditorium, where the annual Smithfield livestock show was under way, two prize cattle choked to death and four others were slaughtered to put them out of their misery. Penicillin and whisky were given to dozens of other suffering animals.

The British Automobile Association said it had never seen worse weather. Hotels were jammed over the week-end by motorists unable to leave the city for their outlying homes.

Since Friday the dark pall has been thick and inescapable, across the 46-mile width of this city area of 9,000,000 persons. The thick layer of grime still air clothes, upholstery, hands and hair, even indoors.

Ambulances and fire trucks crawled to answer emergency calls behind walking guides who staggered ahead carrying blazing torches.

Squad cars of police were useless.

Cost Several Lives

The freak fog, which left towns only 15 miles south of London in bright sunshine, already had cost several lives, dozens of injuries and had caused a rumble millions of pour-ds.

Criminals had their best cover in years.

"I'm afraid we shall find some bodies floating around the docks when this lot lifts," a patrolman observed.

With lights burning through the day in every home and office, the electricity consumption soared, forcing the nationalized electricity authority to order the first power cut of the winter.

With 300 airliners grounded, the fog has cost the airlines $6 a minute since Friday morning.

Fires have multiplied while firemen were stalled in the fog. Blackjack gangster struck and melted into the darkness. Desperately ailing persons with hours for ambulances. But Londoners also laughed at some of the less tragic confusion caused by the blackout.

Could Not Reach Studios

Musicians who failed to reach their studios in time for broadcasts threw the BBC into such a muddle that those on the job could not assemble musical re-rdings in time.

Even ducks in the p-rks got lost and landed exhausted and bewildered on c- bound highways.

Prince Alexander of Yugoslavia was driving his aunt, the Duchess of Kent, to 1ga London but became lost in the fog. A patrolman approached his stranded automobile and asked if he could help.

"I would be glad to show the way to Buckingham Palace. I have to get my aunt there," the Prince replied.

"Don't be sarcastic. I'm only trying to help," replied the cop.

It took quite a time to persuade him it was not a bad joke.

Weddings

JANKOWSKI—MARTIN

St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, December 6th at 2:30 p.m. when Carol Audrey Martin, of Belleville, daughter of Mrs. Ernest Martin and the late Mr. Martin, became the bride of Julian Joseph Jankowski, Toronto, son of Mrs. E. Jankowski, and the late Mr. E. Jankowski. Archdeacon Arthur Smith, rector of the church, officiated before a background of bronze and yellow chrysanthemums and ferns.

Mr. Jack Wheatley, organist of the church, rendered the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Price Morris, was lovely in her bridal gown of white slipper satin with Chantilly lace bodice. She wore a matching headdress of white satin and veil of tulle illusion, and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Margaret Strachan, of Toronto, was maid of honor, and Miss Margaret Graham, also of Toronto, was bridesmaid. Both were gowned alike in bronze lace taffeta, with matching jackets of iridescility lace. They carried similar bouquets of bronze and yellow chrysanthemums.

Mr. Ernest Jankowski of Belleville, attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Harry Smith, and Mr. Norbert Young, both of Belleville, acted as ushers.

Following the wedding ceremony, a reception was held at Golden Acre Inn, Kingston Road, where the bride's table, covered in long teale blue crepe with lace inserts, matching hat and corsage of white roses, received the guests.

For the wedding trip to points east, the bride chose a green tweed printed silk with fitted navy silk coat and matching hat, navy shoes and purse, and corsage of white roses and grey Kiddkin topcoat. Mr. and Mrs. Jankowski will reside in Toronto.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Picton and Sudbury.

PRIEST—VAN ANDEL

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday, November 29, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hounsome, Minnie, when Marian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Van Andel, Orillia, was united in marriage to Glenn Earl Priest, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Priest, Foxboro. Rev. Conboy Orillia, officiated at the ceremony which was performed against a background of mauve and white mums.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in a gown of white satin with matching hat and wore a double orchid corsage.

The bride's twin sister, Elizabeth, as bridesmaid wore pale green satin with orchid spray corsage.

Mr. Gordon Priest, Belleville, attended his brother as groomsman.

A buffet luncheon was served after which the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip through Eastern Ontario. On their return they will reside in Minico.

'Ready for Christmas' Topic at W.A. Meeting

The regular meeting of the Kingston Road W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. Ross Gay on Wednesday evening. Mrs. M. Lee presided and the meeting was graciously welcomed members and guests.

The treasurer's annual report was most gratifying and a donation was given to the Salvation Army Christmas Cheer Fund. Mrs. Reid gave the annual report on cards and flowers sent to the sick and shut-ins.

The program for the evening was under the direction of Mrs. MacDonald, the devotional service was based on the birth of Christ and was conducted by Mrs. MacDonald, assisted by Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Farnsworth, Mrs. Creelman and Mrs. Gervan.

Readings by Mrs. Blakely and Miss Redner were much enjoyed by all.

Guest Speaker

The guest speaker, Mrs. David Ison, president of the Belleville Presbytery W.A., was introduced by Mrs. MacDonald. Mrs. David son gave a most interesting and inspiring address on the theme "Are You Ready for Christmas".

Following the address, the song (my beautiful white Gift", and "The Cradle Song". She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Jack Parrott.

Appreciative thanks were tendered Mrs. Davidson by Mrs. Farnsworth on behalf of the members of the W.A.

The slate of officers for 1953 was then brought in.

A pleasant social period followed during which refreshments were served by Mrs. Watkins, Mrs. Hall, and Mrs. Holeway.

C.W.A. League Holds Euchre Party

The final pre-Christmas euchre party under auspices of Catholic Women's League was held Tuesday evening at the Knights of Columbus Hall with a splendid attendance.

The winning ladies were: Mrs. T. Cope, Mrs. Fitzgibbon, and Mrs. J. Burrows. While the gentlemen's prizes went to R. Kennedy, G. McWilliams and E. Henn. The door prize was won by Miss Peg Boyle.

Following the card games, refreshments were served by the committee in charge which included, Mrs. F. Domenico, convener; Mrs. P. Feeney, Mrs. Carl Ray and Mrs. E. Bowers.

Special thanks go to the gentlemen who have helped at these parties in taking admissions and directing the play, and also thanks to the many patrons who have attended the series. It is hoped that the parties may be resumed after the Christmas season.

'Home Foundation Of Nation' Says Mrs. Burkett

Pine Grove Women's Institute met for their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. J. Brown Chatterton, with Mrs. H. Detior, president, presiding and a good attendance of members and visitors.

It was decided to hold another social evening in the school on December 10, under the convership of Mesdames A. Tanner, J. Campbell and F. Campbell.

A box is to be sent to Walter Mould, a former student at Marlbank Hill School who is now serving in Korea.

Guest Speaker

Mrs. L. Finkle, convener of Community Activities, and Public Relations, then introduced Mrs. Burkett, district president of the West Hastings District Women's Institutes.

Mrs. Burkett drew to the members attention many matters concerning the district as a whole; the grant fund for the club girls; lunch at the district annual the question of a district program book; that the Federated Women's Institute is first and foremost an educational institution, Use should be made of the Institute library, the travelling library and the exhibits available all of which offer educational assistance. The provincial president Mrs. Purcell, recommends that the W.I. make a study of the various organizations which make up the United Nations. Information is available from 1207 Bay Street.

The W.I. booth at the Royal Winter Fair and bus trips which two branches in the district had taken were also mentioned.

Mrs. Burkitt urged the members to remember that the home is the foundation of the nation. The character is planted in the home it will blossom in the nation. This foundation must be good. The homemaker has great responsibilities and opportunities. We have no time for wasted frictions. We must work together congenially in unison."

In conclusion Mrs. Burkitt used the following quotation: "Grant me the serenity to accept things which I cannot change, the courage to change things which I can, and the wisdom to know the difference."

Mrs. F. Lindenfield thanked the speaker for her inspiring address.

Mrs. F. Lindenfield read "Morning Beatitudes". "Blessed are those who come for they shall receive inspiration;

Blessed are those who sow in time for their seeds shall be lifted by the devotional;

Blessed are those who sit in front, for they shall hear all that is said; Blessed are those who speak clearly, and slowly, for their message shall reach all hearers; Blessed are those who show themselves friendly for they shall have many friends;

Blessed are those who sing, for they are praising God; Blessed are those who look for help, for they shall find it; Blessed are those who bring a friend, for they are doing that friend a service; Blessed are those who tell others of help received, for they shall be witnessing; Blessed are those who stay to the end, for they shall reap all the benefits."

'Shopping Hints', Topic At Kiwanis L.A.

The regular meeting of the Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary was held at the Kiwanis Centre on Thursday evening.

Each member invited a guest. The guests were introduced and then welcomed by the president, Mrs. V. J. White, who expressed her appreciation at such a large attendance and hoped that all would enjoy the fellowship of the evening and the sumptuous potluck supper provided by the members and arranged by Mrs. F. R. Wotten and committee.

The president introduced the president-elect for 1953, Mrs. H. H. Murray, who thanked the club for their confidence in her and said that she would work to the best of her ability for the welfare of the club in the forthcoming year.

A sing-song was conducted by Mrs. R. E. Kuntze and Mrs. O. Stanton.

Guest Speaker

Mrs. H. H. Murray introduced Miss Isabel Walker as speaker for the evening. Miss Ford is head of the Speakers Bureau of the Public Relations office of the T. Eaton Company. Her topic was "Shopping Hints", the interesting story of how Eaton's shops the world for merchandise, based on the fascinating top of Christmas Shopping and augmented her remarks with a display of merchandise.

Mrs. H. G. Emerson briefly thanked the speaker for her interesting remarks and for the elaborate display that she had presented.

Anglican W.A. Elects Officers

The Anglican Woman's Auxiliary of Foxboro affiliated with St. John's Church, Stirling, met recently at the home of the president, Mrs. Lorne Ash, a good number being present including Rev. Secker, rector of St. John's Church, Stirling and Mrs. Secker. Reports from the various officers and treasurer were given leaving a good balance on hand.

The new officers for 1953 are: president, Mrs. H. Gay; vice president, Mrs. H. Joslin; secretary, Mrs. M. Burleigh; card treasurer, Mrs. Arnold Smith.

It was decided to hold a Christmas concert for the children at the home of Mrs. H. Gay. Mrs. Ash served refreshments.

Fla."

Mrs. L. Finkle read excerpts from the Area Convener's report on Community Activities and Public Relations, noting that the institutes are judged by members.

Donations to various causes, such as the crippled children, the children's aid and the tractor and four fund are all good publicity. Use local talent whenever possible.

Mrs. A. Tanner read "A Trick of Fate" and Current Events were given by Mrs. F. Campbell.

At the conclusion of the program refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed.

The Christmas program and exchange of gifts will be held at Mrs. L. Finkle's home on December 30th.

C.N.R. Athletic Assoc. L.A. Presents Slate 1953 Officers

The monthly meeting of the Canadian National Railways Athletic Association Ladies' Auxiliary was held recently in the L.O.O.F. Hall, Front St.

The president, Mrs. G. Rodgers presided.

1953 Officers

Following the business discussion, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Johnston, chairman of the nominating committee, who then presented the following slate of officers for 1953: Mrs. G. Rodgers, past president; Mrs. B. Cross, president; Mrs. W. Grey, 1st. vice-president; Mrs. J. Ronsky, 2nd. vice-president; Mrs. H. Boyle, secretary; Mrs. R. Johnston, treasurer.

The Kaydettes were in charge of the entertainment. Mrs. Large, Mrs. Upton and Mrs. Jordan of Beauty Counsellor gave the group a facial beauty demonstration which was followed by refreshments by the Kaydette group.

Women's Activities

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

Marmora — The Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's United Church recently held its November meeting at the parsonage with Mrs. R. J. Crawford as hostess. Mrs. Crawford was also in charge of the worship period, the theme of which was "Education for Living," using the Bible as a means of grace.

Mrs. H. C. Barlow accompanied for the hymns and Mrs. T. J. Bateman took the Bible reading. In Mrs. Peck's absence through illness, Mrs. Bateman gave the treasurer's report.

Nominating Committee

Mesdames H. C. Barlow, J. Sproul and E. C. Prentice were appointed as the nominating committee for next year's slate of officers. Mrs. W. F. Tupper and Mrs. J. Appleton will have charge of the Christmas program to be held in the church parlor.

At this meeting, the study book is to be held over until January. At the November meeting this book "Villages of Africa" was introduced by Mrs. Bateman, assisted by Mrs. Crawford. The latter closed the meeting with prayer after which a social half hour was enjoyed by the members.

W.A. Officers

The December meeting of St. Andrew's Women's Association was held on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. A. W. Drew in Delora. Each circle took part in a fine Christmas program of readings and the singing of Christmas carols.

The new slate of officers for 1953 are: president, Mrs. Thomas J. Bateman; vice president, Mrs. Charles Airhart; financial secretary, Mrs. F. R. Wells; recording secretary, Mrs. James Appleton. It was decided to hold the January meeting at the home of Mrs. R. G. Walsh in Delora.

Thirty Relatives Hold Surprise Birthday Party

On Saturday evening, about 30 relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Joe Thrasher, 40 Donald Street, for a surprise party to celebrate her 74th birthday.

The evening was spent in a sing-song and games after which suitable gifts were presented to Mrs. Thrasher and everyone sang "Happy Birthday".

Refreshments were served and a lovely birthday cake with lighted candles was brought in.

The evening closed with another sing-song and everyone wishing Mrs. Thrasher many "Happy Returns."

GORE

The Gore — Mrs. Gordon Waterhouse was hostess for the November meeting of Victoria W.A. on Wednesday evening. There was a fine attendance. Rev. F. Townsend was present and conducted the annual election of officers which resulted in 1953's officers being re-elected, with Mrs. C. Calnan as president; Mrs. H. Montgomery as recording secretary and Mrs. Waterhouse, secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Brown invited the Christmas meeting to her home.

The school children at both Centre and Gilead's are busily rehearsing for Christmas concerts.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Kirkby, of Ganaonque; and Mrs. Carl Bryant, Wellington, were Friday guests at the L. R. Brickman home.

Mrs. Hubbs spent the weekend with her daughter, Mrs. Harvey Brown and family, second concession.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Pulver were guests of the Belleville Agriculture Society at their banquet at the Kiwanis Centre on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brooks and Glen, River Valley, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Green and family.

A number from this line enjoyed the picture, "The King's Man", at Redneresville church on Monday evening. Rev. Beckel, of Milford, was in charge.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Bill and Barbara, engaged, may send Christmas cards together.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We're just become engaged, Bill and I, and we think it would be wonderful if we could send our Christmas cards together! Would this be proper? Please say "Yes," if you can.

Bill and Barbara

YES! There it is, right out loud! It will be correct, and, as you say, "wonderful" . . . bless your heart . . . for you to send your Christmas card together.

Note 1—Such intimate cards should be sent only to your and your Bill's relatives and intimate friends.

Note 2—A particularly attractive way to send these Twosome Cards: you sign your name below the printed which may be hand-written or printed), and your fiancee (how do you like the look-and-sound of that new word in your life?) to sign his name on the line below. (He, first before either name, of course . . . no "Smith" or "Jones" . . . for the finishing two couples at the theatre or dinner.)

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

For the first time since we were married, my husband and I are inviting another couple to go with us to the theatre. We have bought the tickets and this for a long time and we are interested. What is the correct seating arrangement— Miriam

Your husband should ask the other man guest to go first into the row . . . then you take your seat next to him . . . next your husband, the host . . . and last, your husband, the host, next to his wife.

Post-wedding reception wiser in this circumstance

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

(1) We're to be married soon in the Church House. I am Catholic, my fiance is not. I am not planning to wear a white dress. What would you suggest I wear? I would like to have a long dress thing for my going-away costume.

(2) What should the groom wear? Does it have to be a blue suit as I have heard? Still, he is not at all becoming to him, and he isn't comfortable wearing it. Would levvers be just as good?

(3) Not many relatives and friends can be invited to the Parish House, because it is small. So my mother would like to have a lunch-eon in a restaurant after the ceremony, for our parents, grandparents, brothers and sisters, also them to have a reception in the afternoon for our relatives and the friends. I don't mind having the luncheon, but I don't care to have the reception. We can have only two or three days for our honeymoon, as that is all the time my fiance can have off. We wanted to leave as soon after the wedding as possible. What is your suggestion?

M.

(1) Do plan to wear your going-away costume: either a street-length dress, (wool or jersey or silk, or whatever material will be appropriate for your trip) with topcoat; or, very attractive for this occasion, a dressmaker-type suit, of your most becoming dark shade, perhaps with dressy blouse, topcoat.

(2) Blue suit for the groom is not at all a 'must.' Brown is quite all right, if becoming (which it very often isn't), or tan, or perhaps best of all, a dark-gray, becoming to most men.

(3) My suggestion is that you leave either directly after the ceremony, or directly after the

Put Your Waffle Iron to Work

By Mary Moore

There is more than one good thing about waffles, and one of them is that waffle recipes may be cut down to serve only two and there is no waste.

Cooking for two people poses problems that a cook for a family of six does not understand. I am asked for help from young brides who are at their wits' end and who get tired of meals.

Since Mrs. Roy Y. is hopefully watching for some waffle talk we'll combine the old requests today.

Dear old Pete—he is loaded with responsibility for so many things that I suppose he can shoulder our waffle department too. He makes 'em. He has several recipes that are beauties. His latest came from one of the restaurants he frequents. He keeps correcting me on the "brother" stuff. I'll give you this (pardon recipe first, then further on an everyday one.

SOUR CREAM WAFFLES

(By Pete)

Grumblingly sift some flour—better use one cup, not measure—then sift all back in the sifter with 1 1-2 teaspoon salt, 4 1-2 teaspoons baking powder ("the kind in that red can"), and 1 tablespoon sugar. Another worthy thing about the dear kid is that he never balks at measuring accurately.) Separate three eggs. (He cunningly does this by placing the yolks in the shell and one on the counter!) You know enough to separate the whites from the yolks. Beat the heck out of the yolks and add 1 pint (1 2-3 cups) heavy sour cream bought for the purpose— it's much cheaper than sweet cream. You must have heavy sour cream to obtain its butter fat content to obtain its butter fat fits dry ingredients over this and stir until just blended. Whip the egg whites up like fury until they are stiff and fold them in. Pete said that this I know with flourishes that threaten to spread the batter all over the kitchen! Have waffle iron heated to exact point indicated for "bake" on the dial. The batter is a little stiff so spread it evenly not quite to edge. Bake to crisp gold. Note by, to, with a goodly supply of butter and maple syrup, not forgetting at least that waffle iron working overtime.

EVERYDAY WAFFLES

(By practical me)

Sift one flour and measure 1 2-4 cups. Resift it with 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt. Beat 2 egg yolks until very light and fluffy. Add gradually about 2 to 6 tablespoons melted butter or cooking oil. Make a well in the center of the sifted dry ingredients. Pour the liquids ingredients in this well and combine with a few swift strokes. Beat until stiff but not dry the egg whites—3. Fold into batter until barely blended. Bake in preheated waffle iron. Honey stirred into melter butter is an excellent sauce. Or serve with a sort of hard sauce made by creaming together 3 tablespoons butter, 1-2 cup icing sugar and 3-4 teaspoon cinnamon. Chill this and serve cold.

APPLE CINNAMON WAFFLES

(Dessert)

To recipe for Everyday Waffles add 1 or 2 cups finely chopped raw pared apples, 1 1-2 teaspoons cinnamon and 2 tablespoons sugar. Use for dessert. Anybody with a wisp of imagination can think of variations that they would be tempted with ice cream.

CHEESE WAFFLES

(Supper)

Here's where your waffle iron proves a friend in need. If unexpected company descends on you make cheese waffles and top them with a creamed mix of curried eggs or a vegetable such as quick-cooked frozen peas or creamed ham or chicken or asparagus. Simply add 1 cup grated cheddar or finely shredded process cheese to Everyday Waffles.

GI. WAITS

GENEVA, N.Y. (AP)—After sweating it out for 33-hours in front of a used-car lot, Cpl. Gerald Beachly bought an automobile for 99 cents. The 22-year-old airman parted himself on a box in front of the Pichler Pontiac Corp. office at midnight last Tuesday. The 1937 car was the prize buy in the company's second anniversary sale.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Remodelling the hairdo

Hair stylist are offering modes that are chic, elegant and youthful. They are not standardized. The good-looks candidate has a wide choice. Every operator can be found in even the smallest hamlet. With professional services easily obtainable, it would seem that there is no excuse for outmoded or scrambled arrangements.

Interesting is that some women just haven't the knack of keeping their hair in apple-pie order. These same women may drag heavily on the beauty budget for shampoos, permanent waves sets and rinses; look smart and lovely after going through the good-looks hopper; but still appear untidy at other times. They are not discerning. Why not getting a hairdo they should be mindful of what suits them. Next instructions, learn the hairdo tricks that are necessary for charming effects.

She would rather have a becoming hairdo.

Even the thinnest thatch can be made lovely by the permanent. A properly accomplished and the hair kept beautifully clean so that the silky shafts carry lustre. Scalp care is important, because fine hair gets foul and stink from the circulatory streams. A five-minute friction every night is well worth the time and the effort. Spread out fingers and scratch the scalp; push and roll it until it glows.

One must not be too close touch with what is going on in the style world if one is not to be dated. Girls and young women take to new whimsies eagerly; they find them tempting and exciting. Look at the way the pony tail became a frenzy. You tie up the straight material, do the fine portions of your halo any way that suits you, and fasten it with a pin.

In contrast, there is the middle-age or elderly stand-patter. She explains that she would rather have a becoming hairdo than one that is the prevailing mode. She doesn't realize that an old fashion effect is not becoming, because it makes her look older.

Beauty operators have a good deal to say about this determined type of woman. Sometimes she will seek professional help to assure the operator that she desires a change, but when she gets a new mode, she is dubious about it. It takes time for the hair to fall pleasantly into a new pattern, but eventually it will be amiable and easily arranged. If you have fixed ideas, you are handicapped.

An experimental hairdo is no telling matter. If you get a two inch cut and decide you don't like it, nature will add an extra inch every two months.

Women's Institute

SPRINGBROOK W. I.

The Springbrook Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Wallace McKeown on Wednesday afternoon with a fair attendance of members and visitors.

Mrs. Charles Gordanier presided.

Mrs. W. J. Barlow gave a short report of the Hallowe'en social evening and also read a "thank you" note from Mrs. Arthur Burkitt in appreciating for the box of fruit and cards she received while sick and thanks from the Institute. Forsyth for the lovely gift which she had been given after her illness.

It was decided t osend $5 to the Canadian Institute for the Blind and to prepare and send gifts to two members who have recently moved away.

In order to add to the funds a dance will be held in Springbrook hall early in the new year.

An interesting report of the area convention, held in Belleville last month was given by the delegate, Mrs. James Smith.

Mrs. Arthur Reid, convener for historical research was in charge of the following program which was opened with a humorous reading by Mrs. Reid.

The motto "Every Stopping Place is a Starting Point" was given by Mrs. J. McKeown. Mrs. Burton Bateman gave the reading "The Man in the Glass."

In the absence of Mrs. G. Williams a paper on "Early Days of Canadian History," prepared by her was read by Mrs. W. J. Barlow.

A "national" contest was then conducted by Mrs. Barlow and the meeting closed.

The hostess and assistants served refreshments.

The next meeting will be held December 30th at the home of Mrs. Thomas McKeown. There will be a gift exchange.

ROLL ON SUNDAY

Some weeks are miserable. You start off all wrong on Monday, feeling all washed up. And you go on feeling the same way . . . the only thing to do is to cure like this is to tone up the sluggish system that's probably at the bottom of that dull All-over-ness. If your liver not really ill then it's a good bet that lack of pep and joy of living is due to kidneys and bowels not functioning properly. That means that poisons are accumulating, causing headaches and a feeling of misery. So do something about it. Try Kruschen.

That's your answer. In Kruschen Salts you get the minerals that are found in famous Mineral Spas. They'll help your body clear away waste very, very gently. Then you'll feel fresh new all over. Just see. All it takes is about as much Kruschen as will heap on a dime. Take it in your morning coffee when you need it.

Queen Elizabeth II Will Be Centre of Oldest State Ritual In History of British People

Next June Queen Elizabeth II will dedicate herself anew to her people. This story, one of a series to confirm the coronation mystery and ritual of the presidents, is peace for the young sovereign.

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Fifteen years ago a solemn young princess, tugging at her mother's sleeve, asked nervously whether her six-year-old sister was wise enough in the ways of royalty to behave properly at a forthcoming ceremony.

"Poor Margaret!" fretted Elizabeth Alexandra Mary Windsor, herself barely 11. "I do hope she won't disgrace us all by falling asleep in the middle! After all, she is so very young."

That was before the coronation of King George VI. Now the princess has become a queen. And next June, in Westminster Abbey where she saw her father crowned, she wondered if her mischievous sister would do. Queen Elizabeth II, head of the Commonwealth, defender of the faith, will be the centre of the oldest state ritual in English history.

Schooled For Service

Recently, a woman schooled for service, Elizabeth is certain to bring into the abbey the same solicitous spirit, the same quiet determination to do the proper thing, that prompted her girlish tears at the coronation of 1937.

The coronation ceremony, though it may be streamlined and shortened next year, exacts a high degree of service. Its physical strain in the past it has lasted three hours or more.

Every movement, from breakfast to evening broadcast, is timed with stop-watch precision. The tension normally felt by the central figure in any great state event is sharpened almost beyond endurance in a setting of the highest solemnity. Within the abbey, a tremendously complicated pattern of action and gesture must be memorized and carried through in the knowledge that the smallest slip may be seen.

Even for a trained model, the coronation would be a severe test. For the queen there are four elaborate coronation robes, all different, which she must learn to change swiftly and without fluster. Changes At Abbey

On arrival at Westminster Abbey the Queen will wear the familiar crimson velvet robes of estate, with cap of state. Beneath it she may wear a dress of white brocaded silk. Inside the church she will make her first change—into the purple velvet robes. These will be robe worn beneath a supertunics or cloth of gold.

Next comes the armilla, a stole of cloth of gold, and the dalmatic coronation robe of the same material. These she wears at the moment of anointing and crowning. Then, before leaving the abbey, she will change into the imperial purple velvet robes. These will be trimmed with ermine provided by Canada.

There have been reports that the Coronation, essentially a religious service, will be simplified. What ever happens, the main burden of preparation and enactment will fall upon the Queen. She has the ultimate responsibility for details of the ceremony, from the order of precedence to the number of invitations. One of the most intriguing will be her decision as to the position of her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh.

Makes Five Responses

In the ceremony itself, her role will be chiefly a miming one. The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, does most of the speaking with nearly 30 prayers and speeches compared with five responses, totalling only a few dozen words, for the Queen. But the Queen's task, which involves mastering an intricate series of movements, is infinitely more difficult.

The service starts with the "recognition," a ceremony dating from the days of the Witan, or grand council of the Anglo-Saxons, when the sovereign was elected instead of succeeding automatically by heredity. If the usual procedure is followed, Elizabeth will face first east, then south, west and north, as the archbishop proclaims:

"Sirs, I here present unto you, Elizabeth, your undoubted Queen. Wherefore all you who are come this day to do your homage, service, are you willing to do the same?"

Takes Oath

The Queen then takes the oath to maintain the constitution, the service of Holy Communion begins and the sovereign is anointed, an act requiring careful rehearsal. In order, the next stages are the investment with royal robes and insignia, the crowning, the enthronement and the blessing.

Elizabeth must familiarize herself with all the trappings of majesty, formerly called the "ornaments" and now usually known as the regalia. These include two sceptres and an orb, a silver spoon used in the anointing, St. Edward's crown with its two arches encrusted with pearls, and four huge ornamental swords.

All play their part in one of the world's most hallowed ceremonies.

Physician Urges Contributory Health Plan

OTTAWA (CP)—A 53-year-old Progressive Conservative physician says the government should call another Dominion-provincial conference to work out a basis for a plan of contributory national health insurance.

Dr. W. G. Blair, member for Lanark, said in the Commons Friday that he believes all provinces are anxious and willing to improve health conditions "providing there is no interference with their rights to control health services."

But there must be a thorough investigation in advance. The plan must have approval of municipal and provincial authorities and medical authorities must be consulted.

"We should proceed to lay the groundwork of the plan by calling a Dominion-provincial conference at an early date," he said.

The municipalities should have a place in these talks.

He could not agree with the CCF policy of launching a scheme immediately. But he left no doubt his party stands for the introduction of a contributory health plan.

He said:

"Wh...e we form a government we will proceed towards contributory health insurance."

In this Dr. Blair departed from the wording of an advance text of his speech made available to the press. This read: "When we form a government we will introduce a contributory health insurance plan."

Friday night Dr. Blair rose to the ... on a q... asd, took it "at the offer" to mean he ... ated him ... party would "proceed towards" a p'an. added:

"What I did say was that we "I proceed with contributory national health insurance."

Dr. Blair said the high cost of sickness is becoming beyond the financial means of the people. A national health plan was needed ...t there had been "too much glib talk c'out such a plan without getting down to certain basic and essential considerations."

He said the ultimate objective of the various departments of health should be to bring to everyone an equal opportunity to attain physical and mental health, regardless of race, economic status or geographical position.

Why Monel nails, Dad?

"Well, here on the coast we have to remember what salt water can do to a boat. The salt rusts right through steel nails, but it has scarcely any effect on Monel, which is about two-thirds nickel and one-third copper."

"Is Monel used for anything besides nails?" "It sure is! Propeller shafts are made of Monel because it is extremely strong and tough, and doesn't rust in salt water. That's why Monel is used so much too in plants where salt is made."

"How about Monel in acids, dad?" "Sulphuric acids have less effect on Monel than on most other metals. In fact Monel baskets are used to hold steel which has to be dipped in acid in steel plants."

Medical Hunch Put to Test On Human Volunteers Cracked Mystery About Blood Disease

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Reporter

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A medical hunch, put to the test on human volunteers, cracked a mystery about a serious bleeding disease.

That led to discovery of new kinds of blood types—hitherto unsuspected secret of nature.

The new blood types are typs of platelets, the blood cells that prevent bleeding. Their discovery gives hope for more effective blood transfusions and help for people sick from rays from A-Bombs or X-rays used to treat cancer.

Dr. William J. Harrington of Washington University m e d i c a l school was studying a bleeding disease, thrombocytopenic purpura, in which people lack platelets on which help scrm blood clots. People with this illness bleeded into the skin and internal organs. They become weak and anemic. If the bleeding occurs in the brain, they get strokes or die.

Most Unexplained

Some causes of purpura are known, but many cases were unexplained.

Harrington, a hem a t o l o gist, thought people with unexplained cases might have something in their blood which was destroying platelets of the kind normally made in the body.

The test was to inject some blood from these patients into healthy persons. Harrington and his own first volunteer, followed later by others in the medical school.

Within a few hours, healthy persons got the bleeding disease. Some "it" stuff in sick persons' blood began destroying the platelets in healthy blood.

The "it" turned out to be antibody against platelets.

The researchers learned there are types of platelets, just as there are types of red cells which determine your blood type.

If people had had many blood transfusions and got the platelets of a different type than their own they could make antibodies against platelets. But there is apparently no danger from different types of platelets in routine blood transfusions.

Remove Spleen

Transfusions of blood of the right platelet type helps some victims of purpura. The standard treatment for purpura now is to remove the spleen, which filters out damaged platelets. The damaged platelets are still good enough to prevent bleeding. The spleen is removed to keep it from taking out too many platelets.

Babies sometimes are born with purpura. They may get it if their mothers h a d thrombocytopenia corrected by removal of their spleens. The baby, still having a spleen, begins losing too many platelets.

Babies with this trouble usually recover in a few weeks or months. But if they are seriously affected, they could, theoretically, be given transfusions of blood of the correct platelet type, to wash out the blood with antibodies and stop the war in the bloodstream.

The bleeding disease can also come from radiation, or sometimes from drugs which damage bone marrow, the factories of blood cells.

A-Bomb Victims

Many Japanese victims of A-Bombs bled to death because they temporarily lacked platelets as well as other blood cells from radiation damage. This bleeding might be halted or prevented by giving bomb victims transfusions of the right type of platelets. Cancer patients suffering from overdoses of X-rays could be similarly helped.

Platelets are very delicate cells. It has been difficult to separate them from whole blood. New methods of gently separating blood into its component parts are being studied.

Creamery Men Support Plea For Oleo Ban

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Creamery Association passed a resolution supporting the Ontario Federation of Agriculture's plea for a ban on the further introduction of margarine until a study has been completed of margarine's nutritional values and its impact on the country's economy.

The resolution passed Friday said that "the threat of the replacement of all dairy products by such products manufactured from imported oils is a clear and present danger to the economic stability of Canada in general and Ontario in particular."

"Recent research has cast considerable doubt on claims that the nutritional properties of such extracts products are the equivalent of genuine dairy products," the resolution stated.

The association also decided to petition the federal government to set bottler prices "more in keeping with the prices of other dairy products."

THIRD BUS VICTIM DIES

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — Walter Fayor of Wynndel, B.C., died in hospital Thursday, the fifth victim of a Greyhound bus crash on the shore of Kootenay Lake Tuesday. The bus plunged from the snow-sheathed highway into the lake. Eight others who were injured are reported in good condition.

Swiss Expedition Beaten Back By Buffeting Winds

NEW DELHI (AP)—Reliable reports reaching here from Katmandu, capital of neighboring Nepal, said a Swiss expedition attempting to climb towering Mt. Everest—highest peak in the world—has been beaten back by buffeting winds and 36-degree-below-zero cold.

The reports said the Swiss climbers abandoned their attempt Nov. 20. No one has ever reached the peak of Mt. Everest, more than 29,000 feet high, and returned to tell about it.

Nepalese sources here said the expedition, led by Dr. Gabriel Chevallley, had descended to Namche Bazaar village at the base of Mt. Everest and was resting before beginning the hazardous two-week overland journey 190 miles to Katmandu.

Outcome of the final assault on the Himalayan peak's highest slopes has been a mystery since the middle of last month, when a native runner brought back a report that several of the Swiss had reached a point 150 feet from the summit.

Extreme Cold

Informants today said Chevalley is believed already to have returned to the Swiss Alpine Foundation in Zurich that three climbers—Raymond Lambert, Ernest Reiss and Sherpa Tensing—and seven Nepalese porters established their eighth and last camp Nov. 18. They planned to make the top the next day but extreme cold and continual wind forced them to abandon their efforts.

The venture was the 10th attempt to climb Mt. Everest, according to records of India's Himalayan Club —the most complete collection of information on Asia's high mountains.

All previous expeditions have blamed their defeats on the extreme altitude, the bitter cold and the peak's fierce winds that hurl stones about like baseballs.

"When you get that high, you just don't care," said one Swiss climber. "It's almost beyond human endurance. You just want to sit down."

The Swiss team carried newly-designed lightweight apparatus designed to assure a steady flow of oxygen above 30,000 feet.

Royalty's Daily Round of Paper Begins With Arrival of Dispatch Boxes at Buckingham Palace

Next June Queen Elizabeth II will be crowned at Westminster Abbey. Preparation for that ancient ceremony has added new pressure to Her Majesty's already crowded life. This story, first of six prepared by The Canadian Press to give Canadian newspaper readers an up-to-the-minute picture of their royal sovereign, describes the day-by-day routine in the Queen's household.

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—A coach clatters up the broad boulevard to Buckingham Palace. A messenger carries in an armful of dispatch paper work begins.

The coach is an undistinguished brougham from Her Majesty's government, drawn by a single horse in the anachronistic fashion of royal institutions. The dispatch boxes, also more in accord with tradition than modern practice, are the means of communication between the palace and the various departments.

Studying the state papers from dispatch boxes is one of the sovereign's most formidable duties. King George V, Elizabeth's grandfather, spoke wryly of "doing my boxes." Her father, George VI, had a reputation for plodding doggedly through the documents, word for word. Queen Victoria once wrote in her diary:

"Perfectly distracted with work of all kinds, boxes, letters, telegrams, questions, people to see, etc., until I am really quite bewildered and exhausted."

Exacting Routine

Is being Queen really as hard as that Let's look at a typical day in the life of Queen Elizabeth.

She gets up early, reads four or five newspapers, takes breakfast in her private apartments and usually manages a few moments with her children, Prince Charles and Princess Anne.

The official routine starts shortly after 9:30 a.m., when she sees her private secretary, Sir Alan Lascelles. She does some preliminary desk work, reading foreign office telegrams, other documents and "papers," and important correspondence.

At 10:15 she sees her assistant private secretary, Martin Charteris, deals with more mundane letters, signs any acts of Parliament and studies documents specially brought to her attention. Practically any submission from a government minister requires the Queen's approval.

Next she may see the Keeper of the Privy Purse about royal finances, or the Master of the Household about arrangements for a function. Until lunch there are many other interviews—a Privy Council in a nearby room, an ambassador calling to present credentials, a governor-general or a bishop coming to do homage, a high-ranking service chief paying respects before leaving on a mission.

No Time To Relax

Lunch at about 1 p.m. may be followed by a sitting for a portrait, more desk work, interviews, audiences and bike-writing. Tea is just before five o'clock. Then comes a nightly romp with the children, which a Court spokesman says is "almost" a rule but lasts only about 15 minutes.

The evening may bring more official business, an outing at the theatre. It seldom affords complete relaxation.

This is the bare minimum. Public engagements—opening a dam, launching a ship, placing a wreath —must be squeezed into the schedule. Once a week, too, time must be found for the prime minister. For this first year of her reign the pressure of official duties on the Queen will be tremendous. She is ultimately responsible for all the preparations for the coronation. The climax will come during Coronation week next summer.

Apart from the ceremony in the abbey, there will be public engagements, such as gardens parties, and the entertaining of Commonwealth representatives, radio broadcasts over the bells, evening receptions and an appearance at Epsom to watch the Derby. Always the Queen will be surrounded by crowds.

Some Advantages

However, she will have some advantages:

She can count on the presence and comfort of Queen Mother Elizabeth and Queen Mary, both "royal ladies" on all aspects of royalty. She has her young husband, who has already brought a refreshing vitality to Buckingham Palace; her younger sister, Margaret, who has shared many joys and sorrows; and others of the royal family, including the Duchess of Kent and the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester.

But in the long run she will be essentially alone with the burdens of monarchy. That was what her father, George VI, had in mind when he said to a friend during the royal visit to South Africa in 1947:

"There goes Elizabeth, poor lonely girl. She will walk all her days in loneliness."

Send Snowballs To California In Bet Pay-off

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Mayor Mark Leslie Denning of Englewood today paid off an election day bet with — snowballs.

Denning challenged Mayor John England of Inglewood, Calif., to see which city could produce the highest percentage of voters Nov. 4.

The final percentages showed Inglewood just nosed out the New Jersey counterpart, 87.18 per cent to 85.14, and saved Hollis crate of oranges. Denning paid off today, sending this wire:

"Wanted to have Santa Claus put snowballs in your stocking. At suggestion of your Chamber of Commerce, the snowballs, packed in ice by Englewood school children, will arrive in Los Angeles via American Air Lines flight 601 Friday, Dec. 5 at 6:35 p.m."

ARMY CHIEF DISAPPEARS

BELGRADE (Reuters) — Maj.-Gen. Bekir Bolokia, former chief of staff of the Albanian Army, has disappeared without trace, Belgrade radio reports. The radio said he was last seen in August getting into a plane at Tirana airport with three civilians. Soon after a new chief of staff, Maj.-Gen. Petri Duma, was appointed.

SPEECH CONTEST FINALS

BROCKVILLE (CP)—Finals of the eastern Ontario public school speaking competition will be held here Saturday. The competition, sponsored by the Eastern Ontario Trustees and Ratepayers Association, is open to contestants in the counties of Carleton, Prescott, Russell, Dundas, Stormont, Glengarry, Lanark, Leeds and Grenville, Lennox and Renfrew.

new and finer in 75 ways
the long, low and lively
'53 DODGE

Illustrated—Dodge Regent 4-door sedan includes certain extra equipment items. Check with your local Dodge dealer for information on standard equipment.

new beauty

In style and beauty, you'll find that the '53 Dodge is new and finer in many ways. It has that long, wide, low look that draws admiring glances. Graceful, sweeping fenders and the broader, lower rear deck lend a touch of continental styling. There's a new type of one-piece curved windshield and an attractive new wrap-around rear window which give you better vision. You'll like the smart, new instrument panel with its central glove compartment for easy access. The beautiful new interiors and rich new colours add a further note of elegance to the most beautiful Dodge cars ever produced in the low-price field.

finer performance

When you take the wheel of this stylish, more compact Dodge, you'll quickly discover that, in performance, too, Dodge is new and finer. You'll find that this new Dodge handles with astonishing lightness and ease—clings surely to curves—parks without effort. On the highway, you'll experience finer performance and easier acceleration at higher speeds—reward of the new higher gear ratio. And with Overdrive (available at extra cost) your highway driving becomes even smoother and more economical. Arrange now to get behind the wheel and put the new Dodge through its paces.

new 3-way smoother ride

When you drive a new Dodge, you'll find a 3-way smoother ride . . . steadier . . . more level . . . softer. You'll agree it's the most comfortable ride you've ever experienced in any car at a comparable price.

It's a steadier ride because of a wider frame, a lower centre of gravity, and the new positioning of the wider rear springs.

It's a more level ride, the result of synchronized springing and scientific weight distribution.

It's a softer ride because of "Orriflow" shock absorbers and wider, softer springs.

Be among the first to experience this thrilling new ride. Phone your Dodge-DeSoto dealer for a demonstration.

Red Wings Rolling Along; Push Way Into First-Place Tie With Chicago

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

THAT'S THE SPIRIT!

Manager Don McNevin of the Glen Roy senior "B" team said on Saturday that the squad is as "happy as a lark" and displaying some of the fine team spirit that took his junior "A" softball team to the all-Ontario championship.

While part of the team's success in winning their last three starts, twice over the powerful Kingston Goodyears and once over the potent Oshawa Truckers, is due to the outstanding work of Tony Parisi in the nets and the return to the hockey wars, and the fine play, of big Vern Geyer, McNevin attributes the sudden surge to winning form of team spirit and harmony within the ranks.

There must be something in what he says. Coach "Red" Doran since he took over the reins, has instilled a fine competitive spirit in the players and with the morale-building addition to the defensive strength of the squad, the Glens have produced some of the best senior "B" performances seen here in quite a while.

But they're not selling any of the opposition short. As Michael J. Rexford pointed out the other day in his column, "practically every team in the group with the exception of perhaps the Peterborough Teias, is a contender for top-spot honors." The Teias have lapped somewhat in their last three or four starts, but we are informed, they are in the process of building, and if we know former Peterborough squads, the Littlejack fiddles will be up there with the best of 'em before the playoff pleasure skrill.

The Glens' flying fiancee line of Brian Mulvihill, Keith MacDonald and Jackie Wardhaugh came into its own against the Goodyears on Friday night. Rated as one of the speediest front four lines in the group, Mull, Mac and Jack turned on a brilliant display of speed and goal-front wizardry that netted four of the Glens' five goals. And not to be outdone by the flashing speed of this line, Norman Mulhallan turned in a solo effort that not only left the fast backchecking Goodyear forwards eating ice-dust but also resulted in Mulhallan parking the puck behind goalie Johnson in a lather of speed.

So it looks from here as though the Glen have struck a stride that they never equalled in the past two years, only on sporadic occasions. They're riding the crest of a three-victory wave for one thing, and for another, will also see third with Kingston for top position in the sectional standing.

They face what will be their severest test next Saturday when the 1951 senior "B" champions, the Stouffville Clippers, will be their guests at Memorial Arena. The Clippers sat in the seasonal tie for group with fifteen points for seven victories and a tie and have met defeat but twice, with the Kingston Goodyears turning the trick on both occasions. Ossiffa Taylor's hold upon the win-all tie on November 8.

HAWKS IN PETERBOROUGH

Should be a real hockey feast in Peterborough tonight when the Toronto Maple Leafs tangle with the Triple Links of that city in a scheduled game. The Hawks lead the loop at present with ten points with the Links just two points behind. But Stan Barrett's crew will be gunning for their third victory for the new mentor, while the Petes, with the advantage of their own ice, no doubt, will be out to avenge the defeat the Hawks administered in their last meeting.

UP AND COMING?

Bill Fry, ace fairy godfather of that Grey Cup ticket, and secretary of the intermediate Ontario Rugby Football Union, is feeling rather chipper these days despite the fact the 1952 football season is history. He finds an O'Neary. Bill can talk football any time. Once he got into a heated pigskin discussion in Maple Leaf Gardens during the seventh game of a Stanley Cup series. He had to read the papers to find out who won the powwowing.

Bill, en route to Genenoque the other day, paused long enough to get a lot of football chatter off his chest, via the telephone. Bill feels that the goal he has fought for in a number of years, might be looming over the eighth horizon. That goal is official aid to his intermediate OHFU by the CRU. The success of last season, climaxed by the Peterborough-St. Boniface final in Winnipeg, the first intermediate OHFU playoff attended by A. V. Chipman, CRU prexy, and other bigwigs, Bill feels, is a big step in the realization of a dream of years.

"I feel," said Bill, "that the powers-that-be are beginning to realize that there should be a playing spot for those who are over junior age and not yet ready for senior competition."

Increased interest and enthusiasm in intermediate football leads Fry to believe there will be 12 teams entered next season. There were eight last year. Already entries for the 1953 season have been submitted.

Incidentally Bill flew to Winnipeg to see the intermediate final. Great game, was his opinion. "Peterborough nearly pulled it out of the fire in the fourth quarter."

He is anxious to see intermediate football started again in Belleville. Said his organization will do all it can to help along if such a team proves possible.

Week-end Win, Tie Does Trick Wings, Leafs Shut Out Hawks; Lumley Records First Shutout

By CRAIG ARMSTRONG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Detroit Red Wings, defending champions of the National Hockey League, have begun to roll.

A week ago they vaulted from fourth to second place and this weekend pushed their way into a first-place tie with Chicago Black Hawks.

A win over Chicago and a tie with Boston did the trick, pulling the Wings back to the spot to which they were accustomed the last few seasons.

Shoe Lead

The Wings cut Chicago's lead to one point Saturday night by shutting out the Black Hawks 2-0 in a playoff game postponed from a scheduled game Nov. 4, United States election night. The game was played to Indianapolis because no open date were available at the Chicago Stadium.

Reg Sinclair, assisted by Alex Delvecchio and Marcel Pronovost, scored the first Detroit goal in the first period. And with only seconds left in the second stanza, John Wilson used a pass from Delvecchio to end the scoring.

Sunday night defenceman Red Kelly scored late in the third period to give the Wings a 3-3 tie with Boston Bruins at Detroit, avoiding what might have been the first home-ice shutout for Detroit in 33 games. Leo Labine scored for Boston from in front of the net, after receiving a pass from Bob Armstrong in the second period.

Chicago was beaten 3-0 by Toronto Maple Leafs on home ice Sunday and the victory, Harry Lumley's first shutout of the season, moved the Leafs into a third-place tie with Boston. Rookie George Armstrong and Sid Smith scored for the Leafs.

Two Ties

New York scored 32 ties both Saturday and Sunday night and in each game defenceman Ry Buller scored the tying goals. Saturday night Buller scored unassisted in the third period while both teams were short-a man on the game for the fall-end Rangers. Edgar Laraide scored the other Ranger goal late in the Sunday night game and Ted Kennedy scored for Toronto.

Sunday night the Rangers tied the fifth-place Montreal Canadiens who haven't won a game in nine starts. Nick Mickoski, celebrating his 35th birthday, put the Rangers ahead in the second period.

The Canadiens tied it up in the same period when the Rangers a man short. Paul Meger tallied after receiving a pass from Bernie Geoffrion. Geoffrion lured Chuck Rayner out of the New York nets to score in the third period after getting the puck from Billy Reay. Then Buller scored the tying marker.

The Bruins edged the Canadiens 3-1 Saturday night in Montreal on a goal by Jack McIntyre when the teams were knotted 1-1. He picked up a stray puck by Tom Johnson, Canadiens defenceman, and swooped in close on goalie Gerry McNeil. Dave Creighton had scored earlier for Boston. Rookie Paul Masnick scored the Montreal goal.

No games are scheduled tonight.

Marlies Stretch Top Spot Lead In Junior Race

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Marlboros stretched their lead to eight points in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A race during the week-end while Windsor Spitfires grew notice of their intention to vacate the cellar.

The Marlboros came from behind to take St. Catharines Teepees 3-1 Sunday, while Windsor pulled into an eighth place tie with Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts by thumping Oshawa Generals 7-1 in Windsor.

Toronto St. Michael's defeated Oshawa 8-2 in Oshawa Saturday, then dropped a 3-2 decision to Galt Black Hawks Sunday. The Teepees trimmed the third-place Barrie Flyers 9-5 in St. Catharines Saturday while Galt trimmed Kitchener 7-3.

Break Streak

Guelph Biltmores invaded Three Rivers Sunday and beat the Reds 4-2 to shake their losing streak. In Montreal the Montreal Junior Canadiens coasted to an 8-0 win over the last-place Montreal Royals.

In Windsor, a third-period brawl involved eight separate fights and four major penalties. The fights spread their seven goals among Al Arbour, Lou Dietzler, Elmer Skow, Ted Reid, Ed Loutitt, Archie Burton and Gerry Burton. Bob Mader scored the single for Oshawa.

Murray Costello again led St. Mike's to victory Saturday as he scored three goals in Oshawa. Jack Caffery scored twice. Singles went to Bill Dineen, Art Chase and Mare Reaume. Jack Armstrong scored twice for both Oshawa goals.

The Marlies' win Sunday resulted from third-period goals by Fred Glover, Wally Maxwell and Parker MacDonald. Hank Ciesla scored for Teepees.

Jim McBurney scored all three Galt goals Sunday to top off a good week-end. He scored four against Kitchener Saturday night. Mike Ratchford and Bill Lee scored for St. Michael's.

Besides McBurney's four Saturday, John Beaver, Neil McDonald and Ken Wharrum notched singles. Greig Sinclair scored two and Grimm Joyce singled for the Greenshirts.

B.C. Boxing Clubs 'Kiss, and Make Up'

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia Amateur Boxing Association and the B.C. branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada buried the hatchet here.

The two bodies, which have been sparring for control of amateur boxing in B.C., reached an "amicable" agreement Sunday on supervision of the sport.

It was decided at a special meeting among officials of the AAU, CAHA and delegates from Vancouver Island and the Fraser valley to form an 11-man commission to operate amateur boxing.

Intercounty Loop Drafts New Rules, Clubs' Salary Limit Set at $16,000

BRANTFORD (CP)—Members of the Intercounty Senior Baseball League have introduced new rules designed to lower club expenses for the 1953 season.

The salary limit for each club was set at $16,000 and to make it stick all clubs must sign their players to a standardized contract which will be kept by league-secretary Jack Blakney. It was also agreed at a league meeting Saturday that no player should draw more than $400 a month and if signed after July 1 a player cannot draw more than $200 a month.

Each club will be allowed to carry 16 players until July 1 and 14 after that date. Last year it was 20 and 16. These rules are designed to help clubs such as Galt, Guelph and St. Thomas which had financial difficulty last year. Guelph Maple Leafs, rumored to be dropping out of the league, were represented by Jim Kendrick and Bill Carrere.

Drop Residence Rule

The league's residence rule has been dropped. A player now can live any place and play with the team that holds his contract. Last season several disputes resulted from this rule, culminating in the admission of London majors to the playoffs as a fifth team when they applied for an injunction to halt the semi-final series.

Players of a category lower than senior may play five senior games before becoming a member. If a club is played they are added to the roster of 14 men. The last signing date for players is July 15.

Each club will make its own agreement with its own radio station as to broadcasting rights. The teams in Waterloo and Kitchener refused to allow home games to be broadcast last season.

Final entry date for teams is Feb. 1, 1953. Clubs guilty of breaking the rules will be subject to fines ranging from $5 to $200. The annual all-star game will be the first Monday in July between the current league leaders and a team selected by sports writers and sportscasters.

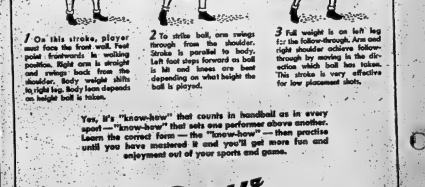
Canadians Set US Track Marks

SPOKANE, Wash. (CP) — The Amateur Athletic Union Saturday certified 182 United States track and field records, including several involving Canadians attending U.S. universities.

Don McEwen of Ottawa, attending University of Michigan, was credited with a record of 9:04.6 for the two-mile run.

McEwen, John Moole of Hamilton and John Ross of Oakville, Ont., were members of the four-man team which set the mark of 17:08.8 for the four-mile relay. Other member of the team was William Hickman. All attend U. of Michigan.



Jack Carroll of Montreal was on Michigan's 880-yard relay squad which set a record of 1:30.4.

HANDBALL: THE STRAIGHT-ARM UNDERHAND STROKE

1 On this stroke, player must face the front wall. Feet point forwards in walking position. Right arm is straight and swings back from the shoulder. Body weight shifts to right leg. Body lean depends on height ball is taken.

2 To strike ball, arm swings through from the shoulder. Stroke is parallel to body. Left foot steps forward as ball is hit and knees are bent depending on what height the ball is played.

3 Full weight is on left leg for the follow-through. Arm and right shoulder achieve follow-through by moving in the direction which ball has taken. This stroke is very effective for low placement shots.

Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in handball as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form — the "know-how" — then practice until you've mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and game.

Major Loops 'Play Ball' With Minors, Adopt Waiver, Bonus, But Ban Recall

By JACK HAND

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—The major leagues wound up their meeting by adopting a rule requiring two-league waivers after the first 15 trading deadline. They also banned the hanging-around business by adopting the bonus rule and banning the 24-hour recall of optioned players.

Meeting in joint session under commissioner Ford Frick, the baseball bigs finished their week-long session Sunday and headed home.

George Trautman, head of the minor leagues, called the majors' action "very helpful and stimulating to the minors."

The minors also got a promise of more help when the majors voted to set up a committee to work with the minors on the proposal to pool "hidden" radio and television receipts into a trust fund to help "dandelion" school leagues.

The new rule on waivers will not permit the likes of Gene New York Yankee have been making with National League clubs in recent years.

For Example

Last August the Yankees acquired Ewell Blackwell from Cincinnati for $100,000 and three players. The deal came two months after the trading deadline.

They did not have the old waiver rule which provided that after the clubs in one league had passed up a chance to get him, he could then be sold to the highest bidder in the other league.

Under the new rule, the teams in both leagues will have a chance to bid for the player as the $100,000 waiver price before he can be sold as a higher figure.

The bonus rule set the only club that has picked up players from the other leagues after the deadline. But their recent action in bolstering their pennant chances by acquiring Gene Mauch, Johnny Moon and Johnny Sain from the National League pointed up the situation.

The new rule on recall of optioned players could be far-reaching. When a big league club farms out a player to the minors the player must stay at least 10 days and can't be recalled after July 31. There is one exception to cover emergency cases, when a key player might be injured in the majors.

Under the new bonus rule, effective at once, any boy now signing his first pro contract for more than $4,000 in the majors and higher must stay with the big league minors becomes a "bonus player."

The "bonus player" in the majors may not be moved up or down until he has gone through an unrestricted draft (usually next year).

Fines of $2,000 for a big league club or $1,000 for a minor stem established with individual violators facing $500 fines and possible suspension.

Both the American and National also backed up similar unanimous action by the minors in continuing the present high school rule by which scouts are allowed to talk to—but not sign—boys until their high school class graduates.

Bisons' Carswell Int. League Batting Champ

NEW YORK (CP)—Frank Carswell of Buffalo is the batting and runs-batted-in champion of the International Baseball League for 1952, official statistics released today.

The 33-year-old outfielder led the circuit with a .345 batting average and won the home-run derby with 30 round-trippers. He also paced the loop in total bases with 300 and

Harry Walker, player-manager of Rochester's junior world series winners, wound with a .335 batting mark, but failed to win the higher average by .001. He made only 387 trips to the plate—short of the required 400.

Don Richmond, Rochester third baseman who led the batting crown for the last two seasons, finished second with a .329 mark. Outfielder Cecil Hoak of Toronto led in runs batted in with 113. Gilliam, the circuit's most-valuable player, scored the most runs—111. Hoak, regarded as one of the best third-sackers in the business, led in fielding with 15 and Richmond in doubles with 45.

Outfielder John Metkovich of Ottawa topped the league in stolen bases with 23.

Vic Seixas Whips Frank Sedgman As Stunned Aussie Fans Look On

MELBOURNE (AP)—Crafty Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, whose chances were considered "next to nil," stunned tennis-mad Australia today by whipping Frank Sedgman, 8-6, 6-3, 6-4, to win the Victoria championship.

Seixas' brilliant victory, on a court made slick by a week-end rain, rocketed United States hopes in the coming Davis Cup matches —and proved to the 5,000 fans in Kooyong Stadium that Sedgman, the Australian ace, is not unbeatable.

Before the match, Australian newspaper men had said Seixas' chances were "next to nil" against Sedgman, holder of the U.S. and Wimbledon championship. But the Philadelphian, hitting the peak of his game, played resourceful tennis to down his opponent.

In the final of the women's division, Maureen Connolly of San Diego, Calif., defeated Julie Sampson of San Marino, Calif., 6-2, 6-3.

Cleveland Barons Strengthen Hold On Top Position

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons consolidated their first place position in the American Hockey League with a 5-3 win over Hollis Plows in Buffalo while Hershey Bears shaded Providence Reds 4-3.

The Sunday victory was the second straight win over the Bisons for Cleveland as the Barons beat Buffalo 3-1 Saturday night. In other Saturday games Pittsburgh Hornets played to a 1-1 tie with Cleveland and Syracuse Warriors overwhelmed Cincinnati Mohawks 8-2.

Five players tallied for the Barons Sunday, Steve Wochy, Bob Bailey, Ike Hildebrand, Red Willis and Ray Cornelius. Ross Lowe, Bob Tyrday and Carl MacKay scored for the losers.

Hershey Bears broke a hitless drought in the first period when Bob Bailey, their one-goal 4-3 edge over Providence.

Trailing 3-1 with less than eight minutes to go in the third, Bears scored two quick goals before Bettio fired the winner. It was his second marker of the game.

The loss was Providence's sixth straight.

Edmonton Trims Saskatoon 7-4

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Edmonton Flyers whipped the injury-riddled Saskatoon Quakers 7-4 in a Western Hockey League game. The Quakers could only muster 13 players for the game and they lost Jackie McLeod in the first period when he suffered torn shoulder ligaments.

In other Saturday night games, Victoria Cougars blanked Tacoma Rockets 7-0 and New Westminster Royals whitewashed Vancouver Canucks 4-0.

Seattle downed Vancouver 3-1 Sunday night.

Joseph Cattarinich, a legendary figure in French-Canadian sport, died in New Orleans 14 years ago Sunday at age 57. A great lacrosse defenceman in his youth, he became owner of several racetracks and part owner of Montreal Canadiens of the NHL, whose famous goalie George Vezina was one of his discoveries.

Sports Roundup

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP)—It's just one man's opinion that:

Sugar Ray Robinson wants no more of Randy Turpin and the ring, but he can't afford to say so because it would spoil his cabaret song-and-dance act. Without a title, Sugar Ray's appeal as an entertainer is nil.

Army will rank among the country's top ten football powers next year, cutting to three Coach Red Blaik's five-year recovery plan from the 1951 cribbing scandal.

Gene Sarazen, the golf squire from Germantown, N.Y., may be starred and feathered if he ventures into Texas again after saying the Lone Star state has lost its grip on producing great golfers because the oil millions down there have rubbed out the old-time "hunger."

The year 1952 set a new high for rhubarbs what with the Notre Dame "nuker shirt," Jackie Robinson's discrimination bleat at the Yankees, Casey Stengel's virulent speeches at Phi. the at which he levelled against so-called "Yankee Haters."

Yale's cute trick in letting a student manager score an extra point against Harvard may be good for a lot of Eli laughs now but will cost the Blues dearly in the future. The Harvards won't forget.

Southern California will give the Pacific Victory over the Big Ten in the Rose Bowl series for the first time since Jan. 1 about four touchdowns to one.

Tennessee will whip Texas in the Cotton Bowl and Alabama will tame Syracuse in the Orange Bowl, but Mississippi will upset unbeaten, second-ranked Georgia Tech at New Orleans.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association will give lowly Ivy continued blessing at the big convention next month in Washington. The front office boys also will keep a tight rein on football television.

After this year the colleges will differ the only new basketball rule which permits a foul player another try if he misses his first free throw.

"Campanella" looks like a dandy with his new-grown mustache, but he's still the best man in baseball behind the plate.

Casey Stengel is sticking his leathery neck out a long way in predicting the Yankees will win the American League pennant and World Series for the fifth straight time next year, but it's a tough neck and we hate to take "a first chop at it."

Sport in Brief

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians, two-year-old filly owned by E. P. Taylor, has been chosen Canada's Horse of the Year.

Taylor's Bull Page won the award last year. The directors of Toronto newspapers and the Daily Racing Form selectors didn't raise a dissenting voice against the designation of Chop Chop out of Isabelle. Queen, Nassau mare by Bull Page. She is trained by Gordon (Pete) McCann and won nine races in 11 Canadian starts, a record.

Her two most spectacular victories were in the Coronation stakes and Cup and Saucer race. She is a top-heavy favorite to win the Queen's Plate next season.

GENEVA, N.Y. (CP)—Queen's University of Kingston, Ont., dropped its third straight game of a U.S. basketball tour Saturday night losing 71-33 to Hobart. Bob Purcell paced Queen's with 21 points.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (CP)—University of Rochester opened its basketball season Saturday night by defeating Ontario Agricultural College, of Guelph, Ont., 99-37. Ti ! total was a scoring record for Rochester. Ralph Hull was high scorer for the Aggies with 13.

OTTAWA (CP)—Donald John Sinclair, 54, a member of the Toronto Argo football team that won the Grey cup in 1921, died in hospital Sunday. He was a solicitor with the custody of alien property branch in the secretary of state's department. Burial service will be held at Lucknow, Ont., Wednesday.

SHAWINIGAN FALLS, Que. (CP) —Shawinigan Falls Cataracts of the Quebec Senior Hockey League have signed Jamer Anderson, right wing formerly with Edmonton of the Western league and Glace Bay of the Maritime circuit. He was signed Sunday. The Cataracts also announced that centre Jackie Hamilton, suspended eight days ago for leaving the club, has been sold to New Westminster of the Western League.

LONDON (AP)—Oxford runners whipped Cambridge and a dense fog to win the annual cross-country race Saturday. Vic by was a five yards at times but 15 of the 16 st.ers finished the seven-mile grind over and around Wimbledon Common.

HAVANA (AP)—E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Ardmore, Okla., shot 69 Saturday to win the Havana invitation golf tournament with a 72-hole score of 270. Tied for second place were Al Besselink of Grossinger, N.Y., Tommy Bolt of Durham, N.C., and Freddie Haas of New Orleans. Each carded 276.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Boston Red Sox Saturday announced the sale of outfielder George Schmees to Seattle of the Pacific Coast League. Schmees, 28, was purchased by the Red Sox from St. Louis Browns last July.

NAMED PRESIDENT

COLUMBUS, O. (AP)—Harness racing's grand circuit re-elected Octave Blake of South Plainfield, N.J., to his seventh term as president.

The grand circuit winter meeting Saturday also established its 1953 program subject to the approval of individual state racing commissions.

The proposed 1953 schedule opens June 22 and closes Nov. 28.

Gordon Wallace Decisions King

DETROIT (AP)—Gordon Wallace 164, of Brantford, Ont., won a unanimous decision over Al Hoak 164, of Chicago in the main event of a locally-televised show from the Motor City Arena.

Wallace staggered King with a blow to the head in the sixth and King seemed to tire from then on in the Saturday night bout.

Wallace used a lunging style throughout, keeping King off balance with left jabs and occasionally connecting with an effective right.

At the end of the rugged, tough unspectacular right, Wallace was the more marked of the two.

One judge gave Wallace a 41-39 edge, the other favored Hoak 41-39 and the referee voted for Wallace 45-35.

In a four-round preliminary, Don Grinton, 133, of Brantford, won a split decision over Dennis Wilson, 136, of Detroit.

ROBBED OF $297

TORONTO (CP) — Two men Thursday night robbed Donald Patt, 36, a department store truck driver, of $297. Platt said he was about to enter his truck when one of the men hit him in the face and ordered him to hand over the cash. The other man drove. Later they tied him with string, took the money and fled.

Hamilton Wins Aquatic Events

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Aquatic Club took first place in 12 of 24 events in the 20th annual Christmas water carnival staged by the club.

George Park won the 100 yard free-style in 54.4 seconds at the Jamesville pool meet.

Shirley Campbell of Fergus, women's world professional champion gave a free-style demonstration. Barbara Bath and Irene MacDonald of Hamilton gave a duet diving display and Jacqueline LeBlanc of Montreal exhibited the ornamental swimming that won her the Quebec championship.

Diane Jaskula piled up Hamilton points by winning both events for girls under 14 years and sharing in the Hamilton girls' relay win. Shirley Jones won the women's senior backstroke. Kay Miller, University of Western Ontario swimming star, won the senior women's 100-yard free-style.

ONE OF A SERIES OF WEEKLY CALENDARS, PRESENTED BY Molson's TO RECALL FOR CANADIANS TODAY, SOME OF THE INTERESTING EVENTS, BOTH GREAT AND GAY IN OUR COUNTRY'S COLOURFUL STORY

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The power of the press to double should be carefully weighed. Not always do your aces and kings take the tricks to which they are seemingly entitled. Little trumps can cut them down in their prime.

You heard me tell something about this deal:

	♠ A
	♥ J 7 6 2
	♦ K 9 7 3
	♣ J 10 8 6 3
WEST		EAST
♠ 9 3 2		♠ K Q J 8 7 6
♥ 9 8		♥ A 4
♦ Q 10 8 5 4		♦ None
♣ A J 7 5		♣ Q 9 7 4
	SOUTH
	♠ A 10 5
	♥ K Q 10 6 3
	♦ A K 6 2
	♣ K

How south doubled the east four spade bid. How declarer took 11 tricks and thus made an overtrick to spare. Perhaps you would like my explanation of these bids?

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	Pass	2 S
Dbl	3 S	Pass	4 S
Dbl	Pass	Pass	Pass

West has not been enough for a simple overcall. North lacks the two high cards and additional trick for a responding bid. The east jump overcall of two spades shows eight tricks with a rebiddable suit.

The first double by south was for takeout. It asks partner to bid only if opponent fails to intervene with a bid. If west passed in this spot, north would have bid three hearts.

In answer to a jump overcall, partner passes with less than two tricks. With two or more, he responds with some bid. This turns the jump overcall into a game force.

Jump overcaller shows eight tricks. Responder shows at least two. Ten are enough for a game try. So, anything except pass by responder is a game indicator.

Jump overcaller shows a rebiddable suit. So, support can be three little ones. So, when east went to three spades, it was not a guess as to how much trump support he could count on.

East-west were wise not to redouble. South might have been warned to sacrifice in hearts. His double was in trouble.

KILLED BY SHARK

PACIFIC GROVE, Calif. (AP)—A 17-year-old boy was attacked and killed by a shark Sunday while swimming only 50 feet from shore in Monterey Bay. One of young Harry Wilcox's legs was nearly severed. The other was badly mangled. Large pieces of flesh were bitten away. Witnesses said the shark was at least 15 feet long.

MARMORA

Premier Frost To Visit Plants On December 22

MARMORA—On December 22, Hon. Leslie Frost, Premier of Ontario, is to pay a visit to the Marmora District in acceptance of an invitation from the Marmora District Chamber of Commerce. While final arrangements have not been completed, it is understood that the Premier will visit the plant of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited and that of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

A luncheon in his honor is to be held in the beautiful guest house of the latter company plu-turesquely situated on the west bank of the Crowe River, mid-way between the highway bridge and the dam. Although as had been wished for, the Premier is unable to remain for a Chamber of Commerce dinner meeting, it is hoped that he will be able to address an open meeting in the Plaza Theatre about 4 p.m. that day.

Rawdon Twp. Council

A $2 bounty on fox will be paid during the months of December, January and February. It was decided at the regular meeting of Rawdon Township council held at Harold on Monday.

Council also voted to request the chairman of the Shirley school board that a new-school tax rate be struck due to the new equalized assessment announced by the county assessor.

A house purchased by Percy Smith which recently burned down was written off for 1952 tax bill. Mrs. Robert Cranston was voted $21.85 as caretaker of the cemetery. This included the purchase of bulbs and a bag of fertilizer.

Sheep accounts paid went to Wesley Heath, Thomas Cassidy and Albert Perrett, $12 each and Lloyd Jenkins, $20. Other accounts ordered paid were $1,282.62 on road voucher number 114; $1.30 for lumber supplied a local resident; $29.75 for notices and statements in the Stirling News Argus; $12 for 1951 division court fees at Marmora and $8 for a wreath which was purchased for the late Donald Campbell.

Council will meet again on December 15th.

'Black Jack' Stewart Still Hits 'Em, Draws Five Minors Against Indians

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Black Jack Stewart, who drew a lot of penalties and earned a reputation as a rugged defenceman during his career with Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, hasn't forgotten his old style.

He played true to form Saturday night in Stratford in leading his Chatham Maroons to a 4-1 victory over the league-leading Stratford Indians in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League. Black Jack collected five minor penalties.

Owen Sound Mercurys moved to within three points of the Indians by beating Sarnia Sailors 8-4. The two teams are now seven and 10 points up respectively on the third place Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen and Chatham Maroons.

Kitchener gained their tie with Chatham by trimming Brantford Redmen 6-3 with a three-goal burst in the final period.

Sudbury Wolves of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior section's group defeated the first place Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds 5-3 Saturday and dropped Sarnia (Mich.) Indians 3-1. The Wolves are in third place behind North Bay Trappers.

Joe Carveth fired two goals for Chatham while Sherrit did the hat-trick. But Campbell and Al King tallied the others. Mickey Bowslaugh spoiled the debut for Max Brewer in the Chatham nets.

The Owen Sound win snapped a three-game winning streak for Sarnia. Mike Rukachesli contributed three goals to the Owen Sound total. Andy Grant, Tommy Burling, Jim Roy Leckie fired others. Bill MacFarland, former Marlboro junior, Dennis La m b e r t, Roly Swarbrick and Jack O'Connor scored for Sarnia.

There was a bruising contest in Kitchener as Charlie Brooker scored two goals for the Dutchmen. Don Bauer, Harry Cupala, Maurice Leveque and Al Buchanan added others.

Centre Don Oberholtzer notched two Brantford markers and Bill Shill added a single.

Stan McLellan scored two for Wolves Saturday and Mel Burton got hit for the other. Hec Pozzo and Doug Towers rammed in Greyhound goals. Derwin Speck scored the Wolves' single Sunday when he gave them a 1-0 lead in the first period. The Indians came back with two goals by Laurie Peterson and a single by Jack Evans in the third period.

Kitchener-Waterloo travel to Hamilton tonight to try to give the Tigers their 19th loss of the season. There are no NOHA games.

Men's Commercial Bowling League

At the Bowl-O-Drome Friday night Gouriexs upset the league leading Boslaks handing them a 7-0 decision with Ann Gouriexs 531 for the high single. Boslaks still retain a fairly good margin over second place team - Welding Gases.

Quinte Distributors and Pat's Barber Shop were also 7 point winners with victories over Star Welding and O'Neil Sales respectively.

Balyz Bros. set down Alemite 5-2 while Milo Gates took the big half of a 4-3 split over Stephens-Adamson.

Former Farmhand Wins Top Money In Harness Season

COLUMBUS, O. (CP)—A former farmhand from Fallonville, N. Y., William R. (Bill) Haughton, was the United States' leading money-winning harness horse driver for 1952.

At 29, he's the youngest ever to take the title, and his earnings of $211,728 were topped only once before, in 1951 when Johnny Simpson of Hanover, Pa., set the record with $333,136.

Others in the top 10 as compiled by the U.S. Trotting Association included Clint Hodgins, Clandeboye Ont., who ranked third with earnings of $228,340 and Joe O'Brien of New Glasgow, N.S., fifth with $224,209.

Three harness horses, led by W. H. Cane's Good Time, broke the single season money-winning record in 1952.

The association said the Goshen, N.Y., pint-sized pacer brought his owner $110,299 before his retirement. C. W. Clark's Sharp Note won $101,625 and Dudley Hanover, property of the Harper Pair Acres stable of Duquoin, Ill., chalked up $97,994 in purses.

The previous record was set by Proximity in 1950 with earnings of $97,115.

Prince Adios, owned by Grant Hodgins of Clandeboye, won $44,451 last season to rank 10th among the top-10 pacers and trotter money earners in 1952, USTA figures show.

Prince Adios, who ranked sixth in the top 10 pacers, had 30 starts, was first 16 times, second nine times, and third eight times.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR TUESDAY, DEC. 9, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Fortunate day for you in ambitious, enterprising individuals, especially if new and worth while activities.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Excellent Venus (your planet) influences for personal gain, happiness in little things, the home, family.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—New advantageous, fresh opportunities all about; generous day, but you may have to dig. Be sure you don't miss leads.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Original and unique ideas boosted now. Allocate activities that you may be able to give each your very best.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—If you follow the right road offered today you should be able to wrap things up successfully. Give extra time to loved ones.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—Promising, with your ingenious help functioning at top speed. Make new trays; meet the present squarely. Have faith in yourself.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Keep up with events, competitors, and results should be very encouraging. Added smart thinking in just a few details can make a lot of difference.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Your planet on inactive side but other planetary vibrations are of help if you are heedful and in right mood.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Fresh opportunity in most well planned and executed endeavors. But don't have any chip on your shoulder or think your ideas are the only ones.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Some excellent advantages, but it is up to you to choose well your course of action. Occasionally check to avoid mistakes, misjudgment.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Interesting, diversified outlook; avenues of activity highly favored. Unexpected benefits aid through new sources should ensue.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Continued unity with associates, employer, employees and family should round out the lasting kind of successful day you desire. Strive after harmony.

YOU BORN TODAY: are frank, capable at doing fine job at anything you undertake. Sometimes you provoke irritation thro'n a too outspoken, and critical a'''ude. This can disrupt good cam, business ventures. You have musical talents, business ability, should be fond of outdoor activity. You can do great things if you will. Birthdate of: John Milton, epic poet; Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., actor.

British Commonwealth Nations United in Wanting One Thing In Common, Title for Queen

By MICHAEL NEWMARCH

LONDON (AP)—Member nations of the British Commonwealth, combining a concern of different races and systems of government, are united in wanting at least one thing in common—a title for their Queen.

It sounds an easy thing to settle but this is one of the trickiest constitutional problems now facing this group of nations.

During the next weeks, Prime Minister Churchill will be taking the fellow commonwealth leaders aside in an effort to work out an agreement on a title that will keep the Commonwealth economic conference.

At the moment if you ask a lawyer to define the title of the Queen you might get several answers.

When her father died last February, she was proclaimed in London as "Elizabeth the Second, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom and of all her other Realms and Territories, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith."

At Ottawa, on the other hand, Canada proclaimed her as "Elizabeth the Second, by the Grace of God, Queen of Canada, Northern Ireland, and the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Queen, Head of the Faith, Supreme Liege Lady in and over Canada."

Australia and New Zealand were used for the royal proclamation in other Commonwealth cities.

Both Ottawa's ruling Nationalist party has strong republican leanings.

Through the ages, however, British sovereigns have been accustomed to changing their official title at frequent intervals.

So the Commonwealth prime ministers may be too worried about making changes when they talk to Queen Elizabeth. But probably will be choosing the phrases that will be passed through parliaments without too much argument.

BIRD STOWAWAY

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—A tiny bird arrived here as a stowaway in the engine cowling of a Pacific airliner from Fiji, 3,185 miles distant. Birds however are a prohibited import in Australia and the newcomer was destroyed by an official.

SALVAGE RAILS

LONDON (CP)—London's changeover from street-cars to motor buses now is complete. In the next few months some 40,000 tons of steel will be salvaged by removal of the abandoned tramway tracks.

Seven Members Stabilization Board Resigns

WASHINGTON (AP)—All seven industry members of the U.S. wage stabilization board quit Saturday with a blast at President Truman for what they called the "perversion of a fraud upon the American people."

The group threatened to torpedo the government's whole wage control program.

Labor members, who constitute one-third of the wage board, said they would support only a 10 cent daily wage increase for John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers was a few and made "second class citizens" of the miners.

The wage board had voted to hold the miners' $14 daily wage to $1.30 a day, on the ground that the higher figure, to which the coal operators had agreed, would "inequitably" damage the entire anti-inflation program.

Truman overruled the board, saying its action would lead to a "general collapse" and that it was Eisenhower administration with a national emergency on its first day in office.

STILL DEEPFUL

EASTBOURN, England (CP)—A four-ton cannon has been contributed toward the 1953 scrap iron drive by the Royal Navy. The cannon was part of the defences set up on the beaches of Napoleonic invasion about 150 years ago.

SHOCK TREATMENT

BIRMINGHAM, England (CP)—Birds landing on the eaves of large buildings here are bouncing off in surprise. The eaves are electrified with shock treatment to keep pigeons from roosting. The shock treatment is successful in persuading the birds to seek other resting places.

Seoul, Ancient Capital of Kings, Has Suffered Staggering Blows

By BILL SHINN

SEOUL (AP)—This battered shell of former Oriental splendor is a city that refuses to die.

Twice captured by the Communists and twice freed by the Allies since the start of the Korean war, the ancient capital of kings has suffered staggering blows.

Some 800,000+ Koreans eke out an existence.

Seoul is a city where broad boulevards lead, to a burned-out capitol building, once the pride of the republic. Markets flourish in dank, dirty alleys and littered back streets.

Black marketing is big business. Entire districts of civilians into Seoul has long been prohibited unless for official business. But hundreds swarm in at night by any one of a dozen routes. Refugees have swollen the population enormously.

The Korean monetary unit, the won, has suffered a severe inflation. The legal rate of exchange is 6,000 won to the dollar. But the popular rate is 15,000 won to the dollar.

Before the war 100 pounds of rice sold for about 6,000 won. Now the same amount of rice costs about 900,000 won.

Mayor Kim Tai Sun estimates that in the first year of fighting, 1,421 persons starved to death in Seoul.

More than 800 factories were destroyed. About 150 factories are now operating of 522 still standing.

The Republic of Korea government has restored the water works and power plants almost to prewar levels. About 60 per cent of the factory damage has been cleaned up.

Schools are trying to make a comeback. About 60 per cent of the school buildings were destroyed.

RAILWAY UPKEEP UP

TORONTO (CP)—It cost the Canadian Pacific Railway $15,000,000 more to maintain its facilities this year than it did in 1949, W.A. Mather, president of the railway, said Saturday night. He told the Toronto Railway Club that to keep its facilities in shape cost the CPR $80,000,000 in 1949 and $95,000,000 this year. The increase was caused by the country's economic expansion and higher prices.

RAISE FIREMEN'S PAY

TORONTO (CP)—A board of arbitration headed by Judge R. S. Clark of Guelph Sunday night announced the award of a $550 annual salary increase to Scarborough township firemen. The addition sets a first-class fireman's salary at $3,600 a year.

LACK OF CRITICAL

"Tesis unus, testis nullus," is a universally recognized principle of law. If we are to follow this principle, we would be obliged to reject the entire testimony of the 37 witnesses in the massacre which the American troops are accused of. I don't say that other cities weren't committed, but I am forced to say, in all honesty, that the report of the Democratic jurists is not at all convincing.

No Doubt of American Guilt

"I wanted to find out what a number of the delegates thought about this. I deliberately picked lawyers, journalists and sociologists from among the 367 delegates and the 25 guests of honor. I wanted to poll people who might be expected to have the necessary background to give an opinion on such a serious report. I asked all of them the same question:

"Do you believe the atrocity charges laid against American troops in Korea?

Without a single exception, they answered, "Certainly, Yes."

"Did you read the report of the commission organized by the International Association of Democratic Jurists?"

All of them answered, "No."

Then what evidence do you use to support your belief that American troops have committed atrocities in Korea?"

The answer was, "on the reputation of the jurists who prepared the report. Prof. Henrick Brandweiner, of the International Law at the University of Sydney, Australia. He is an eminent jurist and we have confidence in his judgment and his impartiality, just as we have in the other members of the commission. We're not competent to judge these things so we pass the responsibility over to the experts"

When you hear that sort of thing from people who are uneducated, you can understand it, but when you hear it from the mouths of lawyers, university professors and journalists, it is a disquieting sign.

They Swallow Everything

The lack of a critical sense really hits you in the eye during a peace conference. No one asks questions and no one asks himself questions. No. one tries to see the other side of the story or the opposite point of view. The listeners swallow everything, even the most fantastic things.

I remember one particularly extraordinary scene. It happened near the end of the congress. It had just been announced that an Indian painter would present a picture to the congress, a picture which he had painted during his sleepless nights. There was music, a parade and the solemn presentation of the painting to the president who had to go on stage with the members of the presidium. He unrolled the cloth and there before our eyes was a frightful-looking woman exhibiting an enormous navel. The sight was one of the funniest I have ever seen during such a solemn occasion. Only about 20 people in the audience held their sides and took five minutes out to laugh. All the other delegates leaped to their feet and applauded the artist with frenzy.

This lack of a critical spirit becomes serious when it is shown in such serious matters as war and peace.

Warning to Americans

The Americans would do well to study the accusations which are being made against them in Korea and not to take them lightly. Some are serious, notably the use of napalm bombs and the razing of villages and towns with no strategic value. There are others, like those we have discussed above which have not been proved and which seem by all accounts to have been invented out of whole cloth.

But there are more than a thousand million Orientals who are quite ready to believe them.

HOUSE BURNS, 5 ESCAPE

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Stocks and three of their five children escaped Sunday night when fire roared through their home. Two other children were not home at the time. The house and its contents were destroyed.

Reich Police Hunt Slayer Of 16 Women

HANOVER Germany, (AP)—West German police are on a country-wide hunt for the "autobahn murderer" suspected of strangling 16 women in a five-year career along the highways and byways. Officials offered a reward of 7,000 marks $1,668 for his capture were posted throughout the country today. They bear a drawing of him made from description supplied by eye-witnesses to some crimes.

Test Flight Completed

STOCKHOLM (CP)—The second airliner to make a test flight from Los Angeles across the polar dome of the world to Scandinavia landed at Stockholm's Bromma Airport.

The plane, a new Douglas DC-6B named the Hjalmar Viking, took off from Los Angeles Friday morning. It stopped at Edmonton, Thule in Greenland and Reykjavik making the final hop to Stockholm, arriving late Saturday.

The Hjalmar Viking, of the Scandinavian Airline System, carried a double crew but no passengers.

Oldest Policy Is Surrendered By Centenarian

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Insurance turned out to be a good investment for Willis Johnson, but he surrendered his policy just the same — to celebrate his 100th. birthday.

Northwestern Mutual Life representatives gave him a cheque for $1,000, face value of the policy, plus $4.10 for his final dividend payment.

They said that Johnson had received $2.49 more in dividends than he paid out in premiums since the policy was issued January 18, 1878.

In addition, said the company, Johnson had had 75 years of free coverage on policy in addition to collecting its face. He had paid $550.80 in premiums and collected $561.29 in dividends.

The policy was considered the oldest policy in force in the United States, Northwestern officials said.
